MINE VICTIMS SAVED AFTER 10 DAYS

Tax Bill Held Below Needs; 2d Levy Due Next Session

Majority Report Hints $517,000,000 Can't Be Raised.

Shortage Placed At $300,000,000

'More Intelligent' Action by New Congress Is Predicted.

By Robert C. Albright.

On the eve of House consideration of precedent-breaking corporate tax proposals, Congress yesterday was faced with the disconcerting prospect of another tax bill next session to make up an estimated shortage of more than $300,000,000 in revenues over the next three-year period.

Conceding that the proposed tax reform will not meet the President's demand for $517,000,000 in temporary taxes, Ways and Means Committee Democrats threw out a strong hint that additional taxes may be sought when Congress returns after the November elections.

After outlining the new corporate tax objectives, estimated to yield an "average" of $620,000,000 for the next nine years, the committee report to the House said the new tax bill will produce only about $173,000,000 additional to other items included in the measure. The President had asked $517,000,000 additional for the next three years.

Docket Cleared.

"Your committee is of the opinion that, if additional revenue is provided which will bring in $173,000,000 during the fiscal year 1937, this will take care of the President's request until the next session of Congress, which can then act more intelligently in the light of the conditions then existing," read the report.

The majority report was received as House leaders cleared dockets for debate on the Administration's proposed tax reform at noon today. Expediting action, in a new adjournment rush, the Senate Finance Committee slated an executive session for 10 o'clock this morning. Tax experts will be summoned before the Senate group to explain the intricate provisions of the House draft. Actual hearings probably will not get underway in the Senate until next week.

Operating under a 16-hour debate limitation, the House planned to meet on the bill today and tomorrow, and probably conclude consideration of the bill Wednesday or Thursday of next week. Chairman Samuel B. Hill, of the Special House Tax Committee, and Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, are expected to explain detailed working of the measure to the House today.

Hopes Outlined.

Although the majority report filed with the House yesterday failed to give a breakdown of revenue estimates, Democrats claimed privately that it would produce a total first year's yield of $814,000,000. They conceded, however, that this made no allowance for the probable last-quarter "lag" in divi-

"The BIG National Issue"

THAT IS what the relief problem is being called today . . . "The BIG National Issue."

WHAT DO the voters of the country, who will go to the polls next fall in what may be the hottest National election in years, think?

DO THEY believe that politics plays a large part in the expenditure and allocation of relief funds?

DO THEY believe that it is time for relief administration to be turned back to State and local governments?

WHAT DO reliefers, themselves, say? Democrats? Republicans? Socialists? Farmers? Women? New voters? For the answers, see

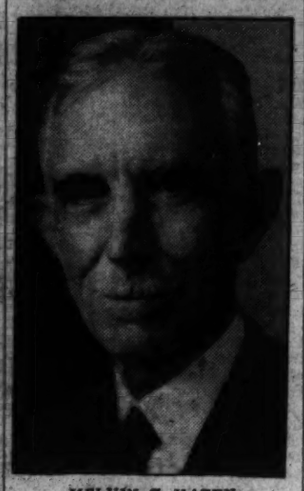
New Law to Ban Auto Horns From 11 to 7, on Jail Penalty

Present Rules Violated Widely, Van Duzer Declares.



MELVIN C. HAZEN.

Sounding of automobile horns, for any reason whatever, between 11 p. m. and 7 a. m. would be prohibited under a traffic regulation approved at a meeting of the special District anti-noise campaign committee yesterday in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, father of the anti-noise drive.

The regulation will be approved by the Commissioners in the next few days and will become effective July 1, Hazen said. Infractions would be punishable by general penalty provisions of the traffic law. These permit police court judges to impose 10-day jail terms or fines not to exceed $300, or a jail term of a year on failure to pay a fine.

The regulation was proposed by William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic and chairman of the anti-noise committee, because the present law is being violated. Sounding of horns now is forbidden except as a "reasonable warning."

"It is being constantly violated," Van Duzer said. "Many drivers when approaching intersections sound their horn instead of slowing down. Many drivers when passing parked cars sound their horns and pass these cars at a high rate of speed instead of slowing down.

"Many drivers, especially at night, passing through residential streets, sound their horns for no reason whatever except perhaps to clear the right of way. Many drivers use their horns to notify friends that they are waiting, instead of parking and using the door bell."

Only fire and police vehicles, ambulances and other vehicles responding to emergency calls would be excepted from the ban.

Efforts are to be made to reduce the noise made by street cars, buses, trucks, milk wagons and horses, radios, and the rattling of loose manhole covers.

A special sub-committee will ask

Townsendite Paid $57,000 By Magazine

Clements Tells Inquiry He Did Not Invest in Periodical.

Founder of OARP Is Subpenaed; to Be Heard May 5.

By Felix Bruner.

Robert E. Clements, co-founder of the Townsend old age pension movement, told a House committee yesterday that last year he received $57,500 from the Townsend Weekly, organ of the pension group, without ever having invested one cent in the paper. The amount was in addition to any salary and expenses received by Clements, the details of which the committee has not yet revealed.

Clements also described a meeting between himself and the late Senator Huey P. Long and testified that, after Long's death, the Senator's secretary, Earle J. Christenberry, went to work for the pension organization at a salary of $150 a week. Clements denied that he and Long had discussed joining forces. Christenberry later left the Townsend group to become secretary to Mrs. Long, who succeeded her husband.

The co-founder of Old Age Revolving Pensions, Inc., official name of the movement, who testified at the beginning of the hearings several weeks ago, was recalled to tell of his break with Dr. F. E. Townsend and of the organization of the weekly. Clements resigned as secretary-treasurer of O. A. R. P. on April 1.

The committee expected to continue examination of Clements today and it will hear Townsend on May 5. A subpena was served on the doctor at the Lafayette Hotel yesterday.

Reveals Stock Set-up.

Clements testified that the Prosperity Publishing Co., publishers of the Weekly, was organized in September, 1934, and that the paper began publishing in March, 1935. He said ten shares of stock were issued to Townsend, nine shares to himself and one share to Frank G. Tyrell, of California, who was brought in because the law required three incorporators. Tyrell immediately indorsed the share to Clements, the witness testified.

Clements said none of the incorporators put any money into the organization. It was financed from the start by money sent in by members of Townsend clubs for subscriptions. Despite the fact the paper did not begin publishing until March, and that it started without assets or working capital, it declared a dividend of $15,000 before the end of the year, Clements said. The money was divided equally between himself and Townsend.

Paper Worth $250,000.

When Clements broke with Townsend in March, he sold his stock to the doctor. At that time, he said, the publishing company declared a dividend of $50,000, half to Clements and half to Townsend. The latter then turned over his half of the dividend to Clements in return for Clements' stock, the testimony showed.

Nine shares of the Clements stock, the witness testified, were turned over to the O. A. R. P. This did not mean, he said, that any of the equity in the publication went to the Townsend clubs, but that it was owned outright by the nine individuals who are the sole owners of O. A. R. P. and who control all its assets as well as those of the publishing company. Questioning brought out that the O. A. R. P. could be dissolved at any time and the assets, including contributions

Both Buried Men Rushed to Hospital

'Thank You, Boys,' Says Physician to Miners at the Surface.

Moose River, Nova Scotia (Thursday), April 23.—The bitter 10-day underground battle of men against nature for the lives of Dr. E. Robertson and C. Alfred Scadding ended in victory today when the shattered explorers of the old Moose River gold mine were rescued.

The men were carried to the surface afterbein g entombed by a cave-in since Easter Sunday—an underground imprisonment of 242 hours.

They were placed on stretchers and rushed to an emergency hospital.

Soldiers went to the shaft to bring out the body of Herman R. Magill, who died in the underground prison Sunday.

Crowd Hysterical.

The large crowd at the pithead which has waited anxiously since Sunday for rescue of the men yelled hysterically when Dr. Robertson, wealthy co-owner of the mine, was carried out of the rescue shaft at 12:44 a. m., Eastern standard time.

He tried to smile and wanted to stand, but the effort was too much for him. He had to lie down on a strecther.

Mrs. Robertson rushed to him, crying for joy.

Scadding, who apparently was in the worse physical shape of the two, was brought up at 12:54.

He also was placed on a stretcher.

Inquest at Halifax.

Magill's body was taken to Halifax, where an inquest will be held.

"Thank you, boy," was all Dr. Robertson said as he was placed on the stretcher and carried to the ambulance to be taken to the hospital.

Robertson and Scadding were carried out by the rescue workers from the Stellarton mine who have been taking an active part in the heroic digging.

Robertson's arm was in a sling.

Scadding's feet were infected. Both men were weak from hunger and ill from exposure.

Both had heavy beards. Their clothes were torn, wet and filthy.

Leader in 1932 May Again Conduct Republicans' Nomination Session.

By Franklyn Waltman.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 22.—House Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, will be the permanent chairman of the Republican national convention when it meets here June 9.

His selection was assured today when the committee on arrangements for the convention completed a two-day session by voting to recommend his election to the committee on permanent organization of the convention.

Mr. Snell, who was permanent chairman at the 1932 convention, was backed by the Republican Congressional committee. He is the ranking Republican in Congress and should his party capture control of the House this fall he would become the next Speaker of that body.

The committee on arrangements yesterday nominated Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, to be the temporary chairman of the convention and in that role he will make the party's keynote speech.

Officers Named.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, as well as chairman of the arrangements group, announced that the following also would be recommend as officers of the convention:

John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, former House Republican leader, as parliamentarian.

Lehr Fess, son of former Senator Simeon Fess, of Ohio, as assistant parliamentarian.

Maj. Robert E. O'Connor, prominent legionnaire and former superintendent of the department of public safety of West Virginia, as sergeant at arms.

George Kinsley, of Ohio, second assistant sergeant at arms. Lee Nixon, assistant sergeant at arms in charge of the press section.

Karpis, 6 Others Indicted in St. Paul

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, April 22 (AP).—Climaxing two days of testimony by a dozen witnesses, a special Federal grand jury late today indicted seven persons, among them Alwin Karpis, on charges of participation in the $100,000 kidnaping of William Hamm, jr., brewing company head, June 15, 1933.

Those indicted, in addition to Karpis, the only one of the group still at large, are Charles ("Big Fitz") Fitzgerald, 60, former convict who is accused of shaking Hamm's hand as he was forced into an automobile a block from his brewery; John ("Jack") Peifer, St. Paul night club operator and gambler; Edmund C. Bartholmey, former postmaster at Bensenville, Ill., whose home was pointed out by Hamm as the "hideout" where he was held prisoner for four days; Byron Bolton, who pleaded guilty and awaits sentence as one of the kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul bank president, and Arthur ("Doc") Barker and Elmer Farmer, one-time tavern keeper at Bensenville, Ill., both jailed in the Bremer case.

Hopkins Plans $1,560,000,000 WPA Spending

Submits Figures to House Group; PWA and RA Funds Left Out.

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, already has plans for spending all of the proposed $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation—and $60,000,000 more. He gave the House Appropriations Committee a breakdown of his proposed expenditures, leaving nothing for the Resettlement Administration, the Public Works Administration, or any other relief organization, it was learned yesterday.

The list of proposed expenditures, totaling $1,560,000,000, was given by Hopkins as follows:

Public buildings, $175,000,000.

Trees and parks, $175,000,000.

Sewers and waterworks, $175,000,000.

Sanitation and drainage, $45,000,000.

Airports, airways and publicly owned transit companies, $45,000,000.

Miscellaneous construction, $80,000,000.

Water conservation, $105,000,000.

Educational, $90,000,000.

Woman's program, $90,000,000.

National Youth Administration, $75,000,000.

Youth Administration Increased.

These figures show increases in some instances over previous expenditures for specific purposes and decreases for other purposes. A notable example is the Youth Administration, for which only $47,000,000 has been allotted in the past. This would indicate that more attention is to be given to youth activities, in spite of the general inability of the administration to carry out its previous plans in this direction, especially in giving work to young people.

S. C. House Asks Mental Test For Boy Attacking Mill in Verse

By the Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., April 22.—A college boy's attempt at depicting the seamy side of life in a cotton mill village stirred up a storm of protest today in the South Carolina House, which promptly adopted a resolution directing a psychiatrist's examination of the young author.

Published in the Wofford College Journal, the literary effort in free verse in an imitation of Carl Sandberg's style referred to ignorant, diseased and dirty mill hands misled at their meetings by "mealy-moutbed hypocrites" and told a mill worker:

"You died on your sixteenth birthday when you went to work in the cotton mill."

It was written by Peter Moody, a sophomore at Wofford, from Cooleemee, N. C., a textile center, and a one-time "mill hand" himself.

Representative Ponder, of Spartanburg, where Wofford is situated, read it to the House and introduced a resolution requesting Dr. C. Fred Williams, superintendent of the State Hospital, to send a psychiatrist to examine the writer. The resolution was adopted without a record vote.

Apprised of the House's action, Dr. H. N. Snyder, president of Wofford, disclosed that he and Moody previously had written apologetic letters to the Spartanburg Central Labor Union.

Dr. Snyder said that he was "very much grieved" it had been published, but that Moody was a "fine man" who had meant no slur upon any class of workers.

Moody said his effort much to his regret, had been misinterpreted and "the literary side forgotten." He added he knew mill employes as a class were "hard working and intelligent."

Dr. Williams said tonight he was "going to comply with the House request as expeditiously as possible." Some individual Representatives, however, expressed the opinion that the resolution would be recalled.

Reading of the verse brought an indignant outburst in the House from representatives of textile manufacturing counties.

Representative Godfrey, of Spartanburg, asserted the writer "ought to be deported.

In adopting the resolution, the House overrode the counsel of two representatives from agricultural counties, Winter, of Berkeley, and Mellette, of Clarendon, who argued it was not in keeping with the chamber's dignity.

D. A. R. Praises Dyer's Defense Of Constitution

Educator, in Talk, Attacks New Deal; Radical Pacifists Assailed.

America's "horse and buggy Constitution" was vigorously defended and the Administration's work-relief policy that "is turning Washington into the greatest almshouse in the world" was sharply attacked by Dr. Gus W. Dyer, of Vanderbilt University, in an address at yesterday's "national defense" session of the forty-fifth congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The 2,000 Daughters assembled in Constitution Hall interrupted frequently to applaud his interpretation of American Revolutionists as "pre-eminently conservative" and to laugh at his likening the Socialist to "an oyster—more dead than alive."

With equal enthusiasm the Daughters applauded expositions of the national defense policy by Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, and Brig. Gen. Harry E. Knight, assistant chief of staff; and a slashing attack on "so-called Democrats and Republicans in Congress who would seem to be Socialists or Communists" by Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, chairman of the committee of national defense through patriotic education.

Radical Pacifists Hit.

Lashing out at radical pacifists and "would-be amenders" of the Constitution, Mrs. Sisson singled out the Nye-Kvale bill to withhold Government appropriations to schools requiring military training, the Frazier amendment to outlaw war, and the proposed amendment of Representative Vito Marcantonio for Government control of natural resources, and accused the sponsors of these acts of "boring from within" tactics.

Informed of Mrs. Sisson's description of him as one of those "masquerading under the protecting cloak of one of the major parties," Representative Marcantonio, retorted with the suggestion that the D. A. R. women "go back to their knitting."

The "national defense" speeches were delivered at the afternoon session of the Congress after a morning devoted to organization matters. An attempt to amend the by-laws to permit the transfer of part of the D. A. R. bank funds, which at times amount to more than $250,000, from the National Metropolitan Bank in this city to either the Guaranty Trust Co. or Chemical National Bank, both in New York City, was defeated when the resolution failed to obtain a two-thirds majority.

The proposed change in the by-

Flu, Scarlet Fever Quarantine Prison

Vandalia, Ill., April 22 (AP).—Twin epidemics of scarlet fever and influenza brought complete isolation of the Illinois State Penal Farm near here tonight.

All work of the prison farm, one of the model institutions of its kind, was halted, outgoing mail was stopped and other precautionary measures were being taken as health officers, led by District Health Superintendent Dr. C. E. Vaughan, ordered a quarantine to prevent the two diseases from spreading.

Of the total 605 farm population, 30 were ill of scarlet fever and 75 of influenza. Several guards also had contracted scarlet fever and their homes were quarantined.

At Springfield, the State capital, Public Health Director A. L. Bowen asserted the situation was "not very serious." He said usual procedures were being followed by the prison officials in the attempt to control the epidemics.

District Budget Bill May Reach Senate Floor Some Time Today

Thomas to Ask 50 More Policemen, Parkometers; Byrnes Loses Fight to Slash Appropriations to First Estimate.

By James D. Secrest.

Six legislative amendments, including an authorization for the District Commissioners to install pay parking meters on downtown streets, will be offered to the $43,860,120 District appropriations bill when it is called up in the Senate today or tomorrow by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma.

The bill, increasing the House measure by $1,286,837, was reported to the Senate yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee after it had sustained its sub-committee recommendations. Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, made an unsuccessful motion to cut the bill to Budget Bureau recommendations, but his vote was the only one cast for it.

The parking meter rider, which has been adopted by a few Midwestern cities, is designed to discourage overtime parking. It is likely to encounter opposition, however, and may be ruled out by a point of order as legislation.

Also aimed at better traffic control is a provision allowing funds for 50 additional police privates. This represents a compromise between the request of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, for slightly more than 100 new policemen and the refusal of the Budget Bureau and the House to grant any.

Public health and hospital maintenance items were restored to budget figures, but no increases were allowed despite pleas from social welfare spokesmen. The restorations, however, represent substantial gains over the House appropriations.

Britain to Warn Hitler Against Expansion Plan

Eden Drafts Questionnaire Declaring Opposition to Eastern Europe Move.

By the United Press.

London, April 22.—Blunt intimation that Great Britain will oppose German expansion in Eastern Europe was expected tonight to feature an important questionnaire which the foreign office, under Anthony Eden's personal supervision, is now completing for presentation to Chancellor Adolf Hitler within a few days.

In return for the Franco-Belgian agreement to extend the Maginot line of fortifications through Belgium, Britain is understood to have pledged complete co-operation of her armed forces to defend Belgium in case of unprovoked German attack.

In addition to reporting unfavorable Italo-Ethiopian developments at Geneva, Eden is understood to have submitted his ideas on the questionnaire to Germany at today's cabinet meeting.

Meanwhile, British authorities denied the story published by the Berlin correspondent of the Amsterdam Telegram suggesting that Eden will visit Berlin shortly to discuss questions to be raised in the forthcoming British note.

There is a possibility that the lord privy seal, Lord Halifax, may be sent to Berlin, but it is believed more probable that the British memorandum will be delivered through Sir Eric Phipps, British Ambassador to Germany.

The hint that Britain will not countenance a German push to the east was seen in announcement that Eden's questionnaire will ask Germany to clarify her intentions regarding creation of a satisfactory system for eastern Europe.

It is believed British concern on this point is intended to discourage Nazi extremists who reportedly are contemplating action against Austria, Czechoslovakia and ultimately against the Soviet Ukraine.

Eden's impending note probably will seek re-affirmation of Germany's earlier readiness to join an eastern European security system regardless of mutual aid arrangements which other powers concerned may consummate.

Ethiopia Blasts Roads to Capital To Stop Italians

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, April 22.—Under cover of rain and mist, their only protection against Italian bombing airplanes, thousands of Ethiopian warriors today dynamited the Imperial highway from Dessye over which Marshal Pietro Badoglio's legions are advancing to storm Addis Ababa.

While they struggled to make the highway impassable for the Italians, other warriors fought desperately against attacking columns between the 12,000-foot Tarma Burrh pass and Shula Meda, last outpost on the Dessye road.

News of the fighting and the effort to destroy the road was brought to Addis Ababa by Crown Prince Asfa Wosan, whose troops are fighting with Emperor Haile Selassie's imperial bodyguard.

Similarly desperate fighting raged on the southern front, where the concentrations under the Dedjazmach Nasibu are making a last stand to keep Gen. Rodolpho Graziani from capturing Harar and Jijiga and thus commanding the Djibouti, Addis Ababa Railroad.

Diverted streams tonight were cascading over the all-important Dessye wood. The Ethiopians dynamited the torrents from their usual channels in hope of bogging Italian caissons.

Cold Will Continue Today, Says Bureau

Washington can go right on shivering, as far as the Weather Bureau is concerned, though spring already is more than a month old.

Government forecasters said last night that skies today would continue cloudy and temperatures low with a minimum of about 35 to be reached before dawn. The day's high is scheduled to be about 50.

The highest temperature yesterday was 51 at 1:30 p. m., 35 degrees below the all-season high of 86 registered Tuesday. Yesterday's lowest temperature of 38 was registered at 7:30 a. m.

Utilities Lose Fight on Note By Roosevelt

Efforts to Disclose Letter on Power Plan Denied by Judge Wheat.

By the United Press.

A letter from President Roosevelt, which he initialed "F. D. R." in lead pencil and sent to Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes almost two years ago, yesterday became the focal point of utility attacks against the New Deal's $200,000,000 municipal power program.

The private companies, with the Government fighting every step, sought to force publication of the Chief Executive's note as part of their District Supreme Court request to have that part of the Administration's work-relief program declared unconstitutional.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat ruled against them, however, on their first attempt to force Federal attorneys to turn over the letter with other items—a vital victory for the Government in defending its right to lend and grant money to municipalities for publicly owned power plants.

The justice's ruling was significant. It limited the utilities' case as presented to two former high Federal officials, to validity of the Congressional act creating the Public Works Administration.

Competition Hit.

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, and Dean Acheson, resigned Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, charged that four private utilities "face unfair and illegal competition" from PWA allocations to ten municipalities they serve.

The firms are the Alabama Power Co., the Iowa City (Iowa) Light & Power Co., the Oklahoma Utilities Co. and the Texas Utilities Co. They banded together under the Edison Institute for action.

Baker and Acheson started a four-hour legal fight when they called upon Alexander Holtzoff, Assistant Attorney General, and Jerome Frank, PWA attorney, to produce the President's letter.

They also asked for a letter Ickes wrote Mr. Roosevelt on September 8, 1934, asking his decision on what policy PWA should follow in its non-Federal power program. The President's note was dated September 10, 1934, from Hyde Park, N. Y.

Charge Rate Threat.

Baker and Acheson were seeking to establish that the New Deal, at Mr. Roosevelt's direction, planned to use $200,000,000 to force down private utility rates. The Government's strategy, they claimed, was to threaten to finance municipal power systems where they considered private bills too high.

"The President's letter is not admissable evidence," Frank declared. "Neither is Ickes." They are inter-Administration correspondence that should not be made public."

Acheson retorted with the statement that "the Roosevelt-Ickes exchange will show that this is no hit-or-miss program; it really is a general, co-ordinated move to lower utility rates and injure private companies."

Wheat then ruled that "whether or not anybody got a raw deal out of the program has no bearing here. What I'm concerned with is constitutionality of the statute setting up PWA."

The heated controversy came after George H. Carter, Marlin, Tex., testified the PWA electrical power board of review forced the Texas Utilties Co. to reduce its rate 15 per cent in Marlin and Plainview. Otherwise, he said, PWA planned to finance municipal systems in the two cities.

Baker and Acheson then sought publication of Mr. Roosevelt's letter to prove that the New Deal's whole power program was aimed at decreasing rates of other companies in the same manner.

Townsendite

of the Townsend clubs, could be divided among the members of the board.

The board, described by committee members as "sole owners" of the Townsend organization and of the weekly, consists of Dr. Townsend, Gomer Smith, Oklahoma City; Gilmore Young, San Francisco; Dr. Clinton Wunder, Girard, Calif.; Joseph Kiefer, Chicago; Dr. A. J. Wright, Cleveland; Nathan Roberts, Jacksonville, Fla.; Frank A. Arbuckle, Santa Monica, Calif., and Baxter Rankin, Washington.

Clements estimated the value of the Townsend Weekly at $250,000.

The board was organized after Clements' resignation, before which he and Townsend were in sole control. Clements said he broke with Townsend because the doctor had not agreed with him that the responsibility should be centered in one or two persons.

"The doctor felt I was exercising control over the personnel," he said.

He said he had control of the organization while Townsend was out advancing the cause. He said he also disagreed with Townsend's repeated announcements that he planned a third party, believing it would be more effective to work with all parties.

Clements said his meeting with Long was arranged by a Mrs. Swanson, whom he described as a newspaper correspondent. He said he wanted to meet Long "because he was a colorful figure."

Pair Did Not Agree.

"The Senator did not seem to agree with the Townsend Plan any more than I agreed wtih his Share-the-Wealth Plan, he said. There never was any conversation about joining forces."

Later, Clements said, Mrs. Swanson was given expense money "of $800 to $1,000" for work she did in connection with the pension movement.

Christenberry, he said, assisted in conducting the Townsend convention in Chicago last summer. He said Christenberry's expenses were paid at that time and that later he was put on the pay roll at $150 per week.

Fight for Republican Keynoter Proves Just a Tame Affair in Cleveland Preliminaries.

By Franklyn Waltman

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 22.—The much-heralded fight over the selection of a Republican keynoter at the meeting here of the committee on arrangements for the Republican Convention did not materialize.

WALTMAN

It did not materialize because the post is not worth fighting over and because most of those attending the two-day session feel Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas has the Republican nomination in the bag and see nothing to be gained by fighting.

All this talk about the selection of Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, as temporary chairman and keynoter for the convention being a set-back for Gov. Landon is just eye-wash. By some sort of legerdemain the fact that C. Wayland Brooks, of Illinois, was not selected keynoter is construed as a Landon defeat.

* * * *

In the first place, Mr. Brooks, a most estimable young man, just named by the Republicans as their nominee in the Illinois Governorship, is not a Landon supporter—he is pledged to Col. Frank Knox. Secondly, his name was first projected as a possible keynoter by neither the Knox nor the Landon camps, but by a Republican National Committeeman, who has not taken sides in the sparring for the Presidential nomination.

This committeeman believed that Mr. Brooks would make a good keynoter. Perhaps he was inspired by the Knox people. But anyway when he made the suggestion to Republican National Committee Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, the latter asked the Knox group if it was satisfactory to them and they replied it was.

Mr. Fletcher then sounded out John Hamilton, the Landon manager. He had no candidate of his own for keynoter and replied that Brooks would be most acceptable. Then last Sunday the story leaked out and was given the not quite accurate slant that the Landon camp was seeking to put Brooks over.

Actually the Landon camp seemed to be in a position in which it could not lose. If Mr. Brooks were nominated, they could claim credit for it. If he were not nominated, it was not their baby, but a Knox man defeated. The only slip was that too much emphasis was placed on the Landon support of Brooks and when the movement fell through, some political writers jumped to the conclusion that Gov. Landon's prospects had been given a set-back.

Through the intercession of Oregon's Republican national committeeman, Ralph E. Williams, the Steiwer selection virtually was in the bag a week ago. Young John Hamilton knew that and he also knew when the committee on arrangements met here yesterday that Senator Steiwer would be selected. He is too smart to put his neck out. He announced in advance that the Steiwer selection was all right with him.

In order to write down Senator Steiwer's selection as a great victory for the Republican Old Guard in a move to "stop Landon," it is necessary to contend that Senator William E. Borah and the Hilles-Rorabach "Old Guard" have formed a combination that on its face is ridiculous.

Incidentally, two weeks ago stories were being written that the progressive Republicans were out to "stop Landon" because he was the candidate of the "Old Guard" and the favorite of "The interests." Now it is being contended that the "Old Guard" is seeking to "stop Landon."

Anyway, instead of the meeting of the committee on arrangements developing into a colorful, hot fight, it has been just a dull affair for two days, giving those attending severe headaches. For hours they have heard complaints about inadequate hotel accommodations and inadequate seating accommodations, and have sought to remedy these situations.

The only bright spot each day has come promptly at 11:45 a. m., when there was rolled into the exclusive Van Sweringen Terminal Club a heavily laden portable bar, followed a few minutes later by a troop of waiters carrying delicacies for luncheon.

One reason why the convention housing problem is so difficult is that every newspaper correspondent—and there will be more than 800 of them—wants to stay at the hotel in the smoke-filled room in which the nomination may be made, should a deadlock occur. All Cleveland's hotels, however, boast of their fine ventilation.

* * *

Speaking of the newspaper correspondents, their hotel accommodations may cause them headaches, but they will be surprised by the excellence of the layout for work rooms in the basement of the Convention Hall, arranged by Paul J. McGahan, secretary of the standing committee of correspondents. There has not been anything like it at previous conventions.

Roughly, here is the convention layout: Convention committee meetings will be held in the City Auditorium, where the convention will meet; the Republican National Committee will be housed at the Hollenden Hotel and will hold its meetings in a suite of offices in the Terminal Building; The Frank Knox headquarters will be in the Cleveland Hotel; that of Gov. Landon at the Hollenden; of Senator Arthur Vandenberg and Gov. Harry Nice of Maryland at the Statler, and Senator Borah's headquarters probably will be at the Hollenden.

No reservations have yet been made for a Herbert Hoover headquarters, and it is not believed he will attend the convention. But the Hooverites will find a place to meet—and the former President certainly will be in close touch with what is happening.

Snell Chosen by G. O. P.

Gleason, of New York, was selected as permanent secretary of the convention.

Chairman Fletcher announced that the arrangements committee would not meet again until probably June 2 to straighten out any loose ends. He said it had been tentatively decided that the full Republican National Committee would meet here June 3 to pass on the delegate rolls and to hear any contests over delegates' seats that may be filed. The national committee reports in that respect to the credentials committee as soon as the latter is appointed.

Fletcher pointed out that in the hearing of contests between rival delegations John Hamilton, the national committee's general counsel, would not participate in that role. The committee's legal adviser on such matters will be Arthur Curtis, national committeeman from Missouri, and now assistant to the chairman. Hamilton also is the Landon campaign manager.

The arrangements committee spent another day trying to untangle the complications which have arisen over housing delegates and newspaper correspondents and in devising a formula for the distribution of guest seats. It decided to use permanently stationed microphones, one to each delegation, for the radio pickup from the floor.

These details kept the national committeemen comprising the arrangements group busy throughout the day. Few would discuss the possibilities of Presidential candidates.

Ezra B. Whitla, committeeman from Idaho, however, predicted that Senator William E. Borah would have at least 230 votes on the first ballot. He declined to specify where this number would come from, but intimated that the Idahoan has strength in some of the Eastern delegations which have not been instructed, including New York.

During the meeting, James Davidson, Michigan's Republican National committeeman, stopped off in Cleveland for a few hours to call on his colleagues. He said that Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's name would be put before the convention for the Presidential nomination and that he would receive Michigan's full vote on the first ballot, at least.

As far as could be learned here, Snell has not committed himself to any of the Presidential candidates. He has been selected as one of the New York delegates, who are uninstructed. No other persons were considered for the permanent chairmanship.

Steiwer Invitation.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Frederick C. Steiwer, of Oregon, chosen to sound the Republican keynote at Cleveland, threw open his office door yesterday to all candidates for the Republican Presidential nomination.

"Before writing my speech, I'll be glad to confer with any of them, but I'm going to send out individual invitations," said Oregon's junior Senator, a wheat farmer, who has frequently criticized centralization of authority under the New Deal, but has supported such Roosevelt policies as NRA and AAA.

Adding that in preparing the message the advice of "old-time Senators" would be sought, Steiwer, who has compared the Roosevelt Administration to the Tammany government of New York City, said "the keynote will not be calculated to help or hinder the chances of any candidate—they can all depend on that."

Senate Refuses To Cut Budget Of Hoover Unit

Passes $225,000 Disputed Item for 175 More Men to Battle Crime.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate gave J. Edgar Hoover's Federal agents an enthusiastic, if figurative, cheer yesterday and refused to lop from their appropriation a $225,000 item for more men and arms to battle the underworld.

Commendation for the crime fighters came from both sides of the chamber after Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, in charge of the four department supply bills, sought approval of an amendment to place the Bureau of Investigation appropriation at $5,800,000 instead of the $6,025,000 voted by the House.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, jumped up in opposition to the slash and later found Majority Leader Robinson, Senators George (Democrat), of Georgia; Duffy (Democrat), of Wisconsin; Hale (Republican), of Maine, and others saluting the accomplishments of the Federal detectives.

Chorus of "Noes."

McKellar and a few others voted for the cut, but a loud chorus of "noes" made the outcome of the vote indisputable. The Tennesseean contended that the reduction was in line with the recommendation of the Budget Bureau and that the committee appropriation was "exceedingly liberal."

"The chief of the one law enforcement agency that has more confidence than any other in the world wants 175 more men," said Vandenberg. "The people of the Nation want the G-men to have every facility there is in their battle with major crime."

He said he would be willing to see 175 men less on "the 18,255 staff of Tugwell's Resettlement Administration; Hopkins' staff of 243,641 at the WPA, the staff of 19,548 at the HOLC or the staff of 2,422 at the outlawed NRA or some place else in the present expanded and garguantuan political monstrosity."

He said it was "peculiar and queer" to economize with the Hoover bureau.

Robinson spoke of the campaign against kidnaping, saying it was made "with promptness and diligence," and adding:

"It was an irresistible drive. I doubt if anything has ever been done so splendidly."

Karpis Reward Offered.

At the same time, Alvin Karpis, fugitive in the American underworld, was becoming a $5,000 quarry for policemen, gangland informers and the crime-conscious public.

Harry Campbell, who has limped along beside the "public enemy No. 1" in his two-year flight from Justice Department agents, became worth $2,500 to anyone with information leading to his arrest.

Attorney General Cummings, announcing rewards for information leading to the arrest of these men, said:

"We prefer to take all these people alive. That's always been our purpose, and all statements to the contrary are false."

The Attorney General's reward offer was announced in special "wanted" notices for posting in every city, village and hamlet in the country. J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, said he plans to send out 350,000 of the notices before the end of the week.

John Dillinger, last top-ranking public enemy, and his quick-triggered lieutenant, "Baby Face" Nelson, both were killed within three months after rewards were offered on June 23, 1934, for their capture.

Descriptions Given.

Karpis and Campbell are the first "public enemies" to be rated worth reward money by the Federal Government since Nelson's death. The rewards are offered from a $25,000 fund set up by Congress in 1934.

Federal agents and employes of the Justice Department are barred from receiving any part of the reward, Hoover said.

"Age, appears to be 25 or 26 years; height, 5 feet 9¾ inches; weight, 135 pounds; build, slender; hair, brown; eyes, blue-gray; complexion, fair; marks, 1-inch cut scar lower knuckle left index finger."

Campbell's description:

"Age, 36 years; born January 1, 1900, at McClintocville, Pa.; height, 5 feet 5 inches; weight, 135 to 140 pounds; build, medium; hair, brown; eyes, blue; complexion, ruddy-medium; marks, scar corner left eye, vaccination scar upper left arm, lame in right leg; teeth, decayed."

2 Baptist Groups Plan Joint Session

St. Louis, April 22 (AP).—For the second time since 1845, Northern and Southern Baptists will hold a joint meeting here May 18 and 19. But leaders say no attempt at organic union will be made.

When they met jointly in Washington in 1933 it was the first time the two groups chose the same city at the same time since the denomination split over the slavery issue before the Civil War.

Dr. Oscar Johnson, pastor of Third Baptist Church here and former head of the Northern Baptist Convention, said the purpose of the joint meeting was "simply fellowship and a better understanding of the historic Baptist principle for today."

Dr. Johnson predicted 15,000 delegates would assemble at the joint meeting, which comes between the close of the annual meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention, May 12 to 18, and the opening of the Northern body's meeting, May 20.

Miner Hero Aids In Rescue Tests

By the Associated Press.

Moose River, April 22.—A sturdy miner who had risked his life with companions to save Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding was called upon again tonight to aid the safe removal of the two by acting as a dummy in experiments being carried out at the surface for lifting the pair clear of a barrier of crib work.

Minister of Health F. R. Davis, who had descended the Reynolds shaft to a point where he could see the barrier between the men and the tunnel up which they would be carried to the daylight they have not seen in 10 days, had the man bandaged and strapped to a stretcher as Dr. Robertson and Scadding will be.

Explaining the difficulties to his assistants, Dr. Davis was seeking the most advantageous method of easing the two men through the winding rescue tunnel before the long climb up the abandoned shaft.

Minnesota Mines Open, Iron Booms

Hibbing, Minn., April 22 (AP).—The iron mining industry—one of Minnesota's largest—is shaking off a lethargy of several years duration, a score of authorities agreed today.

At least ten mines, one of which operated last year and including one not worked since 1920, are resuming production or will shortly, a survey disclosed.

Hundreds of workers unemployed over long periods will be returned to jobs.

Skillings' Mining Review, authority on Minnesota iron mining, estimated 38,000,000 tons of ore would be shipped out of Duluth Harbor in meet increased demand this year, as compared with 28,362,368 tons last year.

Delaware Vote For Delegates Favors Landon

Gov. Buck Hopes Kansan Will Be Nominated on First Ballot.

By the Associated Press.

Dover, Del., April 22.—The Delaware Republican State Convention today elected nine uninstructed national delegates, who are understood to favor Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for the Presidential nomination.

The delegation is headed by Gov. C. Douglass Buck, national committeeman, who was a recent visitor to the home of Gov. Landon, and who has expressed the hope that the Kansas Governor would be nominated on the first ballot.

The convention was a harmonious one. The other eight delegates are United States Senators Daniel O. Hastings and John G. Townsend; Representative J. George Stewart, Mrs. Frank G. Tallman, national committeewoman; Col. Edmund Mitchell, State chairman; J. Henry Hazel, State auditor; Henry B. du Pont and I. Dolphus Short.

A platform which was adopted indorsed the Republican State administration and asserted the National Republican Party offered the Nation the best medium for good government.

The platform urged the integrity of governmental promises, demanded the abolition of the "economy of scarcity," and expressed the belief that the Democratic Administration has prevented long range planning of industry and return of employment.

The "dangers" of inflation were sounded, and the principle of self-help and self-reliance was affirmed as the solution of the relief problem.

Administration Assailed.

Coercive agricultural measures were condemned. The sanctity of the Constitution and the value of checks and balance in government were stressed. Governmental competition with private industry was flayed and the Nation was called upon to repudiate the Democratic National Administration for allowing taxation and national debt to grow.

Landon Indorsed.

Missionary Group Will Elect Today

Naval Program Wins Approval Of House Unit

Proposal Calls for 54 Ships at Cost of $175,000,000 in 10-Year Period.

By the Associated Press.

The construction of 54 new naval auxiliary vessels in the next ten years at an estimated cost of $175,000,000 was approved yesterday by the House Naval Affairs Committee.

Its action on a program designed to raise auxiliary ship strength to needs of a treaty Navy came on the heels of a proposal by Admiral William H. Standley, Chief of Naval Operations, that two new battleships be built.

Admiral Standley's request for authorization to proceed with laying the keels of the battleships now is under consideration by President Roosevelt. It has not been submitted to Congress.

The 54 auxiliary vessels will have a total displacement of 221,000 tons.

The Navy Department, which has endorsed the program, favored a blanket tonnage authorization rather than authorization for specific ships on the ground that changing conditions might require revision of plans.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, assured members of the Navy high command his committee would give prompt attention to any changes needed. He contended, however, the bill could be pushed through Congress more readily if authorization for specific vessels was carried in the bill.

Vessels authorized under the Vinson auxiliary ship bill are:

Six gunboats, totaling about 12,000 tons; 15 minesweepers and seven light airplane tenders, totaling 34,400 tons; ten fleet tugs, about 13,000 tons; eight aircraft tenders, three destroyer tenders and one submarine tender, about 83,600 tons; six store, one cargo, two repair and one hospital ship, totaling 65,000 tons, and one oiler and one survey ship, totaling about 13,000 tons.

The measure provides that any bid for construction on the Pacific Coast of any of the vessels shall have a 6 per cent differential in its favor.

This section was advocated by Congressmen from California, Washington and Oregon on the grounds that Navy facilities on the West Coast are inadequate and the differential would aid in rehabilitation of Pacific Coast yards.

1937 Around the WORLD CRUISE

Again, next January 7th, this liner that has won renown on all the seven seas, will set forth around the world . . . and this time, more than ever, she will have the world's most glamorous ports to choose from. For in 1936 the Franconia inaugurated the new "Both Hemispheres" route . . . combining the best features of the cruise that once was standard, with her own discoveries in the Southern Hemisphere.

In 1937 this combination will achieve greater perfection. New ports are added to the itinerary: Zamboanga, in the Zulu archipelago . . . Chemulpo, in Korea . . . Nagasaki, in Japan. Shore excursions will be even more elaborate . . . including, once again, that trio of world wonders which only the Franconia has offered in one cruise: Victoria Falls in Africa, Mount Everest as seen from Darjeeling, and the fabulous Angkor-Wat in Siam!

A unique itinerary! But best of all is the life you will lead in the Franconia, from January through May . . . served by deft British stewards, entertained by a staff who know every 'round-the-world mood, and serenely confident in the seamanship and sound management of the two oldest travel organizations on land and sea. Reaguer's Kin Tell of Illness Before Killing Testify He Suffered Brain Clot; State's Case Is Completed.

How her father, William H. Reaguer, 57-year-old Culpeper, Va., undertaker, on trial for the "jackknife" murder last October of Willie Mae Wood, became ill back in October, 1932, and remained thereafter a changed man, "peculiar and different," was related in Justice Oscar Luhring's Criminal Court yesterday afternoon by the defendant's daughter, Mrs. Katherine Perrow.

As principal defense witness of the day, Mrs. Perrow, glancing in compassion at Reaguer, who sat hunched behind his attorneys, said that in the spring of 1932 her father went out one Saturday evening and came back a short while later, ill and perspiring.

"Mother and I put him to bed," she told the court, "and then we called the doctor. He made my father lie still for several days, and then we sent him to the University of Virginia Hospital at Charlottesville, where they found he had a blood clot on his brain.

"He came home ten days later. But after this, my father changed. He did not trust himself to attend to the business as he used to, and he needed more help. He complained constantly of headaches."

Attractive Brunette.

The witness, an attractive brunette with ruddy cheeks and a determined chin, paused and crumpled a paper drinking cup in her hands. She seemed to be speaking directly to Justice Luhring.

When Reaguer's only son, Earl, died two years ago, the change in her father became more pronounced, Mrs. Perrow testified.

"On one occasion he left his bed at night, dressed only in his nightgown, and went to the garage," recalled Mrs. Perrow. "He took the automobile and drove it up the street without the lights on.

"He brought the car back about 15 minutes later, put it in the garage, and then came upstairs. As he passed he seemed to notice no one, and to notice nothing.

"He had a terrified, wild, startled look in his eye."

Here Mrs. Perrow asked for more water.

As she talked of Reaguer's son, Earl, her brother, the broad-shouldered prisoner, who sits in the shadow of the electric chair for the murder of Mrs. Wood, only 17 days after her wedding to Herbert Wood, Virginia State highway commisison employe, buried his head in his hands and sobbed convulsively. It was the second time throughout the third day of the trial that his cool demeanor had been broken.

Were Close Companions.

Earl, the testimony revealed, and Reaguer were hunting companions and often went on trips together. Earl was learning the undertaking business, so he could step into Reaguer's shoes when Reaguer retired.

"My son—my boy," murmured Reaguer into the ears of one of his attorneys, who strove to comfort him.

Mrs. Perrow said her father, shortly before the death of Willie Mae Wood, relied a great deal on her husband, Andrew Perrow, to help him with the business.

"How much business would you do?" Justice Luhring inquired of the witness from the bench.

"Well," replied Mrs. Perrow, "it varied, like everything else does. Sometimes there would be a lot of business. Then there would be weeks with no business at all."

"How much business would you do, say, in a month?" the witness was asked.

"Well, that's hard to say about the undertaking business," replied Mrs. Perrow.

"They don't die every day, you see."

Witness Tells of Change.

First defense witness introduced by Attorney James A. O'Shea when court resumed after luncheon yesterday was Col. Carroll Menefee, of Sperryville, Va., who said he had known Reaguer for about 25 years, and had noticed a great change in him shortly before Mrs. Wood met her death in the Houston Hotel October 12.

"I saw him at a funeral in Sperryville," Col. Menefee said. "I went over to ask him if he would talk to the family of the man who was to be buried. Reaguer was directing the funeral. He leaned against a fence and held his head and told me I'd have to see his son-in-law. I never knew him to do anything like that before."

Late in the day Edwin A. Walter, 70, of Culpeper, for 20 years a member of the town council, who knew Reaguer from boyhood on, took the stand. He described the boy Reaguer, back in Rappahannock County, who loved to hunt, and who grew up, married, had three children and became a successful undertaker.

"His father sometimes made caskets back in the days when William was growing up," recollected the white-haired Walter. "He was, what we called long ago, a wheelwright."

Son-in-Law on Stand.

Final defense witness yesterday was Andrew Perrow, Reaguer's son-in-law, who also told of the defendant's apparent illness and distraught spells in the many months before the crime.

"I remember one time when we were together in the office and a little dog came in," recalled Perrow.

"The dog went to Reaguer and put his paws on his legs. Reaguer petted it sadly and said, 'Come, old boy, you know there's something wrong with master, don't you?'"

The Government completed its case just before the close of the morning session.

In his opening statement yesterday afternoon, O'Shea announced that the defense would seek acquittal on the grounds that Reaguer was an ill man; as the result of a blood clot on his brain; that he had perpetual headaches and was drinking constantly in the months before the death of Willie Mae.

"When Willie Mae Fletcher married Herbert Wood, we shall attempt to prove the defendant was glad," stated O'Shea.

"But she kept after Mr. Reaguer. She wanted money. She complained about her marriage to Wood. She worried him and the result was the tragedy of October 12, 1935."

Reaguer, who has a second married daughter, Mrs. Elise Shirey, broke for the first time during the morning session when testimony was introduced about the shotgun of his dead son, Earl.

Tears splashed on his massive hands and again and again he touched the coat sleeves of his attorneys.

Dog Laundry Functioning at Top Speed

Tugwell Daughter's 'Project' Launders Dogs If They're Nice

Big Ones and Puppies Barred as Customers; Children's Venture Launched After Intensive Advertising Campaign; 'Firm' Has 3 Partners.

Marcia Tugwell, the 12-year-old daughter of Resettlement Administrator Rexford G. Tugwell, has a project all her own.

Young Miss Tugwell and two other 12-year-olds in the neighborhood of her home, at 1731 Hoban road, yesterday went into the laundry business.

It's dogs they wash, and they guarantee their work, not only for cleanliness but as against their "patients" catching cold or having any other ill effects from their baths.

For small dogs, 30 cents; medium dogs, 35, and while big dogs have been taboo (the size of the Tugwell and other laundry tubs available exclude setters, St. Bernards and collies), they will include the larger canines when the weather warms up enough to permit a thorough soaping and hosing in the garden.

The "project" came to full flower yesterday after months of experimental work on the neighbors' dogs. With Joyce Helmick, the daughter of Maj. and Mrs. C. G. Helmick, 1719 Hoban road, and Mary Frances Cottrell, daughter of Robert J. Cottrell, executive secretary of the Washington Board of Trade, they circulated folders announcing the new business to all dog owners within blocks of their homes.

The first customer was Heintzie, dachshund owned by Dickey Mast, son of Dr. and Mrs. Herman Mast, a neighbor of the laundry operators.

But Marcia was not there to help wash the first customer. When the story of the enterprise became known, Mrs. Tugwell kept her child busy with other things, explaining to the mothers of the other children that she feared to have her child's picture in the newspapers because "we are continually pestered by people we do not know."

So Joyce and Mary Frances undertook the job in the cellar of the Helmick home. Heintzie squirmed and wriggled. He even yapped a bit. But to no avail, for Joyce had him firmly in her hands, while Mary Frances soaped vigorously and bounced him up and down in the family laundry tub for a rinsing.

"He's dirtier than I thought," Joyce exclaimed after a particularly satisfactory rinsing. More soap was rubbed on and Heintzie just gave up at that and settled down in water almost up to his neck.

"We began this laundry business," Joyce explained, "because we are very fond of dogs—all other animals, too. Veterinarians don't wash dogs; they only care for them when they are sick, so we thought that would be something we could do for dogs."

Horses are Mary Frances' special interest, but the three partners decided a horse laundry would be too large an undertaking.

With an eye to business, the children have been cultivating the acquaintance of all the dog owners in the neighborhood. Often they do not know their neighbors' names, so these people have become to the children "the Scotty Man," "the Pekinese Man," the "Mongrel Lady."

The first dog experimented upon was Marcia's Chubby, a Boston bull. Then Mary Frances' dog, which is not ever supposed to have a bath, an English Chow-Chow named Fu Manchu, was next put in the tubs.

"If you think Heintzie is a hard job, you should have seen us working on Fu. His hair is so long and he's so fat and big that it took all three of us a long time to give him a bath." Mary Frances told Joyce as she bit her tongue and tried to hold the wrigging Heintzie in the water.

Joyce owns no dog. She did have a Pit bulldog, but he had such a pugnacious nature that when the family moved from Hawaii he had to be left behind.

"You can't wash puppies," Joyce said from her full knowledge of dogs, "but if I had a full-grown little one, we would wash him, too."

2 Held, 2 Others Sought by N.Y. In Wendel Case

District Attorney to Seek 5 Indictments; Blonde Woman Before Jury.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—Police held two men in custody tonight and pressed a search for two others as a grand jury in Brooklyn continued its investigation of Paul Wendel's claim he was kidnaped and tortured until he "confessed" the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

He subsequently repudiated the "confession."

District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan today ordered taken into custody the owner of the house where Wendel said he was held captive in Brooklyn.

Shortly after presenting a mysterious blonde woman to the grand jury Geoghan announced he would ask five indictments, but declined to reveal the name of the fifth person against whom he planned to present evidence.

Held Without Bail.

Martin Schlossman was held without bail on a kidnaping charge. Police said authorities in Detroit, Cleveland, Grand Rapids, and Atlantic City had been asked to search for Harry Weiss and Murray Bleefeld, whom they want to question.

Geoghan ordered the detention of Harry Bleefeld, father of Murray, and father-n-law of Schlossman. Bleefeld was taken to a polce staton and booked on a charge of kidnaping.

The elder Bleefeld, 62, was identified late this afternoon by Wendel as the man "Tony," one of his captors, who held him in the Voorhies avenue house which Bleefeld owns. Wendel charged that while in the house he was forced falsely to confess the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

Gave Hauptmann Stay.

It was Wendel's "confession" which reprieved Gruno Richard Hauptmann from the electric chair for three days.

The special grand jury neared the close of its investigation as a mysterious blonde woman was brought into the case as the person who paid Wendel's hotel bill and claimed his belongings at a Manhattan hotel the night he was spirited away.

Although her identity was not revealed by authorities, she appeared before the grand jury this afternoon. Police said only that she was believed to have been the sweetheart of one of the men sought.

When the elder Bleefeld was first questioned in a routine manner, he seemed an enfeebled old man, with a cane and a shaky, weak voice.

When Wendel identified him before Geoghan this afternoon, he said: "You weren't like that when you held me in your house. You were strong and your voice was virile."

Plane to Seek Body.

March Field, Calif., April 22 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Henry Black Clagett today ordered an Army bombing plane to Utah to hunt for the body of Maj. Howard C. Stark, Department of Commerce inspector, who has been missing since January. Previous attempts to find the flier have failed.

State Planning To Speed Trial In 'Tub' Killing

District Attorney Declares Evidence Is 'Airtight' Against Fiorenza.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—Prosecutors tonight pressed toward a speedy trial of what they termed an "airtight" murder case against John Fiorenza, 24, who confessed he assaulted and strangled Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton 12 days ago.

Obviously delighted with the work of detectives who solved the case with a piece of string as their only clew, officials hustled the red-eyed, nervous upholsterer's apprentice along the route that lead to the electric chair.

"A perfect, airtight case, if ever there was one," said District Attorney William C. Dodge, who yesterday watched Fiorenza re-enact the killing in Mrs. Titterton's Beekman place apartment.

Hoding up the piece of upholsterers' string that Fiorenza overlooked while removing traces of his crime, the district attorney said:

"This little piece of rope upset the supposed perfect crime."

The cord, part of that used to bind Mrs. Titterton's hands during the attack, was found under her body after Fiorenza returned to the apartment with his employer to "discover" the crime. It was traced and Fiorenza was arrested yesterday.

In retracing his steps on the day of the crime, the prisoner disclosed today that he had stopped in a candy store after the killing to telephone his sweetheart in the Bronx. They talked over their Easter plans, he said, and then he continued on to work.

"I feel that she will never come to see me now," he said of the girl he had planned to marry. "Well, I'm in it now. What can I do? I made a serious mistake."

During his arraignment in homicide court, his attorney indicated he would challenge the circumstances in which Fiorenza confessed the crime. The lawyer also said he would seek a sanity test.

Fiorenza's mother moaned loudly during the hearing and finally fainted.

District Attorney Dodge said he would seek an indictment before the week-end and predicted the trial would start in about a month.

Shuttleworth Divorced, Plans to Marry Again

Reno, Nev., April 22 (AP).—John H. Shuttleworth, 48, editor of True Detective Magazine, was granted a divorce today from Mrs. Lutie C. Shuttleworth, of New York City, and shortly afterward obtained a license to marry Mrs. Ivea Liljeberg, 35, of Reno.

Mrs. Liljeberg said she had been divorced from a former husband in Sweden in 1918 on grounds of incompatibility.

52-In. Elephant Too Big, St. Louis Seeks 3-Footer

St. Louis, April 22 (AP).—Because Tootsie, 4-year-old Indian elephant, outgrew her house at the St. Louis Zoo, she was started back to New York by truck today.

Tootsie, who has been here since last summer, is 52 inches high and weighs 1,700 pounds. No quarters are available for an elephant more than 3 feet high, Louis Ruhe is the New York dealer to whom Tootsie has been consigned.

George P. Vierheller, zoo director, hopes to obtain an animal of the desired specifications next summer.

Mother Wins Stay of Death For Killer Son

3,000-Mile Trip Saves Youth From Chair for Slaying Policeman.

Montgomery, Ala., April 22 (AP).—A mother's frantic cross-continent journey to save her son from the electric chair resulted in temporary victory, at least, today when she obtained a stay of execution from Gov. Bibb Graves.

From a 15-minute interview with the Governor, Mrs. May Vincent, modestly dressed middle-aged woman, of Shelton, Wash., sped to the Kilby Prison death house with the glad news for her 20-year-old son, Wesley.

The chief executive agreed to the delay until an appeal could be carried to the United States Supreme Court for the youth convicted and sentenced to die for the murder of a Birmingham policeman during a night-club holdup.

"Wesley always a good boy and never would have intentionally done anything wrong if he hadn't fallen into bad company," said the overjoyed mother as she left the executive chambers at the State House.

"I will never give up hope of saving my boy."

The meeting with her son in his death cell, a few short paces from Kilby Prison's home-made electric chair, was the first time they had met since young Vincent left his home at Shelton in December, 1934.

Gov. Graves told Mrs. Vincent the death sentence, originally scheduled to be carried out this month, would be automatically suspended until June 12 to permit the appeal to the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Vincent, who traveled 3,000 miles from Shelton to Montgomery, left for Birmingham to map future efforts in her son's behalf. Vincent and Richard Darrafou were convicted of the killing of Patrolman P. J. Harris, who frustrated their attempt to hold up the night club where a Roosevelt birthday ball was in progress in 1934. Darrafou later committed suicide after a futile attempt to escape jail.

Hit-and-Run Motorist Injures Pedestrian

Charles McKeon, 24, of 1764 K street northwest, was knocked down by a hit-and-run motorist yesterday, but was only slightly injured. The striking automobile was of the smallest type. McKeon was struck at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts to his legs and face.

District Woman Is Facing Fight For D.A.R. Post

Mrs. Grove Nominated, for Vice President; to Be Opposed.

Mrs. Harry Colfax Grove, former regent of the District of Columbia Chapter, was nominated last night for one of the seven offices of vice president general of the D. A. R. by Mrs. George M. Grimes, a former regent of the District chapter.

Eections will be held this morning, with nine candidates running for the seven offices. The victors will be formally installed tomorrow afternoon.

In her nomination speech, Mrs. Grimes stressed the long career of Mrs. Grove in the D. A. R. A charter member of E Pluibus Unum Chapter, she has been served as both its vice regent and regent. She has been State historian, State vice regent, State regent and State chairman of the Revolutionary Relics and Constitution Hall finance committees.

During the World War she was captain of the largest Red Cross unit in the District. She is also vice president of the Atlantic Coast section of the Daughters of American Colonists.

Opposition Arms D. A. R.

Until yesterday Mrs. Grove was considered a virtual certain victor. Opposition that has developed against her in "administration circles" for her support last year of Mrs. Flora Myers Gillentine, who opposed Mrs. William A. Becker for the president generalship, may result in her defeat.

Other candidates, those making the nomination and seconding speeches are:

Mrs. Eli Dixson, of Roseville, Ill., nominated by Mrs. Samuel J. Campbell, State regent of Illinois, and seconded by Mrs. Frank M. Dick, of Cambridge, Md.

Mrs. J. Harris Baughman, of Tallulah, La., by Mrs. G. deColigny, honorary State regent of Louisiana, and Mrs. Keene Arnold, State regent of Kentucky.

Mrs. Harold T. Graves, of Jamestown N. Dak., by Mrs. Robert J. Johnston and Mrs. Grace L. H. Brosseau, honorary president general.

Others Nominated.

Mrs. Allen Harris, of Johnson City, Tenn., by Mrs. Rutledge Smith, of Nashville, Tenn., and Mrs. James McDonald, vice president general.

Mrs. T. J. Mauldin, of Pickens, S. C., by Mrs. W. B. Burney, past vice president general, and Mrs W. H. Alexander, vice president general.

Mrs. Mortimer Platt, of Fort Worth, Tex., by Mrs. John Trigg Morse and Mrs. Julian McCurry, vice president general.

Emeline A. Street, of New Haven, Conn., by Mrs. George Maynard Minor, honorary president general, and Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, State regent of Michigan.

Mrs. William J. Ward, of Summit, N. J., by Mabel Clay, State regent of New Jersey, and Mrs. John S. Heaume, State regent of Ohio.

Luncheon Planned.

Mrs. Joseph T. Byrns, wife of the Speaker of the House, will entertain the Tennessee D. A. R. delegation at 1:30 p. m. today at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel.

D.A.R. Plans Program For Younger Members

An enlivened program for younger members of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be inaugurated immediately after the adjournment of the convention, it was learned yesterday.

The new program calls for the organization throughout the country of junior groups of members, ranging in age from 18 to 35. These groups, while remaining an integral part of the general organization, will have their own social functions of a lively enough nature to appeal to the younger generation.

The junior groups are being sponsored by Mrs. William A. Becker, president general, to induce young girls to follow their mothers into the D. A. R.

At Tuesday's session, it was reported that in the last eight years, the membership of the organization has declined 25,000 because church, college and social organizations were offering greater outlets for youthful energies than were the Daughters.

Nominated for D. A. R. Posts

'10 Cents a Holiday' Approved By C. A. R. to Raise $9,000

A "ten cents a holiday" plan to raise $9,000 among the members of the Children of the American Revolution for the expansion of the national headquarters, was approved yesterday by the forty-first annual C. A. R. convention in session in the Red Cross auditorium.

Under the terms of the plan, each child would be expected to contribute 10 cents for each of the ten legal holidays during the year. There are 9,552 members in the society.

The "dime a holiday" proposal is one of the plans to be adopted by the C. A. R. in a drive to raise $25,000 in the next two years. Additional funds are expected to be raised from other patriotic societies.

Yesterday's session of the convention was given over principally to the reports of the various State and local societies. Mrs. James Henry Harper, State director for the District of Columbia, reported an increase in membership of from 55 to 60 in the last year. Approximately $800 had been spent in charity work, she said.

Dallas Townsend, a C. A. R. youth, of New Jersey, presided.

At the close of the session the Gov. Thomas Welles Society of the District was host to other delegates at a tea-dance at the Thomas Circle Club.

Last night, the C. A. R. held their "stunt night" program in the Red Cross auditorium, featuring a free-for-all amateur contest. Those taking part in the program were Marian E. Fadelay, Jane McNeal and Ann Fadelay, and Jenifer Williams, of the Lieut. John Shaw Society of the District; Josephine Kreider, Elizabeth Browning Cook, Mrs. Paul Walters, Nancy Olsen, Beverley Davis, a choral group of Tamasee girls and a dramatic group from the Elizabeth Zane Society in Virginia.

This afternoon the C. A. R. will make a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon.

Suspect Hunted In Dual Slaying

Colfax, La., April 22 (AP).—State police converged today on Grant Parsih with guns, tear-gas bombs and bloodhounds in an attempt to capture a fugitive farmer suspected of slaying two Grant Parish officers who were carting off his cattle yesterday under a court order to dip them for tick eradication.

A score of State police, under command of Brig. Gen. Louis F. Guerre, superintendent of the State bureau of criminal identification and investigation, county officers and Federal range riders hunted for Walter Johnson, middle-aged farmer, who they believed was hiding in the woods and preparing to resist them with arms.

Johnson was suspected of shooting to death Sheriff W. L. Nugent, of Grant Parish, and his deputy, D. L. Brunson, who went into the woods to look for ambushers after the Federal range riders' cattle truck had been fired upon.

Struck by Golf Ball, American Loses Sight

Lima, Peru, April 22 (AP).—Julian C. Greenup, American commercial attache here, lost the sight of both eyes when he was struck by a golf ball Sunday, but today he recovered vision in one of them.

Greenup, a native of Washburn, Mo., was playing golf at the local club when a ball hit by another player struck him on the head and he fell unconscious.

laws was suggested by Mrs. Henry M. Roberts, jr., treasurer general of the organization, with the advice that the D. A. R. "should not keep all its eggs in one basket." Leading the opposition was Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey, dean of the honorary presidents general, who gave the National Metropolitan Bank credit for making possible the purchase of the land on which Constitution Hall was erected.

Defending the Administration's naval policy, Admiral Standley said that "the Navy is on its way to realizing its stipulated treaty strength." The recent naval treaty signed at the London conference, to which the admiral was one of the delegates, "in no way sacrified any of the American interest or principle," he declared.

"Naval strength is relative and we require a Navy second to none," he continued; "a Navy adequate to meet the demands imposed upon it by our naval policy and the consideration of national defense. More than that we do not ask; less than that we will not tolerate.

"We are what we are today and we have what we have today because our people have been willing and able to maintain themselves and their possessions in battle," he asserted. "We will hold this position just so long as we are able to defend it, and no longer. An army and a fleet are simply the projections of national character, reflecting it exactly in all its strength and its weakness."

Paralleling President Roosevelt's declaration in a message to the Congress Monday night that our Army and Navy was neither inadequate nor too large, Gen. Knight said that the American military ideal was one of "preventive preparedness," stearing away from "no preparedness on one hand and provocative preparedness on the other."

"Our independence was won by a civilian army," he continued. "And we have maintained a citizen army ever since." Our military strength lies mainly in our two great civilian components, the National Guard and the Reserve Officers Training Corps."

In her attack on the Nye-Kvale bill as an attempt to abolish the R. O. T. C., Mrs. Sisson warned the pacifist groups that "should they win their point, there is only one alternative—a large standing army commensurate with the size and wealth of this country."

Denouncing the Administration's relief policy for "turning Washington into the greatest almshouse in the country," Dr. Dyer suggested caustically that the dome of Congress should be inverted and used "as a gigantic soup bowl and the Capitol itself as a free lunch counter."

Dr. Dyer spoke extemporaneously, having lost the speech, copies of which were distributed to the reporters. However, he authorized the use of the distributed text in quoting him.

"The American Revolutionists were in no sense radicals," he said. "They were the deadly enemies of radicalism in government and were conservative both in thought and action. George III was pre-eminently a 'progressive' of the modern type.

"He believed in doing whatever he thought ought to be done in the interest of the general welfare, regardless of constitutional principles," Dr. Dyer continued. "American Anglo-Saxons did not agree with him. They were exponents of the 'horse and buggy' theory of interpreting fundamental constitutional principles."

Describing the philosophy of American government as one based on "giving the individual the largest freedom consistent with social safety," Dr. Dyer contrasted this doctrine with socialism, communism and syndicalism, all of which "are antagonistic to individual freedom."

"The oyster is a Socialist who hates to struggle and puts no value on freedom and abhors independence," he asserted, "when you stand in the presence of an American eagle, teeming with vitality and courage and independence, he impresses you as being radically different from the oyster.

"Why? Because the eagle is an individualist and the oyster is a Socialist, more dead than alive."

Pointing out that between 65 and 70 amendments to the Constitution were pending in Congress, Mrs. Sisson denounced "the most vociferous of these so-called Democratic and Republican would-be amenders as Socialists and Communists. In no other phase of our national life has this 'boring from within' process been more apparent than in the Congress of the United States," she declared.

In the text of her report, Mrs. Sisson mentioned Marcantonio by name, but when she delivered the report she referred to him only as "This so-called Republican who would completely change our form of government by legislative process." Marcantonio's government ownership amendment, she charged, was "very similar to the Socialist Party's workers' rights amendment."

Marcantonio's retort to Mrs. Sisson's charge was, "I am not interested in the Daughters of the American Revolution. I am interested in the famous and glorious history of the mothers of the American Revolution. Their progeny have certainly degenerated tremendously intellectually.

Dafoe Is Happy As Miners Near 1907 Classmate

Dionne Babies' Physician, Robertson Graduated at Same Time.

By the Associated Press.

North Bay, Ontario, April 22.—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the country doctor who rose to medical fame by his care of the Dionne quintuplets, expressed happiness and relief today when told rescuers nearly had reached his one-time college classmate, Dr. D. E. Robertson, entombed for ten days in the Moose River gold mine.

Dr. Dafoe and Dr. Robertson were graduated from the school of medicine of the University of Toronto in 1907.

They faced the young doctor's task of building up a practice. One joined the hospital for sick children in Toronto, some years later to be acknowledged one of the ablest child specialists in the Dominion.

The other, Dr. Dafoe, headed north to the trying life of a country doctor. A quarter of a century passed, and after May 28, 1934, Dr. Dafoe took his place at the top of the medical profession. He had been called to the farm home of Oliva Dionne, where five daughters were born under his care to Elzire Dionne.

Dr. Dafoe's services in supervising the healthy growth of the quintuplets sent him among the great physicians to children to recount his experiences, among them Dr. Robertson.

So it was with a happy smile today that the country doctor learned that the youth with whom he studied medicine apparently would be saved from death in the blackness of a Nova Scotia gold mine.

Dr. Robertson had paid frequent visits to Dr. Dafoe since the birth of the quintuplets to offer specialized knowledge in the care of the quintuplets.

Mine Victims

barrier to the chamber where Robertson and Scadding were crouching at 12:27 a. m., Atlantic time.

The men were on a ledge.

A barrier of rock and slate had formed a barrier between the rescue workers and the entombed men, caused by a new rock slide shortly after dark. It was torn down, bit by bit, and passed back and up by a human chain of workers.

The miners were able to shout to Robertson and Scadding, and receive replies, but actual contact had been impossible.

Reports Barred.

The presence of fallen rock in the cramped tunnel was not announced by officials at the pit-head. Minister of Mines Michael Dwyer had issued an order that no reports of underground operations were to be given reporters.

No explanation of the order was given.

The frenzy of excitement which had been maintained at the pit-head since early this afternoon, when it was announced the miners were almost through, had subsided at about 10 o'clock last night. Many of the miners who had rushed here to aid in the rescue work returned to their homes.

The spectators went to the village hotel for supper. Only the newspapermen and photographers remained. They have been on 24-hour duty for almost four days, and many of them were on the verge of collapse.

At 6:45 p. m. a new crew relieved the rescuers. Officials listening through a pipe line sunk Sunday could hear the workers shouting encouragement to the two men.

Trapped April 12.

Dr. Robertson, Scadding and Magill, all of Toronto, were trapped in the mine when the main shaft caved in about 11 p. m. April 12. Robertson, a wealthy surgeon, and Magill, an attorney, had bought the mine only recently. They were on an inspection tour with Scadding, their mine timekeeper.

The old mine had not been worked for 25 years, but with the recent rise in the price of gold, they believed it could be worked profitably.

The old shaft collapsed and sent tons of rock and earth downward with a roar heard in the nearby village. The three men, fortunately, were in a horizontal tunnel and escaped being crushed. But their only exit was cut off.

From the beginning, little hope was held for their lives. It was feared they were crushed to death. Then on Monday, April 13, smoke curled up through debris to the surface. That spurred workers.

Steam shovels and other mining equipment were rushed by special train from Halifax and then dragged over muddy roads by tractors. Miners for miles around volunteered for the dangerous rescue work.

Tried Main Shaft.

First they tried to clear the main shaft. But new slides threatened and it would have taken weeks to reach the men by this route. A new horizontal shaft was started. Slides blocked it, and the work here also became too slow and dangerous.

Meantime a diamond drill bored a 5-inch hole straight down to the level where the men were believed trapped. Hope had been given up that they were alive, but rescuers never faltered.

The diamond drill reached its goal early Sunday morning and an iron pipe was pushed through the hole.

Through this pipe, the surface men heard the voices of Robertson, Magill and Scadding. They had survived seven long days of cold, exposure and starvation—to say nothing of the terrific mental strain.

Scanty supplies of concentrated soup, brandy and medicine were lowered through the pipe, and rescue efforts were redoubled in the old Reynolds sloping shaft, now the rescuers' brightest hope of reaching the entombed men in time to save them.

But it already was too late, as far as Magill was concerned. A few hours after communication first was established with the prisoners of the mine, Scadding and Robertson said their companion was dead.

Great piles of rock blocked the old Reynolds shaft. Its supporting timbers had rotted and fallen with the years, and when miners finally reached its terminus, they still were some 20 feet away from the 141-foot level. Solid rock was dug through. The labor was killing, with the miners working in a tunnel so narrow they lay on their sides as they swung their picks, two at a time. No more could be used at the front. The rock was passed back and up by a human chain.

Doctors, Nurses Ready.

On the surface, doctors and nurses from Halifax waited. A hospital had been set up in a miner's cottage. Three stretchers were placed at the pit mouth. Two were covered with blankets and hot-water bottles—for the living. A third, covered only with a sheet, awaited Magill's body.

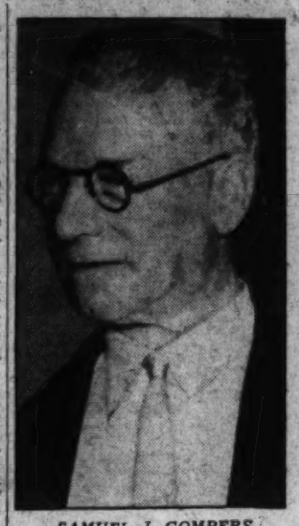
Fears increased that Robertson and Scadding would follow Magill in death. Over a tiny microphone lowered through the "life line" pipe, they begged rescuers to hurry. At times their minds seemed in danger of giving way. But they held on through the hours that stretched into days.

Yesterday, Dr. Robertson called for pen and paper. He wrote a letter which was brought to the surface. Presumably it was his will, but its contents were not disclosed by his family.

Long periods elapsed yesterday and early today without word from the entombed men. It was feared they might have lapsed into a coma, or that water slowly rising in their tomb had engulfed them. But their weak voices came through again at long last, reassuring rescuers.

Gompers, Son of Labor Leader, Marks 49th Year in U. S. Work

At 67, He Is Vigorous, Active as Youthful Executive.



SAMUEL J. GOMPERS.

Samuel J. Gompers, chief clerk of the Labor Department and son of Samuel Gompers, famous labor leader, snapped crisp orders into the telephone on his desk yesterday and viewed with unconcern the forty-ninth anniversary of his employment with the Government.

Just 49 years ago today Samuel J. Gompers, then a boy of 18, went to work at the Government Printing Office. An L-shaped structure on the corner of North Capitol street was enough to house the entire printing office.

"I served my apprenticeship in New York," Gompers said yesterday. "Then I came here. Everything was handset then, of course. No linotype, no monotype. But then I can remember the opening of the Brooklyn Bridge and I saw the first public exhibition of an electric light in New York City.

"That was down on the corner of Grand and Allen street. That first electric light made the street a hundred times brighter than it had ever been before.

"And then I rode on the first official subway train in New York and I can remember when John Moffett and Harry Skeffington and the other labor leaders used to meet at my father's house."

Gompers was 20 years with the Government Printing Office, saw it grow and watched the introduction of new methods. In 1907 he took the Civil Service examinations and began work as an editor for the then combined Commerce and Labor Department.

In three years he was promoted to section chief in the Census Bureau and then, when Labor became a separate department in 1913, he was made chief of Publications and Supplies. He reached his present position of chief clerk in 1918.

A few months ago Mr. and Mrs. Gompers celebrated their forty-fourth wedding anniversary. They live at 2517 North Capitol street. They have one daughter, Mrs. William H. McKay, of Washington, who was a Red Cross nurse during the World War.

"I didn't have any son to send," Gompers said, "so my daughter went."

Gompers will not be eligible for retirement until September, 1938, when he reaches his seventieth birthday. He looks like the type of man who would not enjoy retirement. He is vigorous, full of vitality. Yesterday, after 49 years with the Government, his orders were as decisive as those of a business executive half his age.

19 Parole Pleas Are Up Tomorrow

The application of Robert Hall, whose "troubled conscience" caused him to return to the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va., to serve out his sentence several years after he had escaped, is one of 18 to be considered at a meeting of the Parole Board at the reformatory tomorrow.

Following his escape, Hall went to his home town of Bluefield, W. Va., moved to Ohio, married and is the father of two children, when he returned to serve his term. Rules forbid parole of any prisoner who escapes or attempts to escape except in "most unusual circumstances."

$786,000,000 Housing Urged On Senate Body

Fahey, HOLC Head, Asserts U. S. Is Decades Behind Europe in Field.

By the Associated Press.

The $786,000,000 Wagner housing bill was indorsed before the Senate Labor Committee yesterday by John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, with the statement that "we are decades behind Europe in attacking the housing problem."

He testified that because of unemployment in the building trades, it cost the Government through the Works Progress Administration and other agencies $400,000,000 a year to care for men in these trades out of work.

Fahey said there are 322,000 building mechanics and 240,000 workers in allied fields who are jobless.

"U. S. Leadership Needed."

Speaking of the bill which would set up a system of loans and grants to local housing authorities over a four-year period, Fahey said:

"I do not see anything in the financial, or other features of the bill that are open to serious criticism. There is need for a vigorous beginning and there will be no progress unless the Federal Government shows the leadership.

"We are so far behind the advanced countries of the Old World in this matter that it is a disgrace to our civilization. I don't think we ought to tolerate postponement any longer."

Mayor S. Davis Wilson of Philadelphia and Mayor Neville Miller of Louisville also voiced support of the bill.

"It will help all along the line," said Davis. "I am heartily in accord with it."

Miller said he favored the measure because "it is absolutely impossible to get private industry to pay for housing for low-income groups."

Churchman Favors Bill.

The committee announced that telegrams approving the bill had been received from the mayors of New York City, Detroit, Milwaukee, Memphis, Omaha, Dayton, Ohio; Tulsa, Okla.; El Paso, Tex.; Tampa, Fla.; Racine and Madison, Wis.; Augusta, Ga.; Bethlehem, Pa.; Evansville, Ind., and Stamford, Conn.

Dr. Worth Tippy, executive secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, also testified in favor of the bill.

James G. Couffer, a New York investment dealer, said: "I favor the bill because I think that it will open up a field for the investment bankers."

J. C. De Hall, chairman of the Birmingham, Ala., housing authority, said that city would co-operate with the Federal Government if the measure be passed.

Lion Meeting Postponed.

Winchester, Va., April 22.—The annual State convention of Lions International, which was originally set for June 18-19, will not be held until June 25-26. The Winchester Lions Club will be host to the convention, which is expected to attract more than 500 persons.

May 13 Set Aside As Jamestown Day

Richmond, April 22 (AP).—Gov. Peery today designated Wednesday, May 13, as Jamestown Day. In a proclamation the Governor said:

"In all the annals of American history there is no date which carries such deep historical significance as May 13, the date of the founding of the first permanent English settlement in America," and that "great credit is due to a loyal band of Virginia women who have labored to preserve the historic landmarks still standing on Jamestown Island."

milk distributors to put rubber tires on their delivery wagons and to put rubber or other noiseless shoes on their horses.

No special regulation will be enacted against radios. One was proposed but was abandoned because it was felt that what might be a reasonable curfew hour for radios in one section of the city, might not be in another, it was explained.

Special instructions are to be given the police to enforce the existing law, which was found to be adequate. It includes radios among the things which become nuisances when played too loud and at unseemly hours.

A stop is to be put by police, under authority of existing law, against the crying of wares by vendors and newsboys at night. Co-operation of newspaper publishers is to be sought by a sub-committee.

Task of reducing noise by street cars and buses was given to the Public Utilities Commission. The commission was asked to make periodic inspection of all cross-overs to see they are properly maintained to reduce noise, that clanging of bells by motormen is reduced, "especially when automobiles are in front of street cars waiting for a light and can not move," and that "as rapidly as possible the obsolete, worn-out street cars be replaced by modern vehicles." Buses can be started less noisily and sound horns less frequently, it was agreed.

A special regulation is to be drafted by the corporation counsel which would be aimed at noisy trucks.

"Unnecessary noise by trucks should be prohibited," the committee said. "If there is faulty equipment such as improper mufflers, worn gears, worn tires, where such trucks are equipped with solid tires, loose body or tail gate, the trucks should be removed from the street until the necessary repairs have been completed."

Co-operation of District residents in the campaign was asked by Hazen for the sake of the general peace and health of the city. Van Duzer said the lessened noise would reduce traffic accidents.

The punitive part of the campaign is to be launched July 1, Hazen said. Until then an educational campaign will be launched, with police giving warnings instead of traffic tickets and arrests for violations of existing laws, he said.

Intimidation of Witness Laid to Frankie Foster

Reno, Nev., April 22 (AP).—A charge that Frankie Foster was attempting to "intimidate" a witness in the habeas corpus proceedings whereby he seeks to avoid extradition to New York City caused a brief flurry of excitement in court today. Foster is accused of participating in a $125,000 jewel robbery.

Shortly after Walter C. Gibson, a salesman in the Greenleaf-Crosby jewelry store in New York, which was held up January 6, had testified he saw Foster in the store at that time, the prisoner muttered: "Look me in the eye when you say that."

Editors Label Black Inquiry An 'Inquisition'

Committee Is Accused of Undertaking Campaign of 'Persecution.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—The Senate lobby investigation headed by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, was assailed as "the Black inquisition" in a report submitted today at the fiftieth annual meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

The report, presented by the committee on freedom of the press, headed by Col. Robert R. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune, embodied a resolution urging "victims of illegal acts" of the Senate Committee to demand criminal prosecution of "all involved in the odious affair."

After reviewing the seizure of private telegrams by the committee, "aided and abetted by the Federal Communications Commission," the resolution proposed commendation for "those persons who by their appeals to the courts to enforce their rights under the Constitution have helped to curb the illegal conduct of the committees."

Hearst Ruling Cited.

The report cited the court ruling obtained by William Randolph Hearst, the effect of which "is to dry up the committee's principal source of illegally obtained information."

"Under the specious pretext of investigating lobbying," the committee was held to have undertaken "a campaign of persecution and harrassment against individuals, organizations and newspapers which have in any manner criticized or opposed the policies of the present national Administration."

The unsolved slaying of two Minnesota editors, Walter Liggett and Howard Guilford, was discussed in a section which said:

"It is impossible to arrive at a conclusion other than that Guilford and Liggett were murdered with the acquiescence of authorities in Minneapolis and Minnesota."

Resolutions commending the Philadelphia Inquirer and the Louisiana Daily newspaper publishers for court victories in cases involving freedom of the press also were proposed in the report.

Preservation of a free press occupied most of the forenoon discussion. The afternoon session was given over to technical reports.

Constitutional provisions for a free press were held by the association's president, Jerome D. Barnum, of the Syracuse Post Standard, to be for the benefit of the people as a whole, rather than for the benefit of publishers as a class.

"Publishers," he said, "are merely the trustees of the right of the people to have information on which to base their opinions."

Action on Free Press.

Action will be taken tomorrow on the report on the freedom of the press and the resolution embodied in it.

At the afternoon session H. A. Sprague, of the St. Joseph (Mo.) Gazette, presented the report of the advertising agents' committee, which contained two resolutions, one providing that newspapers will not recognize agencies which do not use the standard form of contract and the other providing that recognition of agencies be cancelled if they refuse to take the liability for payment of services rendered under their contracts. Both resolutions were adopted. Other speakers were Edwin S. Friendly, of the New York Sun; J. E. Finneran, of the Scripps-Howard newspapers; Carl Jones, of the Minneapolis Tribune; Don U. Bridge, of the New York Times; Clark Howell, jr., of the Atlanta Constitution; Norman Chandler, of the Los Angeles Times; F. G. Huntress, of the San Antonio (Tex.) Express and News; Norman Rose, of the Christian Science Monitor; J. O. Adler, of the New York Times; George J. Auer, of the New York Journal, and W. A. Thompson, of the Bureau of Advertising.

Students to Repeat Show.

The Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "The Mikado," presented in McKinley High School two weeks ago, will be repeated Saturday night. This additional performance will be given by popular request, Frank C. Daniel, principal, has announced.

Lose Big Hips Fat Stomachs Double Chins

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

There is no mystery about this method. Doctors have been prescribing it for years. It is based on a scientific discovery of the medical profession that excess fat in many cases is caused by a little gland that does not work well.

Every drop of our blood goes through this tiny gland sixteen times a day. It produces about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours. The action of this fluid on the blood is much the same as the action a good draft has on the burning of coal in a furnace. It turns on the "draft" that increases the speed with which food and fatty tissues "burn up".

If this gland doesn't pour out about one and one-half drops of its vital fluid a day, many people take on fat.

Doctors find a simple easy way to remedy this condition is to feed this gland the substance it lacks. Then, many people get rid of the excess flesh that swells out their figures in ugly bumps and lumps.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method so generally used by modern doctors. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is given in every package so you know what you're taking.

For 28 years millions of fat people have found Marmola Prescription Tablets effective for the reduction of ugly fat. Don't take chances with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Get a box of Marmola from your druggist today.

Text of Dr. Bryan's Address

There has been so much talk about freedom of the press, some people take it so strongly for and some take it so cynically against, that I am reminded, being up here to speak to you today about it, of the Confederate soldier who said, in the midst of the mud and misery of Lee's last campaign, "If ever I love a country again, well, damn me!" The trouble about that Confederate soldier was he didn't have any choice, and none of us have any choice. We don't choose to be born. We don't choose, in a very narrow way, our vocations. We find ourselves on firing lines we didn't choose, and under conditions we didn't choose. We are not even allowed to sing the song, "'Tain't no disgrace to run when you is scared." There we are; there we have to stand.

We find ourselves like that other Confederate soldier who, under a terrible bombardment, broke into a song and began to sing this wailful melody, "Backward, oh, backward, turn Time in your flight, make me a child again just for this night." One of his friends said, "Yes, and a gal child at that." Whether it is a boy or girl or whatever it is, here we are. You can't choose that position.

Only One Aspect.

We are talking about freedom of the press. Freedom of the press is just one aspect of life. I don't know why it has come up at this time, as it has, except I think I understand it. I think that we find ourselves facing a condition that is brought about by the war. The great wrong the war did us was not debt and not taxes and not bureaucracy. What the war did to America was to leave us wrung spiritually dry. It took out of us emotions and courage and the will to fight, and the only reason on earth that people stand for dictatorships is because they have lost the courage and the will to stand for themselves.

The loss of freedom, as we have it today, is a symptom—it is just a symptom, and it is not the cause.

Mr. Barnum spoke of William and Mary College. The men that made this country at William and Mary College—John Marshall and Thomas Jefferson and an obscure Virginian named George Washington—what was it that drove them? No constitutional promise, not the great act of habeas corpus, it wasn't the Revolution of 1688; it was the innate will of those men to dominate events. And all the talk on earth and all the constitutions on earth won't avail us one-tenth of 1 per cent if we lose the will and the courage to go ahead for ourselves.

Best Constitution.

You know as well as I do the best constitution that ever was penned by man, the constitution that has eliminated every error of our own constitution, is the constitution of Venezuela, and a lot of good it did Gomez. Don't you tell me about constitution!

These attacks we have on freedom of the press are not new. Civilization isn't new. Our struggle isn't new. The world isn't new. Everything has come back here again in the same old circle. We find ourselves today under electric lights in air-conditioned buildings, meeting the same kind of problem under a different guise that mankind has met all the way up in its struggle from the very beginning. If there was no struggle, there would be no life. Somebody said once to an old man, "Ain't you sorry to be 85?"

He said, "No, I am glad because if I wasn't 85 I would be dead." If you didn't have the struggle, you would be dead.

Don't you believe for one minute that you can handle ideas by any way but ideas. Suppose it were possible to handle things any way except the way we have tried to handle them in America? Then if that were true, how long would Stalin and Hitler and Mussolini and whoever is the head of Spain this morning—I knew who he was yesterday, but there is no telling who he is today—need secret police and concentration camps and a kept press; how long would they need to choke the professors of the colleges and to totalitarianize the churches?

Fit to Play Game.

It is all very well to talk about the desire to find your life and find yourself in the full scope of all the men of pure blood just like yourself; it is a lovely kind of talk for the boy who is talking it to you, for the snake charmer who is charming you into silence and acquiescence while he robs you of your one chance to be yourself.

I feel about this freedom of the press that it is just the test that is given us to see if we are fit to play the game. There is nothing new about it.

I know Col. McCormick, who I see quietly at my right on the platform here, is going to refer to an English pamphleteer named Milton. I don't know how it happened, but many, many years ago I read a thing called Samson Agonistes, and at the time I read it I learned four lines. I never thought they would be any use to me in after life, but they have been a lot of use to me, and if you listen to them they will be a lot of use to you. Here is what he said—and just look how it fits our life today:

"But what more oft in nations grown corrupt
And by their vices brought to servitude
Than to love bondage more than liberty,
Bondage, with ease, than strenuous liberty,
And to despise, or envy, or suspect
Whose whom God's special favor hath raised up
For their deliverance."

Easy to Pick Flaws.

It is so easy for you to pick flaws in somebody who is doing something that is difficult and makes a demand on you.

There was a man down at the University of Virginia about 1882 or 1883 who came up from the Episcopal High School. He was a big, long-lipped, red-headed, bog-trotting Irishman named William Holding Eccles. Of course, you don't care about my judgment, but I will tell you, he is one of the two or three greatest men I have ever known or ever expect to know. The boys went downtown and had a fight with the circus and got beat up and came home and drank some whiskey and had a revival meeting and said, "Let's go back and beat up the circus."

Eccles was a freshman about 17 years old—and, by the way, he had this kind of power, that when he rowed on the crew down there (they only had four men on the crew and the river was twisted as a snake) Eccles used to encourage them with language, and the New York World sent down there in '82 or '83 to get his language.

Meet Responsibilities.

On the occasion of which I speak, Eccles jumped on a table, and he said, "If we go down there, somebody is going to get killed. Come on! Let's go!" Nobody went.

We know this, that talking about freedom involves responsibilities that we have got to meet. You can kid yourself all day long, and you can find all the authorities you want for anything on earth you want to do, but the real basis behind the trouble in Europe today, and I am sure I have got this right, the real basis of the power of the dictators is a desire of the people at the bottom to have security. They were afraid of communism in Germany; they were afraid of the return of the nobles in Russia; they were afraid of communists in Italy; they were afraid of the church in Spain; I don't know what they were afraid of except the women in Turkey, but whatever it was they gave one man power to give them security.

Hobbs, the great English philosopher, said that security was worth more than political freedom. Locke, his great contemporary, said that political freedom was worth more than security, but, he said, you cannot have political freedom unless you have the continuous assent of the people. And you cannot, ladies and gentlemen, have continuous assent unless you are free to make that assent, and that is the essence of the whole thing.

No Proof.

There isn't any man in this room, no man ever lived, that can prove the ultimate facts of life. He can't prove to you why you are happy when you are happy. He can't prove to you why struggle takes you forward. He can't prove to you why a martyr on a scaffold had rather be there than be a turncoat in riches and prosperity.

He can't prove to you why George Washington at Valley Forge was better off than Benedict Arnold before he got shot. He can't prove these things to you, but you know they are true, and you know if you don't follow them you are false to yourself and you know you cannot be at peace with yourself and be false to yourself.

I don't know why it is, but all history proes beyond any shadow of a doubt that we only advance when we have liberty. Mr. Davis has quoted the Supreme Court. I am going to quote you a few lines that were written about 500 years before Christ by a Greek who lived at a time when the world was full of tyranny.

By the way, Aristotle checked up every tyranny he could find for 400 years, and he couldn't find in the history of the then known world, but four tyrannies that had lasted 18 years. They bear in themselves the inexorable seeds of death. They are against nature. The tyrants have known this a long time.

Philip of Macedon quoted and practiced the Persian maxim, "There can be no tyrant where there is free speech and debating societies." They knew that 400 years before Christ. This man I am telling you abuot was Alcacus, and he said, "It is not walls or arts or trade that makes cities, but where there are men who know how to save themselves; there we have walls and arts and cities."

Power to Adapt.

The one inescapable and essential factor is the power of life to adapt conditions to yourself and to your best self, and that is absolutely all there is to it.

This freedom of the press concerns us because we have the press, because whether we like it or not we are responsible for the press, because we have got to be wise enough and courageous enough and patriotic enough and generous enough to admit freedom for people that we don't like. We have got to permit freedom of speech, freedom to teach, freedom to write, freedom to approach. We have got to know that if we are doing this thing we are pursuing a course that is infinitely difficult.

Abraham Lincoln himself said, "It has long been a question whether any government strong enough to support itself is not too strong for the liberties of the people."

To draw the line between freedom and repression is the most difficult and delicate and testing thing that can be tried, but that line has to be drawn. Somebody has to make the decision, and in the meantime our obligation to ourselves, to our fathers, to our children, to mankind—as old Selden said, "above all things and before all things, under all conditions and under all circumstances, give us liberty."

3d Scholarship Tests of Post Set Saturday

Two scholarships at Howard University's undergraduate college, one for a girl and one for a boy, are the prizes at stake in the third of the campus finals of the current Washington Post Scholarship Competition, to be held at that institution Saturday morning.

Eighteen girls and 17 boys, representing all parts of the competition's tri-State and District of Columbia area, will meet promptly at 9 a. m. at Douglas Hall, on the college campus, for a series of oral and written tests, which will cover both general college entrance subjects and the specific civic issues treated in the original essays by which they progressed into the finals against approximately 3,000 opponents.

Dr. E. P. Davis, dean of the undergraduate college, and Prof. Ralph J. Bunche, director of social science studies, have appointed the following faculty committee to conduct the examinations and determine the two winners: William T. Robinson, political science instructor, chairman; Drs. C. H. Wesley, E. F. Frazier, A. L. Locke and Max Meenes; H. O. Lewis, G. N. Butler and H. N. Fitzhugh.

An entertainment program, which will include a luncheon and tea at the Sojourner-Truth Hall and a sightseeing tour of Washington and environs, will be in charge of Dean Davis, Dr. Lucy D. Slowe, dean of women, Miss Joanna R. Houston, assistant dean of women, and Prof. Bunche. They will be assisted by James E. Washington, student council president, and the three students who have won the Howard scholarships in the two previous Post competitions—Ernestine Greene, now a sophomore, and John Harvey Euell and Fannie Jenagin, freshmen.

The contestants, all outstanding students, include 14 from local schools, as follows: From Dunbar High School—Almira E. Perry, Lucretia C. Matthews, Lorraine M. Landers, Melvin Lowry, Francis K. Wheeler and Frank B. Johnson; from Cardozo—Katie Lewis, Ruth Smith, Louise Epps, Clarke Carter, Charles Winston and Horace M. Robinson, and from Armstrong—Sadie B. Ezelle and Charles Robert Byrd.

Virginia candidates will include Margaret E. Wars and Philip H. Beasley, jr., of the Albermarle Training School at Charlottesville; James Edward Gault, of the Jefferson High School, Charlottesville; Maurice Norbrey and Hassle Williams, Mayfield High at Fredericksburg; Alfred Caves and Gertrude Robinson, Booker T. Washington High at Staunton; Sara Francis Blair and Levi P. Allison, of the Clarke County Training School at Berryville, and Atlas Wyche and Gladys Williams, of the Manassas Industrial School.

State Marks Planting Of 1,537,00 Trees

Nebraska City, Nebr., April 22 (AP).—The State which gave the Nation one of its widely observed holidays—Arbor Day—celebrated that day today with the completion of a year's program which brought the planting of 1,537,000 trees.

Fifteen rural school boards observed the occasion by planting trees around their institutions.

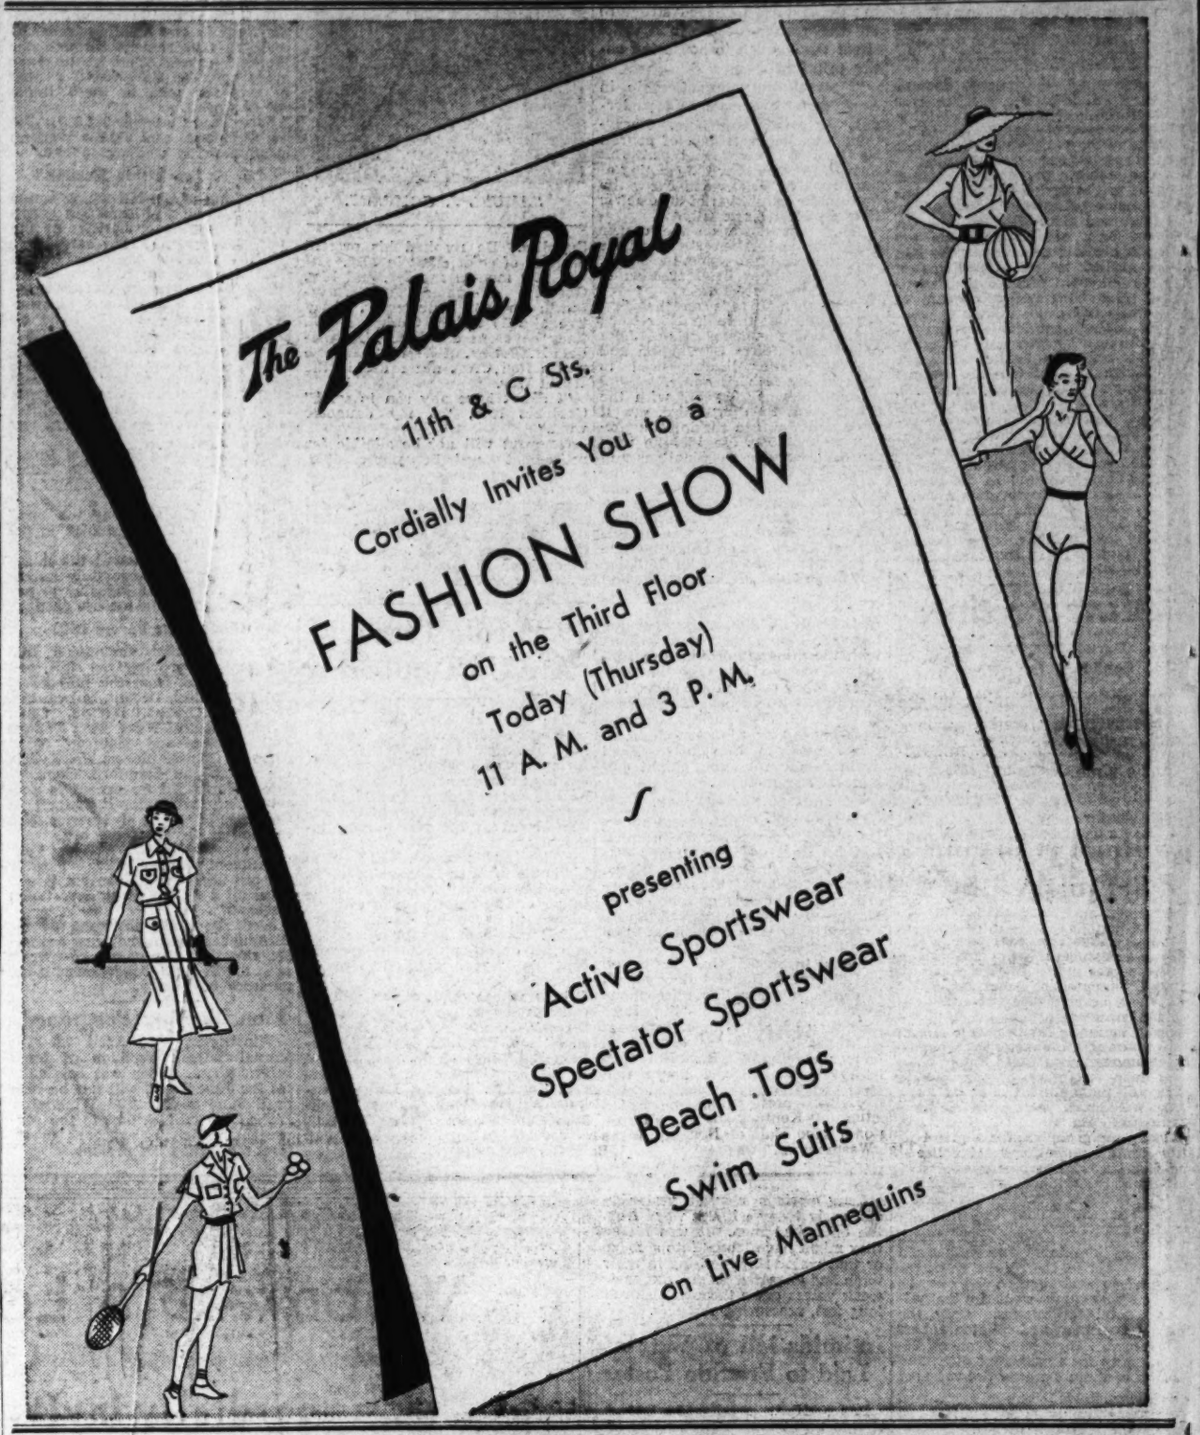
In this city, which was formerly the home of the late J. Sterling Morton, founder of Arbor Day, two surviving charter members of the Morton Elm Association attended its regular meeting.

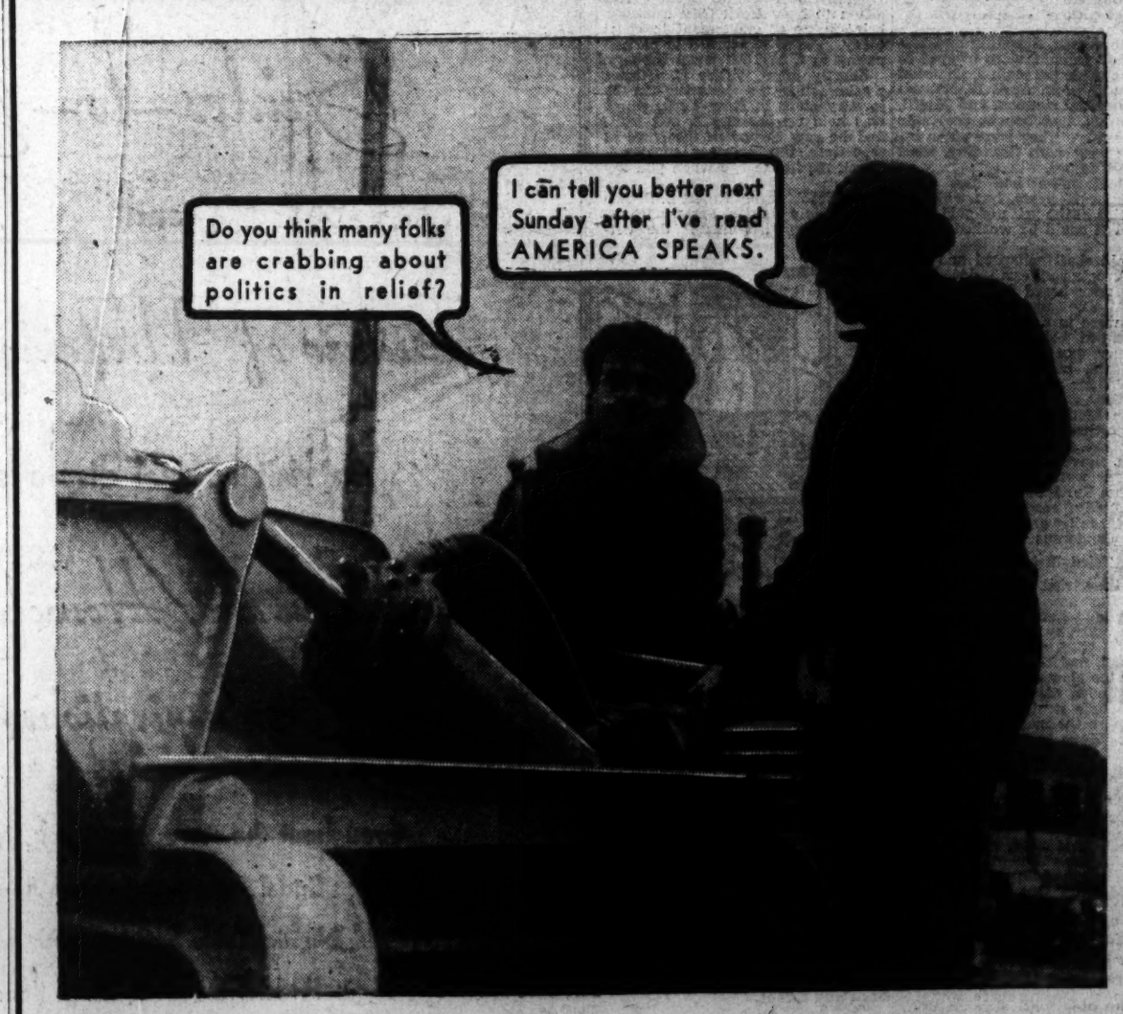
Landon in Celebration Of Oklahoma Gold Rush

Guthrie, Okla., April 22 (AP).—Bearded men, women in crinoline, and gay-shirted cowboys celebrated the historic gold run of '89 in Oklahoma's first capital today with Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas as honor guest.

While thousands lined Guthrie's bunting-draped streets, Gov. E. W. Marland and Landon rode in a two-mile parade, their heads bared to a bright sun.

Long haired Indian fighters, some with red and purple plush shirts, Indians with bright beadwork vests, bearded prospectors and little girls in bright calico frocks mingled in the parade.





Do you think many folks are crabbing about politics in relief?
I can tell you better next Sunday after I've read AMERICA SPEAKS.

One of the great campaign issues this year probably will be the handling of relief administration. What will be the outcome? Federal control, or State and local control, whereby individual communities will assume responsibility for the distribution of funds to their own needy?

Next Sunday you may learn in advance exactly how the Nation feels about this vital issue. And whether voters think that politics is playing a part in the handling of relief in their localities. Again AMERICA SPEAKS scoops the country with news of first importance—a news service you'll find only in this Sunday's Post.

Actress Found Dead in Hotel; Mystery Hinted

Drink of Grape Juice Figures in the Death of Alexandra Carlisle.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—Alexandra Carlisle, once a noted actres, was found dead in her hotel room today under circumstances which caused officials to reach conflicting opinions.

Detective Fred Russell reported she apparently had committed suicide by poison. Assistant Medical Examiner Raymond B. Miles said he thought her death was due to natural causes, probably heart disease. An autopsy was ordered.

The body of the English-born actress, widow of J. Elliott Jenkins, a Chicago inventor and radio engineer, was found this afternoon. It was lying near the bathroom door, clothed in negligee. The bed clothes were turned down, but the bed had not been used, indicating death occurred last night.

On a table in the bedroom police found a bottle of grape juice. One glassful of the contents had been removed. Dr. Miles said there were traces of grape juice on Miss Carlisle's lips, but no burns such as a poison might have left.

Hotel officials said Miss Carlisle registered March 5 and paid her bills promptly. She usually appeared cheerful and unworried.

Miss Carlisle was born in London in 1886. She married three times. From her debut in 1903 she appeared in scores of plays with many English stars, came to this country in 1913 and played in many successes until 1922. When she married Jenkins in Chicago she withdrew from the stage for ten years except to play "The Tragedy of Man" in Chicago in 1926. Six years later she returned to star in a "Criminal At Large" in New York and won a gold medal from the Academy of Arts and Letters for her performance.

During an estrangement from her husband he shot and killed himself in Chicago on June 9, 1934.

Miss Carlisle was much interested in politics. In 1920 she was a delegate from Massachusetts to the Republican National Convention and she seconded the nomination of Calvin Coolidge for Vice President. She spoke often during the campaign for the Harding-Coolidge ticket.

Red Cross Courses Finished by 4,000

Graduation exercises for over 4,000 students who have completed courses in the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross will be held today at 4 p. m. at the Chapter House.

Victor L. Deyber, first vice chairman of the chapter, will preside at the ceremony; Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary of the Red Cross, will make the introductions, and Dr. William L. Darby will address the graduates.

Among the groups who are graduating are 200 nurses, and 111 police and firemen, who have studied first aid; 185 students who are receiving degrees in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick, and 43 who are receiving degrees in Food and Nutrition, 36 of these being a Florence Crittenden Home group.

New Altimeter Held As Boon to Pilots

Albany, N. Y., April 22 (U.P.).—Tests made today of a fluctuating magnetic altimeter, invented by Ralph Lucas, Albany scientist, "proved conclusively the apparatus will function 100 per cent," Lucas announced.

The altimeter's greatest contribution to aviation, the inventor said, is that it will warn pilots flying "blind" when they approach mountains or buildings.

Lucas, overjoyed at the success of the test, announced he was ready to submit the instrument to the Government—probably the United States Navy research department—for further and more comprehensive tests and experiments.

German Cruiser Emden at Baltimore

Sailors of the German cruiser Emden, visiting Baltimore, shown saluting the Swastika. Police Commissioner Gaither compromised with anti-Nazi groups planning a demonstration against the visit of the cruiser. After having refused a permit earlier, the commissioner relaxed, and is permitting them to hold their meeting a block away from the ship.

Baltimorean Jailed In Anti-Nazi Protest

Baltimore, April 22 (AP).—One man was arrested when anti-Nazi groups swarmed toward the German cruiser Emden after a protest meeting near the docks today.

The meeting was held after Police Commissioner Gaither and leaders of the protestants had reached a compromise. About 2,000 persons milled around the head of the pier while the meeting was taking place.

Derogatory outcries greeted the German sailors as they left the dock to board street cars. Police attempted to move the crowd back, and some demonstrators objected. Joseph Muller was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct.

Capt. Frank Cook Funeral Is Today

Funeral services will be held in Arlington National Cemetery at 2 p. m. today for Capt. Frank Clarendon Cook, Medical Corps, U. S. N., retired, who died in the Naval Hospital at Philadelphia Monday.

Lieut. Comdr. Joseph H. Brooks, Chaplain Corps, will officiate at rites for which the following officers of the Medical Corps will be honory pallbearers:

Capt. A. B. Clifford, Capt. M. A. Stuart, Capt. C. J. Holeman, Capt. A. J. Toulon, Commander R. G. Davis and Commander C. W. Ross.

Capt. Cook, born in Bath, Me., August 19, 1869, was a graduate of the Harvard Medical School. He was appointed assistant surgeon in the Naval Medical Corps in December, 1893. He served on the Wilmington during the Spanish-American War and during the World War was in command of the Naval Hospital at Hampton Roads.

Bryan M. Battey, an assistant commissioner of patents and a distinguished World War aviator, died yesterday at Los Angeles.

Mr. Battey, who was 39, was appointed to the patent post in 1934, coming from New York, where he had practiced patent law.

In their two years here Mr. and Mrs. Battey had been very popular in Washington society, entertaining frequently.

News of Mr. Battey's death was received here at 6 p. m., just two hours after Mrs. Battey's mother and the Batteys' three sons, Bryan, 12; Fraser, 10, and Lawrence, 6, had left Washington to join the Batteys at Los Angeles.

Ten weeks ago Mr. Battey had undergone an operation at Emergency Hospital. Two weeks ago he and Mrs. Battey left for California, hoping that the climate would be beneficial. He seemed to improve and his sons had started to join him and Mrs. Battey.

Mr. Battey was the son of the late Dr. Sumter B. Battey, who was the first surgeon connected with the New York Aeronautical Society, which was organized soon after the Wright brothers' flight.

Mr. Battey left college in 1917 to volunteer for service in the Flying Corps and was commissioned as a pilot in the American Army. Later he was transferred to the British Royal Flying Corps.

After seven weeks at the front he was made a deputy flight leader. In his last air battle he was grounded behind the German lines after a fight with six enemy planes. While trying to start his motor he was wounded by infantry fire and captured.

Survivors are Mrs. Battey and the three sons. Funeral plans had not been announced last night. The Batteys live at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Mussey Funeral To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Ellen Spencer Mussey, founder of Washington College of Law and crusader for women's rights, will be held today at 2 p. m. from the Holy City Church, Sixteenth and Corcoran streets northwest. Burial will be private in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers at Mrs. Mussey's funeral will be: Dr. Edwin C. Dutton, George E. Fleming, Harry G. Meem, John E. Laskey, Dr. Roscoe J. C. Dorsey, George Kearney and Dr. Edwin Mooers.

The Washington College of Law will be closed today in her memory. An alumni meeting, set for today, will be held April 28.

Lester Will Speak.

W. H. Drane Lester, of the Department of Justice, will speak on "Modern Trends of Criminology," at the meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club in the Carlton Hotel, today, at 12:30.

Mrs. Naecker's Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

Resident of Washington for 77 Years; Prominent in Music Circles.

Funeral services will be held at St. Francis Xavier Church tomorrow morning for Mrs. Sophie Naecker, 77, lifelong Washington resident, who died Tuesday evening at her home, 2417 T street southeast. Burial is to be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mrs. Naecker was graduated from the first Washington Conservatory of Music in 1875. After her graduation she taught at the conservatory.

She played the first pipe organ to be installed in a Catholic church in Washington, and was formerly organist of St. Aloysius' and St. Joseph's churches.

Mrs. Naecker was well known in music circles here and had many piano and pipe organ pupils studying under her direction.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. William Towne, Mrs. J. Michael Newcomb and Mrs. Samuel Roberts; three sons, John, Louis and William, and 13 grandchildren. All are of Washington.

H. A. Avery Dies; PWA Engineer

Howard Angus Avery, PWA project engineer, died yesterday in Walter Reed Hospital of acute appendicitis.

Stricken Saturday when he returned to his home at Stoneleigh Court after work, he disregarded the doctor's advice to go to the hospital immediately. He said that he had survived several similar attacks.

Born in Charlottesville, Va., Mr. Avery volunteered for service the first day war was declared on Germany. Throughout the war he was a private in the medical corps of the Twenty-Ninth Division.

Hospitalized just before the Armistice because of a weak heart, he was made a captain in the Red Cross. Before coming to Washington to work with the Resettlement Administration, he spent several years in the hotel business in California. A month ago he was transferred to the PWA.

Surviving him are his mother, Mrs. Margaret Lee Avery, of Norfolk, Va., and a brother, Hamilton Avery, of Elizabeth City, N. C. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning from Fort Myer Chapel. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Man Finds Undertaker Is Not Busy, Kills Self

Central City, Nebr., April 22 (AP). Authorities said that before Henry Untiedt shot himself fatally today he ascertained that the undertaker was not busy.

Immediately after visiting the undertaker's establishment, he walked into an alley and shot himself in the head.

"ONE OF AMERICA'S MOST DISTINGUISHED MOTOR CARS"

If you hope to get a really fine car for less than $1,000...

Ask 1. Has it the comfort and luxury of a 125-inch wheelbase?
2. Has it fine-car engineering throughout?
3. Is the advertised price the price of the sedan?

THE NASH AMBASSADOR for 1936 is even more beautiful, even more luxurious, even stronger and safer than models formerly priced around $2,000! Yet these long, graceful, 125-inch wheelbase sedans are now priced from $835 to $995 at the factory!

The Nash Ambassador is not a "scaled-down" model in any sense. There has been no "skimping" in upholstery or in fittings. The Ambassador has the famous Nash "Twin-Ignition" engine and all of the vital, long-life engineering features usually found only in the most expensive cars. It gives you the protection of big, double-acting hydraulic brakes, too, and a rugged, all-steel body with steel top!

If your choice of a car in this price class is based on facts alone, you will certainly drive a Nash Ambassador this year! Any Nash-LaFayette dealer will arrange a demonstration ride for you. The Nash Motors Company, Kenosha, Wisconsin.

AUTOMATIC CRUISING GEAR available at slight extra cost. Reduces engine revolutions ⅓ at high speeds. Saves up to 25% in gas; up to 50% in oil!

No Longer Funny.

Washington has so far been properly indifferent to the clowning of Representative Zioncheck. Residents of the Capital City, as well as its officials, realize that the law of averages, and the indifference of the electorate, is sure to burden Congress with an occasional funny boy. So long as the adolescent antics of the Congressman from Seattle were harmless, he was set down as one whose simple method of attracting attention is to make himself ridiculous.

More recently, however, it has become apparent that Mr. Zioncheck is not merely a harmless burlesque performer. He has become a positive menace to pedestrians and motorists who happen to be using the streets when he chooses to race his high-powered motor car through the city. And it is time for those whom he calls "dumb cops" to crack down on this Congressman when, having been charged with driving through a residential district at 70 miles per hour, he flouts the law and attempts to excuse his conduct by resort to buffoonery.

Citizens of Washington are vitally interested in seeing that the local traffic regulations are enforced without fear or favor. In the Zioncheck case the police are showing altogether too much consideration for a legislator who has shown no consideration whatsoever for the community. But the law-enforcement machinery may be expected to catch up with the Congressman from Seattle, and when it does the court will be fully justified in teaching him an overdue lesson on the limitations of Congressional immunity.

Another aspect of Mr. Zioncheck's conduct demands even more serious treatment. As pointed out by a correspondent in the letter column today, this M. C. has gone far to bring Congress into contempt by his clowning. When a legislator openly makes mockery of the law, he clearly manifests his own unworthiness to sit in a legislative hall. And unfortunately one clown can detract more from the dignity and prestige of Congress than a dozen statesmen can add.

There is a point beyond which even the indulgent House of Representatives cannot tolerate conduct that reflects upon its own standing as a legislative body. As a measure of self-defense that body may be forced to exercise its power to discipline or expel members who pride themselves on being able to flout the law.

A Victory For Reason.

In terms of aggregate appropriations there is no great difference between the District supply bill reported to the Senate yesterday and the comparable bill recently passed by the House. Actually, however, the improvements made by the Senate are extensive. It is important to note how much good will and community service can be injected into a bill at an additional cost of only $1,286,837, plus a large measure of common sense in drafting.

The House, following the dictates of a small but stubborn faction, adopted a bill designed to penalize the District. Senator Thomas' sub-committee has canceled that indefensible action. Instead of forbidding "damned doctors" to testify, it listened patiently to the careful evidence of local officials and citizens. Some Senators visited institutions singled out for cuts in the House and saw for themselves the deplorable conditions which the community is endeavoring to correct. From this sympathetic background, they framed a bill that will afford a maximum of community service without ignoring the need for economy.

Under the circumstances, the failure of the committee to increase the sum estimated by the Budget Bureau for public health may indicate that this important subject was not adequately presented. Even in this respect, however, the bill is a substantial improvement over the House measure. And the provision of funds for additional policemen, character education, improvement of the National Training School for Girls, etc., plus restoration of the so-called Federal contribution of $5,700,000, entitles the committee to warm commendation.

In recent years the Senate has consistently been more reasonable than the House in the appropriation of funds for Washington. But as a rule many of the advantages gained in the Senate bill have been lost in conference. If the Senators who have taken a personal interest in stripping the House bill of its absurdities and inequities intend to preserve their work, they will have to complete the good start now made. Fortunately, they will be so completely fortified by facts, logic, and, presumably, the influence of the President, that the outcome should not be in doubt.

Regardless of the fate of this bill, however, it will leave the root problems of the District unsolved. Until the Commissioners are permitted to submit their own budget to Congress, along with ample data to support their requests, local appropriation bills are certain to be embroiled in confusion and misunderstanding. And until Congress agrees to a formula that will automatically fix a proportionate Federal allowance for the extraordinary expenses of the Capital City, politicians will continue their unwarranted assaults upon the local budget for purposes of self-inflation.

It is this underlying issue to which the community should now assiduously devote its efforts.

Read It And Weep.

Aside from intercorporate-tax provisions which would deal a severe blow to complicated holding-company structures, the House revenue bill is no worse than was anticipated. The economic objections to a measure intended to force distribution of corporate surpluses have been fully aired, as well as its inadequacy as a revenue producer. Nevertheless, preliminary debates and advance information did not prepare the public for such a voluminous and complex tax bill as the one reported out by the Ways and Means Committee.

Most of the New Deal legislation has lacked clarity, precision, and definiteness of purpose. Badly-drawn omnibus measures covering different or only remotely related matters have been pushed through without adequate study or debate. Either through inadvertence or by design, legislative "jokers" have frequently found their way into these rambling and carelessly-drafted measures. But for sheer, senseless intricacy the new tax bill is without a rival. Businessmen will have to seek the aid of legal and financial experts to find their way through the devious mazes of this extraordinary measure. And even with the help of trained guides the going will be difficult.

Enforcement difficulties multiply as laws become harder to interpret. For that reason, it is particularly important to reduce tax legislation to the simplest possible terms in order to close avenues to tax evasion, even at the risk of inflicting minor injustices upon taxpayers. Instead of following this sound principle of simplicity, our Federal tax laws have become increasingly complex and the climax of legislative awfulness appears to have been reached in this latest tax program.

The elaborately graduated schedules applicable to corporate surpluses cannot be justified even as a means of distributing the burden of this particular tax more equitably. The differing schedules are, in fact, designed to favor small as against large corporations. The special treatment accorded banks and certain other corporations, the provisions to relieve debt-burdened concerns and to stop up tax "leaks" and evasions also reveal the ill-considered character of the original proposals. Instead of testifying to the care with which the plan has been evolved, the modifications and exemptions introduced into the House bill are merely unsightly scaffolding upon a jerry-built structure.

The chief value of the House bill is its unintentional emphasis upon the need of a well-balanced tax program, easily administered and primarily designed to produce revenue. The attempt to employ the taxing power for the ulterior purpose of influencing corporate dividend policies largely accounts for the bewildering complexity of the House proposals and the impossibility of accurately estimating revenue yields.

Britain Pays As She Goes.

With the reminder that armament outlays have to be paid for, Neville Chamberlain, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in his budget speech that he proposed to raise the basic income tax rate (the equivalent of our normal rate) to 4 shillings 9 pence in the pound, that is, to 23¾ per cent.

The revenue from this source, together with an increase of nearly 50 per cent in the duty on tea, supplemented by road fund receipts, is expected to provide a balanced budget during the coming fiscal year. However, the Chancellor indicated that part of the cost of the re-armament program during the next five years would be met by borrowing. But, he added, "it seems to me also to be neither just nor in accordance with the sound principles of finance upon which our fortune has been built that we should lightheartedly push the whole of this burden onto the shoulders of those who are going to come after us."

This intimation that the British are about to face a period of slight budgetary unbalance, despite the tremendous efforts that have been made to eliminate deficits, is undoubtedly disheartening. But it is a lesson for us to note how resolutely their government faces unpleasant facts and forces the people to realize that public spending eventually has to be paid for out of private incomes. This attitude is in refreshing contrast to our reluctance even to make an honest estimate of the size of the budgetary deficit, and our even more pronounced aversion to taking drastic steps to reduce it.

This country's fiscal problems could soon be solved if the Administration and Congress had the courage to approach the issue with similar realism and honesty. It would be equivalent to committing political suicide, no doubt, for our legislators to emulate the austere example set by the British Chancellor of the Exchequer in imposing a tax of over 23 per cent upon small incomes. But it is well for Congress to be reminded that the British are making more rapid strides toward recovery than the United States, despite oppressively high income rates. Furthermore, attention should be called to Mr. Chamberlain's opinion that the increases in income tax rates and tea duties will not "seriously affect the improvement of trade and industry, nor that it will cause any undue hardship."

"Everything OK."

The words, "Everything O.K.," flashed over the air from a remote Nova Scotian village early today brought relief to a world which for 11 days had waited impatiently and anxiously for the rescue of Dr. D. E. Robertson and C. A. Scadding. Unfortunately, all the heroic efforts of relief shifts did not suffice to break through to the trapped men before one of their number, Herman Magill, had died.

The situation which kept these three Canadians—doctor, lawyer, and timekeeper—imprisoned together was as dramatic as it was poignant. Presumably, the three had little in common save their interest in the mine and the terrible realization that this shared interest would probably be their doom. At the time of the cave-in Magill was showing Robertson, his new partner, over their joint property. Scadding, the timekeeper, was along because of his familiarity with the subterranean passages. Ironically, his knowledge was of no more help when the crisis came than was the authority of the owners. In the showdown it was the man of medicine who was able to do most.

Against all competition, the race against death at Moose River has held the attention of the reading public during the past few days. Miners have given unsparingly of their energies in the rescue work. Officials have passed sleepless nights directing the activities; sympathetic helpers have stood for hours in rain and mud awaiting their turn to aid. Indeed the rescuers have been no less heroic than the rescued. And the world has proved that it is not as indifferent to human anguish as sometimes seems the case. That is the message which "gets through" from Nova Scotia.

A National Airport.

President Roosevelt's selection of three members of the Washington Airport Commission emphasizes the national character of that project. Of a nine-man commission only one member will represent the District government. Two will represent the executive branch of the Federal Government and the six others will be members of Congress.

It is entirely proper for the President to choose the chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, Frederic A. Delano, as the first member of the group that will decide where the proposed airport shall be located. For the choice of a landing field has an important relationship to the comprehensive plans of the N. C. P. P. C. for development of the entire city. Likewise Maj. Gen. Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, is a logical choice. As engineer commissioner, Col. Sultan is well qualified to represent the District, even though he too is an official of the Army merely assigned to the District for temporary duty.

If each house of Congress chooses its representatives on this body as carefully as the President has done, the selection of an appropriate airport site should be assured. But the project can not possibly be considered a local one, with this lineup. In making provision to finance it, this fact should not be overlooked in Congress.

Deb In The Afternoon.

Certainly bull fighting did not need Ernest Hemingway's touch to make it glamorous and thrilling. The blazing sun, the cheering crowds, the dashing costumes of picador and matador, the glint of steel—all these combine to make death in the afternoon a picturesque pageant. Hemingway's main contribution was in bringing it to the fireside circle via the printed page.

And now, apparently, a homelike atmosphere is being conveyed to the blood-and-sand sport by no less than the ladies themselves. In Spain, Senorita Juanita Cruz has doffed the mantilla to don the role of matador. Pictures of her look quite professional—she has the jet black hair and flashing eyes of the true Castilian, and her costume makes no concession to her sex. It is not at all hard to visualize la Cruz planting the traditional banderillas in a bull's neck.

However, feminine invasion does not end with this daughter of Castile, on whose shoulders rests that "air of preoccupation of almost terrifying remoteness which distinguishes men who are intimate with death." Miss Portia Portar, of Texas, has also heard the call and if Mother Portar had not "put her foot down" recently, Portia would still be demonstrating to Mexico what the well-dressed toreadorette will wear. For Miss Portar is of the opinion that "you can inject so much femininity into it as you whirl the red cape."

If this keeps up, bull fighting will undoubtedly need Hemingway's virile reporting to give it the necessary punch. For if woman's place is in the ring, she will inevitably seek to encourage whatever gallantry exists in the male bovine. And that possibility is enough to bring tears to the eyes of the hard-boiled Hemingway, to say nothing of the havoc it will play with the traditions of the great Cid.

Why is it that we almost never have any warm and beautiful April days until June?

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Casual Procedure.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The jury for the current Exhibition of Independent Artists originally included in its membership Mr. Duncan Phillips and the undersigned. Although announced as members of the jury, we were not called upon to assist in the selection of the pictures and the jury completed its activities without reference to us.

A number of good painters, who had submitted work to the exhibition, were considering withdrawing their pictures on account of the failure of the jury to notify Mr. Phillips and myself of their meetings. Such action, when brought to our attention, was discouraged by us both. I heartily approve of the Independent Exhibition and appreciate the co-operation given to it by The Washington Post and the various stores which house it.

The limitations of space and the arrangements whereby the exhibition is divided into nine units demand the service of a jury. The confused methods of this year's management, illustrated by the careless failure to notify, successfully, two of its publicly announced jurors, if continued, will end in the complete destruction of an institution that is important to the artists and the people of Washington.

The purpose of this communication is to make clear to my artist friends that, although I should vote against as drastic a movement as to withdraw their pictures, I have had nothing whatsoever to do with the selection of the works presented in the present Independent Exhibition. Therefore, your courtesy would be appreciated if you would give the necessary valuable space in your columns to publish this letter.

Beautiful But Dangerous.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Mount Vernon Memorial Boulevard between Washington and Alexandria is a death trap.

It is amazing that supposedly competent highway and park officials can consider it otherwise and it is equally amazing that citizens should tolerate its existence under present operating conditions.

Unlighted, tortuous curves, dark pavement, dark brown close flanking rail, dim or absent center-line marking, all tend to class this highway after nightfall among the most dangerous of those well traveled. Add to this the lack of guiding telephone poles and wires, which ordinarily guide the evening driver along the average highway, particularly around the curves, and the unlighted heavy pattern bumping posts in the center of the roadway at the beginning and ending of the numerous center boulevards, and the trap is complete.

Lighting is installed. Why isn't it used? Why isn't every other light used? Why isn't every third light used? Three people were killed last night. Any but our docile Americans would whitewash the road or tear it up. Can your column advise the status of civil suits in this connection or how boondoggling officialdom is waked up?

The March On Addis Ababa.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not until Field Marshal Pietro Badoglio supplanted De Bono, the Black Shirt friend of the dictator, did the tide in Ethiopia turn in Italy's favor.

Badoglio is the idol of the army; he despises Mussolini and his principles. To quote; "When Badoglio has a conference with Mussolini he feels as your Gen. Pershing would if he were to be locked in a room with your Capone. That we all know, signore." That from an article in Collier's of April 11 by W. B. Courtney.

Courtney's write-up is intensely interesting. One gathers from it that when Badoglio has succeeded in defeating the Ethiopians, he may return to Italy and crush Mussolini and his Black Shirts.

"To Badoglio, Mussolini is not a statesman, but merely a cheap, posturing, unscrupulous radical—a scimmia—what you call in your country a gorilla." Id. page 13.

Bullies eventually are crushed; Mussolini is doomed; his downfall will help to seal the fate of Hitler's administration.

Political and religious domination of the human mind has never permanently succeeded—it never will.

JOHN N. QUINN.
Takoma Park, D. C., April 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mussolini could so easily and consistently jail the League Council as about the only indignity he has left uninflicted. It were no more humiliating than allowing him membership while waging a war of unprovoked aggression in defiance and violation of the very essence and motive of the League's creation. It is said it even begs Il Duce to stay in.

It is not denied that application of full sanctions at its initial stage would have stopped the war, nor that, as a consequence, responsibility for the murder of those thousands lies on the door-step of the League of Nations itself.

What Pharisees that makes of us Americans! The world is not even yet appraised of the horizons of Mussolini's scheme and dream of future conquest.

GEORGE E. GARY.
Rome, Ga., April 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ethiopia has been ravished of her sovereignty and lies bleeding at the feet of Mussolini, a helpless victim of cupidity and lust for power. The ruthless despoilation of this nation's honor violates every canon of international morality and shocks the conscience of the civilized world. The League of Nations stands by as if with palsied hands and looks on with guilty acquiescence. Mussolini openly avowed his daring and dastardly purpose. Openly flaunting all pretense to international decency, he threw this startling defiance at the League of Nations: "I will go into Ethiopia, with Geneva, without Geneva, or against Geneva," and made good his defiance.

The League imposed ineffective sanctions which only aggravated the defiant aggressor, but withheld effective ones because of internal jealousies and inharmonies among themselves. Mussolini has the magnificent obsession that he is the modern embodiment of Julius Caesar. The League of Nations lacked the courage to stop his mad career at the start. While quarreling among themselves the League allowed the assailant to accomplish his nefarious purpose with the vain delusion that he might be called to account after the dastardly deed had been done. It were ten times easier to stop him from his outrageous enterprise at the beginning than to deprive him of fruition after victory. All the king's horses and all the king's men can not restore the fallen Lion of Judah to his former place and prestige.

The League of Nations knew then as it knows now that the conflict was a one-sided one, and that the outcome was inevitable. With a determination and courage which commands the highest admiration this ancient African nation fought to maintain its sovereignty and honor, but her resources at her present stage of development were a poor match for the enginery of modern civilization. It was a contest between the bare hand and the mailed fist.

The League of Nations has suffered an irreparable loss of prestige. How can it hope to prevent Hitler from occupying his own territory on the Rhine if it can not prevent Mussolini from despoiling the sovereignty of a sister state? Ethiopia, along with Italy, was a member of the League, each bound by the Covenant to uphold and defend the sovereignty of the other. After this, who will regard an international covenant as having any more binding strength than a coil of smoke or a more compelling sanction than a scrap of paper?

The Case of Zioncheck.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Senate of the United States has just convicted a Federal judge on impeachment by the House of a course of conduct that brought scandal upon the judiciary, although acquitting him of all specific charges of misconduct. Surely the Congress should be as jealous of and as ready to protect its own reputation as it is that of the judiciary.

It is questionable whether there would be a dissenting vote among decent people that Representative Zioncheck has by his recent conduct brought scandal upon the Congress, and that unless action is taken by Congress against him that body will greatly lower itself in the esteem and respect of the people. His several acts of misconduct are too well known and of too recent date to need recital.

Congress has ample authority to punish and expel its members for conduct that reflects discredit upon it under Section 5, Article 1, which provides that Congress may punish its members for disorderly behavior and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member. Mr. Zioncheck has shown a contemptuous disregard of the traffic laws of the District by driving his car 70 miles an hour on Connecticut avenue, thereby endangering the lives of the people, and also a like contempt for the court when arrested and summoned to appear before it.

It is reported that his attorneys, whose names are not disclosed, say that he cannot be arrested while Congress is in session either while going to or coming from Congress or at the Capitol. Their opinion happens to be in conflict with the provisions of Section 6, Article 1, of the Constitution, which gives members of Congress no immunity from arrest for breach of the peace, which is in effect the charge against Mr. Zioncheck.

As an American citizen who respects constituted authority and the law and who believes in the impartial enforcement of the law, and who also desires to retain his respect and esteem for the Congress, I would be pleased to see the Congress discharge its duty to itself by expelling Mr. Zioncheck. He has demonstrated beyond dispute his unfitness for and unworthiness of a seat in the Congress of the United States.

Calling A Spade A Spade.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Medical Society of the District of Columbia notes with approbation a new tendency in the press. In The Post of April 8, in an interview with Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., you made use of the word syphilis.

Calling syphilis and gonorrhea by their right names is a new thing in journalism. The papers that have taken this step deserve the thanks of the public.

World Stamp Show.

The hobby of stamp collecting has become so nearly general that an air of diplomatic importance is given to the Third International Philatelic Exhibition, to be held in New York, May 9 to 17. At least ten governments, including that of the United States, have agreed to take official part in the exhibition and to make special displays of their stamps. President Roosevelt will be patron of the show and Great Britain will send motion pictures of the production of the recent Silver Jubilee stamps.

Interest in the Texas centennial commemorative issue is only one of many recent indications of the growing extent of stamp collecting. Airmail developments have given the hobby a big impetus. Ten-cent stores now sell stamp packets for children, and the collections of adults often are valued at many thousands of dollars. The prices of some rare stamps are reminiscent of the enormous sums once paid for Dutch tulip bulbs.

The Post Impressionist

"The Breath of Kings"

Post Office, Thursday.

THERE is really more strength in garlic than we had suspected. There is some vast vitality.

We thought this shy herb was bruised by the fair hand of Jeanette MacDonald, blasted by the scorn she expressed in her salad-letter to the Column. Not so!

Immediately, garlic came back as powerful as ever—in a communication from danseuse Lisa Gardiner. And now here it is breathing further revenge—through the pages of a manuscript from gastronomic-jurisconsult Joseph Danziger.

"Sir," writes the Judge, "I yield to none in my reverential admiration for Jeanette MacDonald. She is not only The MacDonald of the movies; she is also the undisputed queen of operetta.

"Indeed, so far as my purely personal interest goes, she is more than that: she is the vivid reincarnation of another lady—also of the theater—on whom I once had a crush, but who, alas, was married to a fellow whom I liked.

"So I will take up the heaviest cudgel against anybody who dares to assail Miss MacDonald's superb performances behind the footlights or before the Klieg lights.

"But, sir, when it comes to Jeanette in the kitchen, that is something else again. I very much fear that the Iowan hordes of Los Angeles have exerted a baleful influence on her culinary aesthetics.

"For the popular objections to garlic there may be, I admit, a more potent reason than mere Victorian prejudice:

"I remember how I was once propelled across that aquatic gem known as Lake Lugano by a gondolier who sang like an angel and whose skill at the oar awoke the wonder of one who had paddled many a canoe-league through the white waters of the north woods. But when he got to the leeward of us, I realized why comparisons were odorous: there was nothing angelic about the scent.

"Certain people of that general region eat garlic as we eat apples. They become saturated with the oil, and the consequences are undesirable. Moreover, on any tramp through that district, enter the rural osteria with care: those folk love garlic in their cooking—still more in their salads—not wisely, but too well.

"It is easy to understand, therefore, why an intense dislike for garlic is felt by Americans and Britons whose only conception of the weed has been obtained through such commonplace experiences as mine upon the lake aforementioned. Nevertheless, I assure every garlic-hater that he or she has eaten garlic in ignorance and enjoyed it.

"Yes, eaten it aplenty—if not in Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Milan or Budapest, then in London or New York. It is impossible to imagine what you, sir, call a "delectable dinner' in a first-class restaurant with a foreign chef unless you also imagine garlic used in every course—excepting only the oysters and dessert.

"The elements that cause the untutored but aspiring British or American gourmets to rave about 'French cooking' is simply garlic. And by 'French cooking' they merely mean Continental-European cooking, the term arising from the fact that its users have generally first encountered that sort of cooking in Paris.

"I repeat: whether the kitchen be French or German, Danish, Swiss, Austrian or old Russian, the subtle factor which makes it outstanding, which presents the traveling palate with new delights, is essentially the lowly garlic.

"Nevertheless," says Mr. Danziger, "the secret of using garlic discreetly constitutes another story and necessitates the long practice of an intricate art."

This is all very well. But then Mr. Danziger adds an almost feminine postscript. He adds:

"You have twice said, from the pulpit of your Column, that you make the best salad-dressing in the world. My dear sir—my very dear sir—how can you utter so fallacious a sentiment? You make the best salad-dressing in the world? You have never even tasted the best salad-dressing in the world!

"I know it—because I make the best salad-dressing in the world!"

There is only one way to settle such a question as that which Mr. Joseph Danziger thus vociferously raises today and Miss Lisa Gardiner politely intimated a few days ago. The proof of the salad—just as much as of the pudding—is the eating. We propose a three-cornered contest.

Will our two rivals agree to The Post's Dorothea Duncan for the post of judge?

P. S.: We have heard nothing further as to whether or not we intend to reveal our identity.

Colorado National Guard

The Colorado National Guard gets more than its fair share of degrading duty. Once the young soldiers of a generation now grown older were called out under the banners of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. to fight the starving miners and their women and children. Now the warriors of the present establishment patrol the State borders to keep out poor people who want to work.

Militiamen are just young civilians themselves, and they can hardly feel that they are engaged in glorious duty when they put on their uniforms and sidearms and take the field against the poor.

I wonder what goes on in the heart of a Colorado soldier when he catches a little party of destitute and underfed field hands trying to sneak across the State line into Colorado in search of a miserable job in the beet fields or a few dollars' worth of pick-and-shovel employment in the mines.

The big law of the country holds that any American, even an immigrant who can't speak the language very well, has a right to cross State borders and look for work anywhere in the land. In fact, he has the right to cross State borders looking for a place in which to loaf or go on relief. This is one of the great privileges of Americans in their own land.

Passports, visas, quotas, health certificates and cash requirements, which hem in the Europeans and confine them to their own countries, are supposed not to exist in the United States.

Yet Colorado is the third American State to attempt to impose false requirements on the poor approaching their borders in the last three years. Twice California tried it, and Dave Sholtz, of Brooklyn, the Governor of Florida, attempted to exclude from the peninsula persons who had little or no money and seemed likely to become public charges.

Florida, of course, has become notorious as the winter quarters of the Northern underworld. Miami was the winter home of Al Capone for several seasons, and such noted brothel keepers as Johnny Torrio and "Lucky" Luciano have been thrice welcome in the domain of Gov. Sholtz, a sterling statesman and devoted adherent of Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal.

But under the Florida Governor's conception of desirability a man with a wife and children, steaming down the Dixie Highway in a teakettle flivver in search of work that his two hands might do, is barred from a State which gladly entertains the prosperous criminal.

The news from Colorado tells of the detention of parties of penniless—by members of the National Guard who enlisted in the service as warriors.

True, the militiamen didn't ask for this duty of harrying the poor, and the job is a miserable contrast to the glory of the armed service as young men imagine it when they sign their papers. But once they take the State's shilling National Guardsmen find themselves subject to strange and brutal whims of politicians who are pitched into the Governor's chair and assigned to tasks which cannot gratify their martial pride.

• • • • •

The rejected immigrants along the Colorado line can hardly be regarded as a menace to the security of the State if their only evil intention is to look for work. And certainly any immigrant who is willing to hit the road to look for a job in the beet fields at the coolie labor wages which the growers pay cannot be accused of fastidiousness.

A communique from the Colorado front by Col. Neil Kimball, the adjutant of the National Guard, reports that several carloads of the enemy, bound for the beet fields, were repelled at the State line. The Colorado National Guard suffered no casualties in this splendid action, and the troops conducted themselves in accordance with the highest tradition of Ludlow.

Yet if the Colorado militiamen are the average sort of young men who make up the National Guard everywhere there must be some among them who not only felt themselves to be engaged in a rotten task but gave some of their rations and perhaps a few nickels to the ragged wanderers.

The soldiers will not take much pride in a campaign medal for their stand against men who could show callouses on their hands but no evidence of financial stability.

Rail Lines in East To Fight Fare Cut

By the Associated Press.

Railroad sources reported yesterday that major Eastern roads, with the exception of the Baltimore & Ohio, will file a court suit challenging a recent Interstate Commerce Commission ruling sharply reducing passenger fares.

The Baltimore & Ohio, these quarters said, will file rates at once in conformity with the commission's ruling, which fixed coach fares at 2 cents a mile and fares on Pullmans at 3 cents, effective June 2.

Heads of the other Eastern roads, rail officials said, will meet in New York today to decide upon final details of the action against the commission. They probably will ask an injunction to delay the June 2 effective date of the low rates pending final determinatoin of the case. Their suit probably will be filed in Federal court at Philadelphia tomorrow.

Roosevelt Sees Howe Funeral, Returns Here

President Cancels Visit to Hyde Park to Hurry Back to Capital.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt returned to Washington yesterday at 8:40 p. m. from a trip to Fall River, Mass., where he attended the burial of Louis M. Howe, his secretary.

Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, the President motored directly to the White House.

Although Capitol Hill leaders were preparing for the opening of a House battle today on the tax bill, the White House said Mr. Roosevelt had made no engagements to talk with them last night.

With Mrs. Roosevelt, the President remained in his private car during the all-day ride, reading most of the way on his sad journey to the interment of his devoted friend and secretary.

Sailor Sounds Taps.

The Rev. Edmond J. Cleveland, Episcopalian rector, read the church ritual as sailors lowered the casket. Mr. Roosevelt stood with bared head with Mrs. Roosevelt and their sons, Franklin and John, a few feet back of the family of Howe. A sailor sounded taps.

The President held the train a few minutes at Fall River for a consoling chat with Mrs. Howe and the children, and then retraced his route to the Capital, from where his journey began late Tuesday night.

Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, boarded the President's special at Providence, on the return trip, but he was just on his way to Washington and no business was occasioned by his call.

The President has not commented on the tax measure finally reported to the House by its Ways and Means Committee, but he is apparently intent upon being at hand for any aid which may be necessary in the House consideration of this important legislation.

Successor in Doubt.

He changed original plans to spend the remainder of the week at his home in Hyde Park, N. Y., to return directly tonight to the White House.

The President has given no indication of a successor to Howe as his secretary, and there is some speculation as to whether he will name one immediately.

Stephen T. Early and Marvin H. McIntyre, associates of Howe, who have shared his secretarial duties during his long illness, accompanied the President on the burial trip.

Funeral services for Howe were held in the White House Tuesday.

Johnny Torrio Arrested.

White Plains, N. Y., April 22 (U.P.).—Johnny Torrio, Chicago gang leader in the lush days of Al Capone, was arrested today by agents of the United States Treasury's alcohol tax unit and charged with illegal sale of liquor. They said Torrio was about to flee the country.

Pipe Line Coal Transportation Hinted in Freight Rate Fight

Mine Association Official, Opposing Extension of Surcharges, Cites Shipment by Water Pressure of Powdered Fuel as Alternate.

By the Associated Press.

The possibility that coal-carrying railroads might be confronted with competition from coal transportation by pipe line was presented yesterday at an Interstate Commerce Commission freight rate hearing.

John D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association, opposing a plea by class 1 railroads for indefinite extension of emergency freight surcharges scheduled to expire July 1, cited "piped coal" as a possible shipping medium unless rail rates are whittled down.

Battle explained after the hearing that the coal would be propelled through an 8 to 10-inch pipe line by water under pressure.

The coal first would be "ground as fine as talcum power," he added, and dried at its destination. It would be used in powdered form in furnaces designed for the purpose.

"The plan is being studied by engineers," he continued, adding that it already has been tried experimentally for short distances and may eventually be developed to carry coal for distances up to 200 miles.

Over long distances, he declared, "booster stations" would be necessary at intermediate points to keep the coal moving.

As to the surcharges, Battle told the commission they had cost some railroads more in added transportation expenses on coal for their own use than they had provided in revenue.

Railroads have contended that the charges are necessary to aid them in meeting rising operating expenses. The charges are estimated by the carriers to provide $104,500,000 of additional revenue annually.

Tax Bill Held Inadequate

dend collections, which would carry much of the revenue over into the next taxable year.

Their revenue hopes for the bill were as follows:

New graded tax on corporate earnings and taxation of dividend distributions—$591,000,000.

"Windfall" tax of 80 per cent on unpaid and refunded processing taxes—$100,000,000.

Continuing capital stock tax at half-rate for one year, and repeal of excess profits tax after 1 year—$83,000,000.

Change in taxation of income resulting from trust and other corporate liquidations—$40,000,000.

Total revenue claimed—$814,000,000.

By sidetracking $221,000,000 in revived processing taxes asked by the President, the Ways and Means Committee ended all hope of raising $517,000,000 in so-called "temporary" taxes to apply for the next three-year period.

On the basis of the committee's own estimates, these temporary taxes will fall $334,000,000 short of the amount the President said will be needed, and it was to meet this expected deficiency that the report suggested possibility of Congressional tax action next session.

What the Senate will do with the House tax proposals remained problematical. It is certain that an Adminsitration effort will be made in that chamber to revive the processing tax proposal discarded by the House committee.

Would Retain Income Ttax.

Strong sentiment, meanwhile, was developing in the Senate for retention, in part at least, of the present corporate income tax, which the House bill repeals. One plan suggested would superimpose on the existing corporation income tax a moderate levy to induce distribution of earnings. Proponents of this plan point out that the income tax is a tried and tested method of raising revenue, and to cast it aside entirely in favor of an experimental revenue-producer might not be wise at a time when the Treasury needs assured cash.

Representative David Lewis (Democrat), of Maryland, laid a similar proposal before the House Ways and Means Committee, but he was out-voted.

Representative Arthur P. Lamneck (Democrat), of Ohio the only member of the Ways and Means majority voting not to report the bill, may lead a conservative Democratic movement in the House to retain the corporation income tax.

If the $334,000,000 three-year revenue shortage becomes a House issue, one Democratic member of the committee indicated last night he may offer amendments which would bring the yield up to full amount asked by the President. It was hinted that excise taxes could be imposed for this purpose, but the committee now is preponderantly opposed to tapping new excise sources. It would like to get rid of some of the excises now in force, but dares not attempt it at this time.

Listed in yesterday's majority report as the "major purposes" of the proposal to tax corporate earnings, in relation to amounts withheld from distribution as dividends, were the following:

"1. To prevent avoidance of surtax by individuals through the accumulation of income by corporations.

"2. To remove serious inequities and inequalities between corporate, partnership, and individual forms of business organization; and

"3. To remove the inequity as between large and small shareholders resulting from the present flat corporate rates."

Although the President stressed "simplification" as one of the objectives of the reform, inability of most members to comprehend fully the complexities involved in the new tax proposal may have led the committee to soft-pedal this point. The report stated merely:

"Some simplification of administration should ultimately result from the new plan. The credit for dividends in computing normal tax will disappear from the individual tax return. The capital stock and excess-profits tax will be eliminated after the first year. This will remove the burden required in the preparation and verification of capital stock tax returns, which will become more burdensome year by year in connection with adjustments made to declared capital stock values."

Deny Hardships.

Running through the report was a series of denials that the bill will impose any undue hardships on corporations. Small companies could withhold as much as 40 per cent of their earnings from distribution, and large corporation 30 per cent, without paying more taxes than under the present system, it was contended. It was further stressed that no attempt is made under the bill to tax past accumulations of surplus.

Strategy of both House and Senate leaders from now on will be to clear right-of-way for taxes and relief at every turn, sidetracking minor unwanted measures in the process. These bills they contend must be enacted before Congress can adjourn. Starting tax debate today, the House has its adjournment parade well underway. The relief bill and naval appropriations will follow taxes in the House.

Farm Income $513,000,000 During March

Increase Shown Over February Despite Threat of Baby Drouth.

Untouched as yet by what Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace yesterday called a "baby drought," farm cash income soared to $513,000,000 for marketings in March, the Department announced.

Revised February figures totaled $467,000,000, and were $429,000,000 in March of last year, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Farmers also received $15,000,000 in Government rental and benefit payments during March, as compared with nothing in February and with $50,000,000 in March, 1935.

At his press conference, which was attended by half-a-hundred farm journal editors from throughout the Nation, Secretary Wallace exhibited several large weather maps while commenting on the generally satisfactory rainfall over the country.

Huge Area Is Affected.

The maps disclosed a huge area, roughly estimated at about 30,000,000 acres, including nearly all of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, eastern New Mexico, southeast Colorado, western Missouri and southern Nebraska, in which the rainfall deficiency has become acute.

The Secretary, while declining to speculate on the possibilities of a lesser repetition of the catastrophic dorught of 1934, said:

"While it's hard to say as yet whether the Government will take any particular action, if the area goes on through May still dry, we'll be terrifically concerned."

In Texas, precipitation has been 34 per cent of normal in March, and 44 per cent in April; western Oklahoma, 33 per cent and 5 per cent; eastern Oklahoma, 6 per cent and 12 per cent; in western Kansas, 32 per cent and 9 per cent; central Kansas, 20 per cent and 5 per cent, and in eastern Kansas, 32 per cent and 9 per cent.

In 1934 a much larger area was laid waste, with all of the Great Plains affected. This year the Mountain States and the Dakotas are in much better shape, the Secretary said. He reminded reporters that the 1934 drought was more than twice as bad as any drought the country had ever suffered previously, with a cut of more than 2,000,000,000 bushels of grain from the previous year.

He then pointed out that the steady decline in retail food prices was attributable to the fact that "we're getting farther and farther away from those drought conditions."

City Market More Favorable.

Wallace, attributing the 8 per cent increase in cash farm income to the "real pick-up in business," said that the cities had become more able to absorb farm produce.

The total cash income from marketings and benefit payments to the farmers was $1,554,000,000 for the first quarter of this year, as compared with $1,453,000,000 for the same period last year.

The increase in the March income, according to the figures, came from increased marketings that more than offset a decline of about 5 per cent in farm prices. Marketings of grains, potatoes, truck crops, hogs and eggs increased more than seasonally. The March increase was in considerable contrast to the usual seasonal decline.

Boy Star's Mother Loses Court Move

Los Angeles, April 22 (AP).—Freddie Bartholomew's mother, fighting to regain legal custody of her famous actor-son, lost her opening courtroom skirmish today and made immediate plans to "go ahead with the battle."

Superior Judge Harry Archibald denied a motion of the mother, Mrs. Lillian May Bartholomew, to set aside the guardianship of Miss Myllicent Bartholomew, Freddie's aunt.

A surprise move by the boy's father, Cecil Llewellyn Bartholomew, left the mother opposed on three sides as the case was called.

Previously, Freddie's parents had filed affidavits contending Miss Bartholomew took the boy from England "on a pretext" and became his guardian "by mistake."

But as court opened today, a new affidavit and a cablegram from Bartholomew, in London, were read by Miss Bartholomew's attorneys. They stated: "Said deponent (Freddie's father) has complete confidence in Myllicent Bartholomew and feels that the interest of the minor will be best served by leaving his control in Myllicent Bartholomew."

The cablegram, attorneys said, withdrew Bartholomew's power of attorney, previously given to his wife.

Building Worker Loses Foot Crushed by Stone

James McGuire, 40, of 1763 P street northwest, a workman on the new Department of Interior building, suffered a crushed foot by a falling stone yesterday, necessitating amputation.

McGuire was assisting in the placing of a large stone on the seventh floor of the building when the stone slipped onto his foot. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians amputated the foot and also treated him for a fractured left arm and shock. His condition was said to be serious.

A. B. C. Board Revokes Beer Dealer's License

License of Louis Rubin, 406 Eighth street southeast, was revoked by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board following a hearing yesterday on charges that he permitted sale of beer on Sunday, and permitted disorder in his place.

Rubin was accused of attempting to assault three policemen acting as inspectors for the Beverage Board. The policemen were Robert W. Murray, Winfred D. Young and Frank A. Jordon, who, with Private Harry O. Dodson, were witnesses against Rubin at the hearing.

Cuban Visitor

Dr. Miguel Mariano Gomez, President-elect of Cuba.

New President Of Cuba Here; Praises Capital

Gomez on Trip Pending Inauguration May 20, in U. S. for Rest.

The man who will be President of Cuba on and after May 20 is about 5 feet 7 inches tall, speaks and understands English passably well and thinks Washington is a beautiful city.

As much was noted on the pads of more than a score of newspapermen who flung questions at Dr. Miguel Mariano Gomez yesterday at a press conference in the Cuban Embassy. They found him to be a genial sort, albeit one who refuses to commit himself on such controversial issues as sugar quotas, at least before his inauguration.

Dr. Gomez, after he had been announced by Ambassador Patterson, launched voluntarily upon a tribute to California's climate, Washington's hospitality and American graciousness in general. But when the response was a barrage of questions pertaining to sugar, imperialism and silver, the President-elect tactfully answered in generalities.

About this time the understanding and Scottish-bred Cuban Ambassador came to the rescue with a typewritten "statement to the press." It begins:

"Upon my arrival in this beautiful city of Washington, the name of which evokes the memory of the first among the most illustrious founders of this great Nation, it is an honor and a pleasure to salute its officials and to express my most cordial greetings to the people of the United States, to whom the people of Cuba are linked by bonds of invariable friendship."

Here for Rest.

The formal statement adds Dr. Gomez's sojourn has no political significance, but was undertaken only for rest purposes and that social and economic conditions are on the upgrade in Cuba, credit for which is due in part to co-operation of the Roosevelt Administration.

"The reciprocal trade agreement in force," said Dr. Gomez, "has paved the way for these satisfactory results by facilitating commercial intercourse between Cuba and the United States. This good neighbor policy has also contributed indirectly to restore peace and order which today prevail in Cuba.

"As to my part, I firmly resolve to do all within my power from the position to which I have had the honor of being elected by my countrymen, to fulfill my duty with the highest consciousness of my responsibility. I shall be careful, during my term of office, with the cooperation of the other constitutional powers, to adapt in a judicious manner and with a deep sense of social justice the internal organzation of my country to tne necessities and changes of the economic life of the world.

Seeks U. S. Friendship.

"It will be for me a matter of great pleasure to contribute to increase, if such is possible, the historic ties of friendship and common interests that bind my country to the people of the United States.

"I shall always endeavor to further the maintenance of close relations with the other nations, especially with those that constitute the great international Pan-American community, which is destined to be a magnificent example to the world of the advantages that may be obtained from permanent peace, and from a just and adequate cooperation and co-ordination of all interests."

Dr. Gomez was guest of honor at a Pan American Union luncheon following the press conference. Thence he returned to the embassy for a tea, and last night he was a dinner guest of Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State and former Ambassador to Havana, and Mrs. Welles.

He will be received at the White House by President Roosevelt this afternoon. The President-elect and his party will entrain at 7 p. m. for New York for a week of sightseeing before sailing for Havana next Thursday.

Tobacco Compact Bill Sent to White House

By the Associated Press.

The House agreed to Senate amendments to the tobacco States compact bill yesterday and sent it to the White House.

Tobacco-growing States would be authorized to enter into agreements for interstate co-operation to control production.

The Senate passed the bill Tuesday, amending it to prohibit price-fixing and the establishing of production monopolies by the States.

The bill gives Congressional consent for compact among the flue-cured, burley and dark fire-cured tobacco-growing States of Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. A compact for any other type of leaf by any other State would have to be approved by Congress after adoption.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, said last night he had received information indicating that the recent crash of an airliner near Uniontown, Pa., which killed 12 persons, had been caused by "something phoney" about the radio directional beam.

The Senator made this statement after receiving a verbal report on the tragedy from Col. Harold E. Hartney, special aviation investigator for the Senate Commerce Committee, of which Copeland is chairman.

Hartney had just returned to Washington after attending a series of hearings at Uniontown and Pittsburgh in connection with the accident.

"We're not certain, of course," Copeland said, "but we are pretty well satisfied there was something wrong with the beam. That poor pilot was miles off his course."

The Senator said one result of the tragedy was that it appeared to have made the Senate sympathetic to the need for additional aviation safety and led to an increase, voted yesterday, of about $350,000 in funds for new radio beams to guide aviators.

"One of our troubles in this country," Copeland said, "is our radio beams are too long. We need more substations along the route of the beams to increase their intensity."

"Even the slightest deviation might be enough to cause tragedy," he continued. "The pilot of this plane, believing he was near Ebensburg, apparently figured he had only a 2,000-foot mountain to cross. He actually faced a 2,900-foot mountain and ran smack into it."

Copeland said the Commerce Committee would resume hearings Tuesday on the investigation of recent airplane crashes.

Hopkins

for educational expenditures it appears that comparatively little would be spent for white-collar work and the kind of jobs generally referred to as "boondoggling." It is significant, however, that the Administration is asking that the appropriation be made in a lump sum with no earmarking of any amount for specific purposes. Thus the estimates given to the committee by Hopkins would not be binding and the money could be shifted about for nearly any purpose.

There are, however, increasing indications that the Administration may be compelled to accept earmarked appropriations. Representative Beiter (Democrat), of New York, announced that he had obtained 124 signatures on a petition asking that $700,000,000 of the appropriation be earmarked for the Public Works Administration, headed by Secretary Ickes, and that he had 82 additional commitments in favor of the plan. Nearly all the signers and those committed are Democrats. The plan is expected to be generally favored by Republicans.

Lines Up Formidable Group.

Beiter has thus lined up a formidable group in favor of the Ickes relief theory, in spite of the opposition of President Roosevelt. The New Yorker's hope is to obtain sufficient strength to bind a Democratic House caucus. He hopes to put his proposal up to the President next week.

Beiter reported that members of the House are beginning to receive letters, mostly from WPA officials in the States, asking that they not sign the petition. Beiter yesterday sent a letter to members of the House explaining what he believes to be the advantages of turnng $700,000,000 over to Ickes. He listed the following 12 reasons for his stand:

"1. Projects definitely relieve unemployment by helping men to find work in their proper trades.

"2. One and one-half to three men are put to work indirectly for every one employed directly on construction.

"3. Direct and indirect employment will afford at least 1,140,000 men employment for a year.

"4. Per capita cost to the Government per man employed per year will not exceed $615, direct and indirect.

"5. Public works projects materially stimulate industry by multiplying business volume from two to three times the original transaction.

Projects Can Finish Early.

"6. Projects can soon be started and can be completed within the year.

"7. Projects are economically sound and of permanent value.

"8. Projects constructed by contract yield $100,000,000 in taxes to various governments, most of which would be lost if work is done by Government organizations.

"9. PWA is a smooth-running organization, having public confidence and is noted for its integrity.

"10. More than 6,130 approved projects are on file. The projects were submitted in good faith by political subdivisions, which have found that they have been hoodwinked and funds are not available.

"11. When the depression is over, all the public dollars expended will soon pay dividends in socially-valuable, Nation-enriching works.

"12. Sudden abandonment of PWA now would kick the props out from under construction, and affiliated industries, precipitating further unemployment."

Meanwhile, Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, renewed his demand in the Senate that a resolution calling for investigation of relief be adopted. The resolution was presented seven weeks go by Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, and has been resting in the Audit and Control Committee. Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, said he had not called a meeting of the committee.

In the House, Representative Snell, of New York, minority leader, said that WPA is planning to make 50 newsreels of various boondoggle projects for free circulation during the Presidential campaign."

"This is a bold and flagrant diversion of relief funds for campaign purposes," he said.

He said he had been unable to determine how much the pictures would cost, but added:

"I, for one, vigorously protest this shocking distortion of the relief program to the direct service of the New Deal Presidential campaign."

Low-Pay Workers Barred by Colorado

Trinidad, Colo., April 22 (AP).—Adj. Gen. Neil W. Kimball, directing Colorado's border blockade against "cheap labor," said today he refused State entry to five persons who carired railroad passes and claimed they were hired for work in sugar-beet fields at $1.10 a day.

More than 80 persons were turned back at the border today, third day of Gov. Ed C. Johnson's military ban on indigent workers, which followed his assertion railroads and sugar-beet interests were planning to import "cheap labor."

Kimball said the five men carried passes on the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad, signed by "Henry Swain." In Denver the Governor identified Swain as a trustee of the road. Wilson McCarthy, another trustee, said Swain was in Mississippi and that he knew nothing of the passes.

How a Baby GROWS

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

THE PRENATAL HAND—Hands follow the development of eyes in the normal growth of a baby. The first seven of today's pictures are drawings, showing step by step the development of the prenatal hand, how it takes shape and eventually becomes the hand at birth. Early in the prenatal period the hand takes shape. Nerve fibers grow into a hundred muscles of shoulders, arms, fingers. Gradually these muscles come under brain control. Early grasping, as shown in the picture at the right, is pawlike. Later grasping becomes delicate and deft. TOMORROW: The Infant Hand, From Birth to One Year.

The Cinema to Rule Field for A Second Week

Film Plays of Surpassing Novelty and Merit Due on Local Screens.

Playing to capacity audiences at practically every performance, "The Great Ziegfeld" bids fair to set a new attendance record for motion-picture spectacles "road-showed" into the National Theater. In this magnificent Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, the career of the late Florenz Ziegfeld, jr., is glorified no less than he was accustomed to glorify the American girl in his stage productions. The title role in the picture is taken by William Powell, with Luise Rainer and Myrna Loy, respectively, in the roles of Anna Held and Billie Burke, the two women he married. Many other principals, including Fanny Brice, Harriet Hoctor, Charles Judels and others of the original Ziegfeld forces, lend brilliance to both story and musical treatment. The musical ensembles are marvels of opulence and splendor, the score entrancing, the dancing incomparable and the story by William Anthony McGuire such as to bring a blush of pride to the cheek of Ziegfeld if he could return and view its pictorial visualization. "The Great Ziegfeld" is presented twice daily, with all seats reserved.

H. G. Wells makes his local debut as an author of original scripts for the cinema with "Things to Come," an imaginative narrative based on his book of "The Shape of Things to Come," to be revealed on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In this fascinating subject, Wells conducts the spectator through the next World War to the creation of a new World Order which revolutionizes the viewpoint and mode of living of mankind. The second half of the picture—which already has been previewed in Washington by a distinguished invited audience in Wardman Park Theater—is an astounding disclosure of original creative thinking and the capacity of the modern motion picture for extending its scope beyond the boundaries of mere everyday actuality. Raymond Massey is cast in the role of Cabal, the principal character in the story. The space gun will startle those who see it for the first time. In fact, the whole story will set those who see it to thinking.

Pat O'Brien and Josephine Hutchinson, who scored so decisively in the same company's "Oil for the Lamps of China," will be seen as co-stars again in Warners' "I Married a Doctor," to be seen as chief feature of the screen portion of the bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow. "I Married a Doctor" is a film adaptation of Sinclair Lewis' novel of "Main Street." The stage half of the bill will be headlined by Bill Robinson, best of the tap dancers, recently seen with the late Will Rogers in "In Old Kentucky" and with Shirley Temple in "The Littlest Rebel."

• • • •

"The Moon's Our Home," adapted from the serial story by Faith Baldwin, will be the major screen attraction at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with Margaret Sullavan and Henry Fonda co-starred in the principal roles—a young movie actress and an equally youthful novelist. The supporting cast is headed by Henrietta Crosman, Beulah Bondi, Walter Brennan, Charles Butterworth and Dorothy Stickney. The story is an amusing one of a tempestuous romance. Ray Noble and his orchestra will provide the headline act of the stage portion of the entertainment. Specialists with the band include Al Bowlly, Nora and Jimmy Bell. Nice, Florio and Lubow and an act billed simply as Ziegfried also will be presented.

Beginning with a special premiere presentation tomorrow night at 8:45, the widely discussed foreign-made picture, "Ecstasy," will be shown on the screen at the Belasco Theater. Beginning Saturday morning, showings will be continuous, beginning at approximately 11 a. m. The subject matter of this film play was deemed such as to warrant the confiscation and destruction of the first prints that reached this country. The ban since has been lifted. The picture, although produced in Czechoslovakia, is provided with English titles. It will be supplemented by the usual array of short-reel auxiliaries.

The feature of the new bill announced for the week beginning tomorrow at RKO-Keith's will be a revival of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," with the late Will Rogers as star. In supporting roles will be seen Myrna Loy, Maureen O'Sullivan, William Farnum, Frank Albertson, Brandon Hurst and Mitchell Lewis.

• • • •

Freddie Bartholomew, Dolores Costello Barrymore and C. Aubrey Smith, supported by a perfectly selected cast, will renew the F street popularity of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" for the week beginning tomorrow, when it will be shown as chief screen feature at the Columbia Theater. Adapted from the story by Frances Hodgson Burnett, "Fauntleroy" has been acclaimed as one of the best pictures of the year.

"Rhodes, the Empire Builder," with Walter Huston in the title role and a cast headed by Basil Sydney, Oscar Homolka and Frank Cellier in support, continues to flourish on the screen at the Metropolitan. "One Night of Love," the first screen feature in which Grace Moore achieved stellar distinction, is being shown at the Little Theater, where it is being greeted by large audiences with all of the enthusiasm that attended its initial presentation. About The Showshops

BELL.

Music lovers among the moviegoers of the Capital will not be annoyed by any dearth of melody during the impending fortnight. With Ray Noble and his orchestra making their local debut on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow, Rudy Vallee and His Connecticut Yankees following in on the same stage a week from tomorrow, Friday, May 1, and Ted Fio-Rito and his orchestra from Hollywood's famous Cocoanut Grove opening the same date at the Warner Brothers' Earle, the air should be alive with the well-known "concord of sweet sound."

The last time Mr. Vallee was here as an unhappy member of the cast of George White's recently deceased "Scandals," he was afforded no opportunity whatever to strut his stuff, as the saying goes. He murmured his way through a few songs and let it go at that. Everything will be different when he comes to the Fox. He will have his own band with him to participate in what he is pleased to term his "Punch Bowl Revue," which sounds surprisingly like a championship bout of fisticuffs down on Long Island, but probably isn't. Among the 30 said to be featured in the revue may be mentioned Cyril Smith, comic; Red Stanley, vocalist; The Three Graces, harmonists; Seab Waring, impersonator; Ford, Boey & Daley, novelty dancers; The Gentlemen Songsters, a male quartet, and Hildegarde Halliday, billed as a "dramatist." All this, plus Lehigh's little brother and the Yankees, ought to spell out quite an entertainment.

Popular on stage, screen and radio, the Fio-Rito entertainers were seen not too long ago with Dick Powell and Joan Blondell in "Broadway Gondolier" on the silver sheet and will bring all of the specialists who took part in that celluloid carnival of Venice frolic to the Earle stage. These include Muzzy Marcellino, singer; The Three Debutantes, versatile vocalists—which is a sort of slang for singers; Stanley Hickman and "Candy," double-voiced comedy singer—which is a sort of slang for vocalist. They will present a complete stage revue, with a background of what has been described as "the smoothest music on the airlanes."

The vicious rivalry between these two celebrated organizations may be expected to break out frequently during their local engagements in the form of doughnut-dunking contests in some convenient luncheonette not too far from either theater! The boys are like that.

• • • •

Although unforseen circumstances precluded personal participation in that Loew junket to Baltimore yesterday, to hear Ray Noble and his orchestra, it nevertheless has come to notice that Mr. Noble, the son of a distinguished English surgeon, was trained for a career as a classical composer, but attained fame in the field of popular music instead. This in itself is not unusual. But Ray Noble is also a lyric writer, as few composers are, and, in addition, is probably the only lyric writer in captivity who is a graduate of a major English university and can achieve both good rhymes and good grammar without suffering creation's nerve-wracking travail. Beyond that, he is the only British composer of popular tunes who had a wide following on this side before ever setting foot in these more or less United States. And another thing. Until he landed in New York, Noble was the only band leader in the world without a band! Recalling some we have heard, that is not a bad idea.

From Mr. Houston R. Harper, president of the Hotel Houston Co., Inc., resident at 2920 Macomb street northwest, there comes the following letter under date of April 21, 1936:

"Dear Mr. Bell: We residents of Cleveland Park read your interesting column daily with much interest. (Ed. aside: Hear, hear!) We are writing to ask you if you will not help us to get the name of Warner Brothers' new theater changed to the 'Cleveland Park Theater.' It has been stated in the papers that it is to be called the 'Uptown Theater,' which has no significance and, we believe, would be a misnomer. Most of us have been residents of Cleveland Park from 10 to 25 years and the name is associated with everything that is good and praiseworthy in civic life. It would be far more pleasing and enduring to have it named the 'Cleveland Park.' We have written to Mr. Payette, asking him to consider naming the theater as we have suggested. We believe it will be one of the well-paying units of the Warner Brothers' chain. Your assistance will be greatly appreciated. Cordially yours,

(Signed) HOUSTON R. HARPER."

Having reproduced Mr. Harper's soundly logical letter, there seems to be nothing further this column can do in the matter. If his sentiments represent a widespread community interest in the new Warner project, there is no reason to believe that Zone Manager John J. Payette will not give them sympathetic consideration as a good-will factor in inaugurating his company's latest enterprise.

There is, of course, the matter of an excessive number of letters and spaces in the name "Cleveland Park" that would be difficult to accommodate in electric signs and advertising. While Harry M. Crandall, founder of the theaters now comprising the Warner circuit, favored the longest names he could devise for his leading houses—to differentiate them from those under other ownerships going in for short names—"Cleveland Park" is two letters longer than "Avenue Grand" and four letters longer than "Ambassador," both of which are long enough. And there would be no point whatever in naming the new house either the "Cleveland" or the "Park" if there is any idea of fulfilling Mr. Harper's wish for a community identification.

• • • •

So, from Patricia Bowman, recently co-starred with Everett Marshall and Yascha Bunchuk on the stage at Loew's Fox, comes a cordial note from her home in New York expressing warm appreciation of pleasant things written in these columns about her dancing. Popular Players Again Co-Starred

Pat O'Brien and Josephine Hutchinson, who scored so substantial a success in "Oil for the Lamps of China," have been co-starred again by the Warner Brothers in "I Married a Doctor," the screen version of Sinclair Lewis' novel of "Main Street," scheduled to take possession of the screen at the Warner Brothers Earl Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Mr. O'Brien, a recent visitor to the Capitol, and Miss Hutchinson, a former resident, seem to have been on an airplane ride when the cameraman snapped his shutter.

Connecticut Avenue's Citizens to Reorganize

The Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association, disbanded two years ago, will be reorganized today at a meeting in All Souls Church, Cathedral avenue and Woodley place northwest.

One of the oldest citizens associations in the city, it was disbanded after many improvements sought were obtained. Transportation difficulties and desire by older members to resume activity was given as the reasons for forming again.

Nearly 400 members were obtained by the membership committee of Chevy Chase Citizens Association, which supervized the new movement. The meeting will begin at 8 p. m.

President-Elect of Cuba, Wife Honored at Embassy

Dr. Patterson Host at Reception Here for Senor and Senora Gomez; Brilliant Diplomatic Throng Enjoys Dancing at Party.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Washington society yesterday afternoon paid homage to the President-elect of Cuba and Senora de Gomez at a reception in their honor given by the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson, at the embassy.

Senora de Gomez, who wore her light-brown hair done simply in a knot at the back of her neck, was dressed in a gown of black, made with short sleeves in a cape effect and with a skirt of ankle length, shirred down the front. Palms, bouquets of spring flowers, roses and Japanese iris, which were used in all the rooms, formed the background for the colorful gowns of the guests. Senorita Serafina de Gomez, eldest daughter of the President-elect and Senora de Gomez, wore gray crepe with a corsage of white orchids tipped in purple and her black hair in a braid circling her head. She was one of the most striking young girls in the large gathering and was the center of much attention. She was being introduced by Senorita Olga Patterson, daughter of the Ambassador.

The table in the dining room from which the guests were served had a large center bouquet of spring flowers and was lighted with white candles in high silver candelabra. Candied oranges decorated with stems and green leaves, lying on a plate of spun sugar, and a large cake with an American flag designed in frosting contributed another decorative touch.

There was dancing in the ballroom during the reception, which was from 4 to 6 o'clock.

De Espils Present.

In the dining room holding a court all their own, were the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil, the latter gowned in all black with a silver fox scarf; the Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther; the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, who was accompanied by his three daughters, Senorita Marta Trucco, Senorita Graciela Trucco and Senorita Rebeca Trucco; the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Mehmet Munir Ertegun, accompanied by the Secretary of Legation, Mr. Ibrahim Sefullah, and the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. Aranha.

Also the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Minister of Austria, who wore a black frock trimmed with white pleating at the square neckline; the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, who wore an all-black ensemble, with a tiny hat trimmed with black ostrich feathers and a silver fox cape; Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama, who was accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Victor Alfaro, and her son, Senor Rogelio Alfaro, and the Minister of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro.

Others who were there enjoying the refreshments or dancing to the strains of Cuban music were the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne; Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister of Finland, who wore a green-and-black checked frock with a black hat; Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo, the Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Sokolowska, the Second Secretary of the Polish Embassy, Mr. Edward Kulikowski, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Joanna Kulikowska-Higersberger, who wore a flame-colored gown with black accessories, and by the Attache of the Embassy, Mr. Michal Budny.

Di Sant'Orsolas Attend.

Among other members of the Diplomatic Corps were the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and Marchioness di Sant-Orsola, the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable, the Attache of the Argentine Embassy, Senor Don Erasto M. Villa, and First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Rodriguez, who have just returned from their wedding trip. Senora de Rodriguez was before her marriage several months ago Miss Marjorie alman.

Also there was the Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy, Brig. Gen. Juan F. Azcarate, who expects to be transferred as Minister to Paris this spring. The Third Secretary of the French Embassy, Mr. Charles Saint, was dancing during the afternoon, as were the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Baroness van Breuger Douglas; the Secretary of the Legation, Jonkheer H. M. van der Wyck, and Mlle. Nella Veverka, daughter of the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka.

Others at the reception were Mrs. William T. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, the latter wearing a black gown with a turban of electric blue and fuschia; Mrs. Russell Bennett and her daughter, Miss Florence Harris, Miss Diana Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, jr., and former Representative and Mrs. Fred A. Britten, who were talking about their plans to leave Washington, in June, for Cleveland, to attend the Republican convention. Judge and Mrs. Ernest H. Van Fossan were chatting with their many friends, as were Mrs. McKenney Mallan, Senator Arthur Capper, and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, who was accompanied by her guest, Miss Lucy Martin, of Chicago. Mrs. Campbell Pritchett was present, wearing a gayly printed afternoon gown. Mr. Robert Jackson, and Mrs. Millard F. West, jr., also attended.

Mr. Bagby Entertains For Countess Bernadotte

Mr. George L. Bagby, who has returned to his apartment at the Ambassador Hotel in New York, following a brief visit in the Capital, entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Ambassador in honor of Countess Folke Bernadotte, of Sweden.

The other guests were Lady Lister Kaye, of London, who spent several weeks in Washington this winter at the Mayflower Hotel; Mrs. William Adams Kissam, Mr. and Mrs. H. Edward Manville, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford N. Carver, Prince Henry II, of Reuss, and Count Paul Kotzebue.

Miss Connor to Wed.

Mr. Dennis Connor, of Washington, announces the engagement of his daughter, Miss Margaretta Connor, to Mr. Charles Warren Bogan, son of Mr. and Ms. Joseph A. Bogan, of Washington.

Daughter Is Born.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. O'Connor, of 5400 Nebraska avenue, announce the birth of a daughter on March 27. She will be christened Frances Margaret O'Connor.

The additional guests were the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Sumner Welles; Senor Dr. Julio Morales Coello, of Cuba, brother-in-law of Senor Gomez, and the Minister of the Cuban Embassy, Dr. Jose T. Baron; Senor Dr. Francisco Arango, of Cuba, and the Director General of the Pan-American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe.

Last night the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles entertained at dinner in honor of Senor and Senora de Gomez at their home at Oxon Hill, Md. This evening the President-elect and his wife will be entertained at dinner by the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. R. Walton Moore, at his home in Fairfax, after which they will leave Washington to return to Cuba.

Miss Maloney's Troth Revealed

New Jersey Girl to Marry Seldon Marvin Ely, Jr., on June 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Shortall, of Washington, have announced the engagement of their niece, Miss Abigail Gwynne Maloney, of Spring Lake, N. J., to Mr. Seldon Marvin Ely, jr., of this city.

The engagement was announced at a supper at the Columbia Country Club Sunday, and earlier in the afternoon Mrs. Frank Norman Van Brunt, of Spring Lake, was hostess at a tea in compliment to her niece.

The bride-to-be visits frequently in Washington as a guest of her aunt, Mrs. Shortall, a well-known club woman, former president of the Political Study Club. She is a direct descendant of Capt. John Gwynne, was educated at Zaraphath Academy and attended Boston University. Mr. Ely is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Selden Marvin Ely, the former a well-known educator of the Capital.

The prospective bridegroom is a graduate of Yale University and a member of the Yale Club of Washington. The wedding will take place June 20 in Spring Lake. During the week of the wedding the relatives of the young people and members of the wedding party will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Van Brunt at the Hotel Shoreham in Spring Lake.

Among the guests at the supper party given by Mr. and Mrs. Shortall were Mr. and Mrs. Van Brunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ely, Representative and Mrs. Tilman Bacon Parker, Commander and Mrs. Benjamin Soule Gantz, Dr. and Mrs. P. Lee Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Keohan, and Col. and Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby.

To Entertain Today.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers will give tea from 5 to 6:30 today at the Congressional Club for the Massachusetts members of the D. A. R. attending the convention now in session here. Receiving with her will be the other members of Congress from Massachusetts—Representatives and Senators and their wives.

Gifts From the Middle West

Underwood & Underwood.

Snapped yesterday at the Iowa table at the final luncheon meeting of the 73 Club, composed of the wives of members elected to the Seventy-third Congress, are, left to right, Mrs. Guy M. Gillette, Mrs. Fred Biermann, Mrs. Otha Wearin, Mrs. Edward Eicher and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who was a guest of honor. Club members representing the Middle West were hostesses at the luncheon.

Middle Western States were represented by their products as well as by wives of members of their Congressional delegations yesterday afternoon at the 73 club's final luncheon of the season in the Raleigh Hotel.

Mrs. Donald C. Dobbins, of Illinois, was chairman of arrangements, assisted by a committee.

Mrs. Pierce Butler, of Minnesota, wife of Mr. Justice Butler, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, of Iowa, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, were guests of honor.

The large ballroom, scene of the luncheon, suggested a fair with tables near the entrance piled high with sample and full-sized packages of foodstuffs and other products for which the individual States are famous.

Michigan had cans of applesauce and cherries and toy motor cars in all colors. Mrs. Prentiss M. Brown arranged the display.

Mrs. Ernest Lundeen was responsible for the display of Minnesota products—breakfast cereals and miniature sacks of flour, with a miniature lake in the midst of a pine forest forming the centerpiece. Large ears of corn, pound cartons of butter from the State Agricultural College at Ames, honey candy from the college, boxes of cleanser and of face cream and powder were on the Iowa table, with high Iowa cornstalks forming a background. Mrs. Fred Biermann and Mrs. Guy Gillette arranged this table and also entertained 16 guests from their State at luncheon. Immediately afterward, Mrs. Biermann, accompanied by Mrs. B. M. Jacobson, of Clinton, Iowa, left by motor for her home in Decorah, to bring her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Rygg, back from there to Washington for a visit.

Mrs. Richard Duncan was in charge of the Missouri table, which had sample packages of wheat products; Mrs. Brooks Fletcher, of the Ohio table, with little rubber coasters in all colors and a center bouquet of red and white carnations and Japanese iris; Mrs. Michael Reilly, of the Wisconsin table, with a center bouquet of red and white roses, and pound and a half packages of sausage and little ones of cheese from Plymouth. Mrs. Reilly, who also was in charge of the music for the occasion, had as her guests Representative Reilly's neice, Mrs. William A. Castle, of Oshkosh, Wis.; Mrs. Ryan Duffy, the wife of Senator Duffy, and Mrs. Howard Boyle, of Fond du Lac, Wis.

The Kansas table, with samples of salt dentifrice as well as spools of rabbit salt, chocolates and wheat products, was arranged by Mrs. Randolph Carpenter. The Indiana table had a display obtained through Senator Sherman Minton, who also provided the Indiana tomato juice served before the luncheon. Mrs. Theodore Werner, of South Dakota, arranged the display for her State, which included booklets telling of the beauties of the Black Hills and their industries. Mrs. Werner had as her guest Miss Marie Mason, with whom she works on radio programs as chairman of the Congressional Cook Book Committee broadcasts.

Mrs. Dobbins was responsible for the Illinois table with its packages of bacon, mayonnaise and syrup, and Mrs. Edward R. Burke, of the Nebraska table, with little packages of butter.

At the end of the luncheon each guest was given a large shopping bag into which she gathered samples from each table.

Mrs. Charles J. Colden, president of the club, presided and introduced the guests of honor, and Mrs. Dobbins, who presented the entertainers of the afternoon; Mrs. David Kushner, who presented an original reading, and John Marville, bass, who sang a group of songs.

Miss Rice Is Engaged To Mr. W. T. Crocker

Of interest in Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Martha Rice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wallace Rice, of Milton, Mass., to Mr. Wethered Thomas Crocker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. M. Crocker, of New York.

For the last three years Mr. Crocker has made his home in Washington but is at present living in New York. Miss Rice attended Milton Academy and spent a year studying abroad. She was presented to society during the season of 1932-33 and is a member of the Junior League and the Vincent Club.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Kin of Mrs. Seoane Founded Michigan State University

Mrs. Consuelo A. Seoane, of Georgetown, one of the guests at the 73 Club luncheon yesterday, had a real affiliation with the Michigan group.

Her grandfather, the late Elon Farnsworth, was the first chancellor of Michigan, before it had a Governor. He founded the State university and was its first regent. Her father, the late George Farnsworth, built and owned the Michigan Postal Telegraph Co., was builder and owner of the Detroit & Milwaukee Railroad and a director of the Michigan Central. It was he who first saw in Grover Cleveland Presidential timber and donated the first $5,000 to his campaign fund.

Mrs. Seoane's grandmother, as regent of the Detroit Mount Vernon Society, had the floor of Mount Vernon relaid as her personal contribution to the preservation of the landmark.

Mrs. Tuck Weds Here April 29

Daughter of Mrs. James M. Beck Discloses Plans for Nuptials.

Mrs. Beatrice Beck Tuck, daughter of Mrs. James M. Beck and the late Mr. Beck, will be married April 29 to Col. Snowden Fahnestock, son of Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, of Washington. While the engagement has been rumored for several weeks, no formal announcement will be made, owing to the recent death of Mrs. Tuck's father, formerly Solicitor General. Not until today did Mrs. Tuck make public the date of her marriage.

She declined to reveal further plans for the wedding beyond saying it would not take place at her home here.

Mrs. Tuck was married in 1925 to Mr. Somerville Pinkney Tuck, of the Diplomatic Service. Mr. Tuck now is connected with the American Embassy in Paris.

Col. Fahnestock's first marriage ended in divorce. His first wife is now Mrs. Wladimir Bouimistrow, of Paris. His second wife, the former Miss Helen Moran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moran, of Newport, R. I., died last winter shortly after obtaining a divorce.

Mrs. Tuck's brother, Mr. James M. Beck, has arrived in Washington from New York, where he landed on the Berengaria on Tuesday. He had just reached Europe when he heard the news of his father's death, and took the first boat back.

Mrs. McNary Entertains.

Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of Senator McNary, entertained at tea at the Sulgrave Club yesterday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Mark V. Weatherford, Oregon State regent of the D. A. R., Mrs. John Y. Richardson, a national officer, and the other Oregon delegates to the D. A. R. congress in Washington.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

The Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye are making plans to leave Washington by the end of May, for France, accompanied by their daughter, Mlle. Marie Teresa de Laboulaye. They will spend several months there, returning to Washington in August.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis has left for Asheville, N. C., to spend a short time at Grove Park Inn.

The retiring Secretary of the Legation of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Theron will sail May 2, from New York, aboard the Vulcania, for Lisbon, Portugal, where the former will assume his new duties as Secretary of the Legation.

Japanese Counselor Visiting in Washington.

The Financial Counselor of the Japanese government for London and New York, Mr. Yutaro Tomita, and Mrs. Tomita are at the Shoreham for a few days before sailing for Japan. With them is Mr. H. Ukama, Assistant Financial Counselor of the Japanese government in New York, who met them upon their arrival in that city and accompanied them to the Capital.

Mr. and Mrs. Merle Thorpe, of Washington, are spending a few days in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mrs. Lawrence Baker, who is spending some time at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., is expected to return to the Capital the end of the week.

Mrs. Leland Rumsey Visits With Parents.

Mrs. Leland C. Rumsey, of Detroit, has arrived in Washington for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. DeVilbiss, in their home in Cleveland Park.

Mrs. Davis Elkins will entertain at tea this afternoon in her home in honor of the delegates to the D. A. R. Congress from West Virginia.

Mrs. Wilmarth Ickes, who has been visiting her father-in-law, the Secretary of the Interior, at his home in Chevy Chase, Hayes Manor, will leave tomorrow with her two children for her home in Winnetka, Ill. Mrs. Ickes spent part of her visit with her sister, Miss Jane Dahlman, who spent the winter in Washington.

Today, Miss Anne Dahlman, sister of Mrs. Ickes, and Miss Jane Dahlman, will arrive to be the guest for two weeks of Secretary Ickes.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Robert MacCubbins, who will leave Washington in June for Zanesville, Ohio, where they will make their residence, will be "at home" informally on Sunday afternoon, May 3, from 5 until 7 o'clock.

Assisting will be Miss Marie Roelker and Mrs. Arthur Williams, of Buffalo, N. Y., aunts of Mrs. MacCubbin. No cards have been issued.

Mrs. Joseph M. Stephenson has come from South Bend, Ind., and is at the Shoreham for several days while in Washington as the guest of Senator and Mrs. Robert M. La Follette jr. Mr. Stephenson, publisher and owner of the South Bend News-Times, accompanied her to Washington and has returned to Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nash entertained at a small dinner at the Shoreham last evening for Mrs. Nash's sister-in-law, Mrs. Jacques Barroux and Mr. Barroux, of Paris, France, who are in Washington to visit Mr. Wilbur F. Nash, father of Mrs. Barroux, who are accompanied by their daughters, Jeanine and Dorice, will make an extended visit in this country before returning to France. Mrs. Barroux is the former Miss Helen Nash.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Violet Perfume for Scenting Artificial Flowers Gives Bouquet to Deceive Solomon.

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

MAYBE you have been reading about the comeback that is being staged by the modest little violet. Through a play produced some years back the innocent little flower came into bad repute and was used as a sign of something objectionable. That memory is gone now and, as the violet never was to blame, it has come back into its own in great shape, forgetting the slander. Violets are being worn for corsages throughout the country as they never have been before.

There are women who cannot wear flowers well, because they wither on them almost immediately. For this reason artificial flowers, which are being made more beautifully every day, have come into vogue. Velvet violets made of three different shades bunched together are being used a great deal; also the one-color single violets, made of silk or cotton cloth. Perhaps loveliest of all are the double English violets with their pale lavender color.

The thing to do is to buy a bottle of one of the most exquisite violet perfumes ever put upon the market, a scent that one never tires of, and which is the very soul of the beautiful flower. It is made by a company in New York and the wife of one of the officials in the concern never uses any other perfume. I happened to be in their manufacturing establishment one day when she called up to order more of it and I immediately became interested.

This is not a violently expensive perfume, but I swear to you that if you saturate a bunch of artificial violets with it, no one will suspect, unless he or she touches the bouquet, that the flowers are anything but real.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column phone The Washington Post, National 4200. Please do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Care Is Needed In Diagnosing Jaundice Types

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

There is a peculiar type of jaundice, which affects children particularly, known as hemolytic (blood dissolving) jaundice, in which the red cells of the blood become very fragile. As we can well understand, if the red cells crumble and disintegrate, anemia will follow. Associated with the condition is enlargement of the spleen.

Jaundice is the chief symptom. It may appear even in early infancy and remain a constant factor. A study of the blood will show that the number of the red cells is considerably reduced—by as much as a million or more in each cubic millimeter. The course of the disease continues without abatement and there are occasional periods in which the patient will be very ill. At such times the temperature will rise and jaundice will increase. During these intervals of acute illness the red cells may drop to a still lower level.

In this type of blood destruction removal of the spleen during a period when symptoms are not acute is followed usually by striking improvement if not complete cure. In fact, removal of the spleen is the remedy. It is a practical procedure and but little danger need be apprehended if the operation is performed by a surgeon of great skill.

Disease Hereditary.

The case is related of a child of 12 whose first complaint was of pain in the chest. For some months the appetite had been poor. On examination she was found to be undernourished with marked yellowing of the skin. The blood disclosed the typical picture of hemolytic jaundice. Removel of the spleen resulted in an uneventful recovery with a return of the blood cells to normal.

Enlargement of the spleen is sometimes the first sign of the disease, and along with this there will be various manifestations of abdominal discomfort which increase during the acute periods. Sometimes the true state of affairs is overlooked and hence undiagnosed, as the jaundice may not be intense. There is no particular pain in the gall bladder region, which is characteristic of jaundice due to obstruction.

Care Needed in Diagnosis.

Care must be taken not to confuse the condition with obstructive jaundice, in which the ducts conveying bile to the intestine become plugged by stones, mucus, parasites, or even dried bile. Sometimes infection leads to the blocking of these ducts because of swelling. The whites of the eyes will then appear yellow and sooner or later the skin of the entire body will show evidences of bile absorption. There is considerable itching, particularly if the condiiton continues for a few days. The blood will contain so much bile that chemical tests will disclose its presence easily.

Chorus Girls Grow Plump, Emulating Those of '90's

Days of Slim Chorine Are Now Passed, Says Director.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

TAKE HEART, plump girls. The slim chorine who cut the original pattern of the streamlined silhouette is eating square meals again, and even indulging in an ice-cream soda now and then without counting the calories!

Miss Elizabeth Friedman, director of the Elida Dancers, said so yesterday. "The skinny chorus girl who came in with the jazz era is definitely 'out'" averred this young woman who, at 29 is, one of the few women who make this business of dance producing a "one-man" job. "Typical chorus girls weigh more today than they did a year ago. Some in my company tip the scales at 120 or 125 pounds."

Tonight the Elida Dancers will finish their two-week engagement at a local theater.

Chorines Like Those of '90s.

Yesterday, backstage at the theater, Miss Friedman said she believed styles in modern chorus girls in many respects approximate those of the '90s. "As yet, however, the average chorine is not fat," she said. "If she weighs as much as 120 pounds she is from 5 feet 5 inches to 5 feet 7 inches tall. Which means she is still slender, but not skinny. But even though she doesn't yet weigh as much as her forerunner of the '90s, she is at least headed in that direction."

Miss Friedman further believes the Floradora girls had much in their favor. Convinced that today even the baldheaded row is weary of bare ankles, calves and knees, she thinks a stockinged chorus would make a big hit now—"since nudism has ceased to be a novelty."

"Stockings are not only more flattering but are more alluring than bare legs," she commented. "They make the ankles more graceful and catch the footlights to a much better advantage than hoseless legs. It we go back to chorus standards of the '90s, I don't mind at all. Personally, I like both long, silk stockings and tights."

This, from a woman who has been a chorus director since she was 18. This, from a dance producer who has been in charge of stage girls in principal cities throughout the United States; has put on unit shows, and knows as much about chorus line-ups as any young woman in this country.

Favors Black Hose.

Furthermore, she admits she not only favors a stockinged chorus, but she believes it should be a black-stockinged one, "because black hose have a certain uniformity and make all the girls look neat attractive, and graceful against a light background."

Miss Friedman is not only an authority on standards in size of chorus girls and styles of attire that are most becoming to them, but she also knows a lot about methods of managing them.

She long ago learned a few "never-fail" executive tactics, she said. She has complete charge of the Elida dancers, since she creates their steps, chooses the music, selects the costumes, does all the rehearsing and is also their stage manager. "Yet I am not, in any respect, a 'boss,'" she said, "and none of the girls considers me as such. I am simply one of them, a companion. All of us work together on a basis of complete equality. I try to see that good work never passes unnoticed, is always complimented. When criticisms are in order, the girls give them to each other. When I offer any correction or suggestion, it is not given in the tone of a superior. If I have any secret of success as an executive, this is it."

The name "Elida" was formed by using the first letter of the names of the five girls who were the nucleus of the company, Miss Friedman said. There are 12 members in the current troupe, which completed a two-and-a-half year engagement at the Metropolitan Theater in Boston before they came to Washington.

'Debt' of Child To Its Parents Held a Myth

Offspring Reminded of Their Obligation Often Revolt Against Family.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"But my child owes me life, therefore he owes me the duty of love and respect."

Many parents never put it into words, but feel it none the less—the obligation of a child toward its parents.

Why should the child inevitably be thankful for the gift of life and why should he owe his mother an eternal debt because she went through pain and endangered her life to give him birth?

The real debt is from parent to child and not from child to parents, and whatever love and respect the child gives the parent is extra measure for the parent and should be accepted with humility and thanks. But it must be earned, not demanded as a right.

The child who is forever being reminded of the sacrifice his parents made to give him an education, of the suffering his mother endured in giving him birth, is apt to feel, not love and respect for his parents, but a desire to wipe out the debt by getting away as fast as possible and so relieving the strain. And far from appreciating the gift of life, he is apt to reflect his parents' attitude and wish that he had never been born to become a burden on them.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

To Make Friends, Meet Others Half Way or More, Without Seeming to Clutch at Them Desperately.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: While I agree with your statement that "mail-order matchmaking is never to be recommended," may I ask this question of you and your many readers? How does a stranger here go about making friends—not necessarily of the opposite sex or with matrimonial intent? Particularly, how does one do it if one is a little too old for the young peoples' church societies or similar groups you have suggested for those in their 'teens and twenties; and if one has no leanings toward church-going?

• • • •

Also, if one does not happen to be athletically inclined or hasn't time or opportunity for such sports, which you have likewise suggested, what does one do? Strange as it may seem, I am not in the employ of the Government, nor do I have even those contacts which come to one from working in a large business organization.

• • • •

Mary Haworth.

While I am a good dancer, I wouldn't consider going to dances with another girl without an escort. All this throws me back upon shows, concerts, lectures, movies, etc., which I do enjoy. But these are lonely excursions for one who doesn't strike up acquaintances at such places. Although no raving beauty, I am as attractive and as well-groomed as the average woman and do not quite look my 30 years. I am a good conversationalist, well read and genuinely interested in current affairs and topics of general interest and also am a good listener. I play a fair game of bridge.

• • • •

I have been a good friend of many persons and correspond with numerous friends I have made in other cities where I have lived. Yet I find Washington the most difficult of all cities for making friends, and I have always been considered a good sport. Your consideration of my problem will be greatly appreciated.

M. A. B.

On Making Friends.

DEAR M. A. B.: If you would have friends, you must show yourself friendly. If you would be interesting, you must show a warm interest in others. If you wish to know people, you must go where people of your own kind foregather. Since you aren't a churchgoer and haven't the means, opportunity or inclination to follow athletic pursuits, then join your State society. Are you literary, musical, artistic? Are you interested in amateur theatricals? Washington society—I don't mean society in the sense of Ward McAllister's "Four Hundred"—abounds in small groups and clubs and organizations for studying such cultural subjects; and a personable, talented person can always find ways and means of gaining entree to such groups, if he or she will put forth the necessary effort.

• • • •

One way of making the right friends is to live in the right neighborhood—and by that I mean the right neighborhood for the individual; the kind of neighborhood in which he is most likely to meet persons of similar interests, means and background.

• • • •

In order to make friends in a new community it is necessary to know how to meet others half way or more than half way without seeming to clutch at them like the proverbial drowning man at the straw. In other words, while registering real pleasure at making a new acquaintance, and while expressing the hope that you may meet soon again, carry the situation off casually, as one with an inexhaustible fund of inner contentment.

• • • •

Friendship is a plant which grows from the seed of acquaintanceship germinating in the soil of casual meeting. And I simply can't believe that anyone living in any city doesn't meet new persons occasionally. Acquaintanceship develops into friendship when each of the two persons concerned senses opportunity for enriching his personal social experience through a continuing contact with the other. Therefore it behooves you to impart the suggestion, as subtly as may be, that you have something to bring to others, of mental richness or of wisdom or of simple good cheer, or of inspiring philosophy, or even of helpful social contacts implicit in your own background of other friends.

M. H.

Orange Cream Sherbet Is Favorite of Mrs. Kahn; California Variety.

By Pattie Ellicott.

One of the most popular women in Congress is Representative Florence Pragg Kahn of California. Mrs. Kahn is a favored guest wherever she appears and always has a good story to tell and a receptive audience

Naturally Mrs. Kahn is devoted to California and like her fellow Californians she rejoices in the virtues of the orange.

The use of the orange not only as a beverage and health tonic but for desserts is growing constantly. No homemaker need worry about the sweet after dinner if she has a store of oranges on hand. One dessert that Mrs. Kahn enjoys and often suggests is an orange cream sherbet, tasty at the end of a meal or served with the roast course. In either capacity it wins a welcome.

Here is a recipe for Orange Cream Sherbet.

1 teaspoon granulated gelatine, ½ cup cold water, 3 cups boiling water, 2¼ cups sugar, 1½ cups orange juice, 2 eggs, 1 pint heavy cream, 2 teaspoons grated orange rind and 1 cup lemon juice.

Soak gelatine in cold water ten minutes, stir boiling water over until dissolved; add sugar and orange rind. Let stand until cool. When cold strain and add strained lemon and orange juice. Freeze until thick as mush.

Beat egg yolks very light. Whip cream stiff, add to yolks. Whip whites stiff, add to cream mixture. Add to half-frozen sherbet, continue freezing until solid. Cover and let stand one hour to ripen.

Historic Frock Features Exhibit

One of the most interesting items in the Independent Art Exhibit at Jelleff's is the pink and yellow silk dress worn by Lucy Clark, the sister of William Clark, of the Lewis-Clark Expedition. Of such engrossing design, and in such splendid condition is this frock that it has been recorded by the artists of the Index of American Design, of the Works Progress Administration. The dress comes from Dunbarton House, the historic home of the Colonial Dames.

The exhibit which began April 20 will continue until April 30.

Lace Comes Into Its Own Again To Add Lovely Feminine Touch

LACE AGAIN is asserting itself prominently in the evening mode for spring and summer.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Although her brother, Jerry, forbade her to do it, Ruth Dayton, 18, has accepted a job posing as June Bradley, stepsister of Jim Bradley, wealthy young Chicagoan, who is Ruth's age and who Ruth resembles greatly. Ruth had been persuaded to accept the job by Joe and Clara Bradley, uncle and aunt of Jim, in whose charge June has been placed by her brother.

Ruth had been persuaded by Joe and Clara that their purpose in hiring her was a humane one. June, they told her, was ill and could not go with them to the bedside of Jim, who had been blinded and apparently fatally injured in an auto accident. The deceit, she was told, was to soften the last hours of a dying man.

But in Chicago Ruth has found herself in the midst of a plot. She is convinced that Joe and Clara and Pascoe, the man nurse they establish in charge of Jim, are eager to bring about Jim's death. Ruth falls in love with Jim and he with her, thinking she is June. He has Joe arrange their marriage so June will inherit his estate if he dies but the marriage Joe arranges is a fake one.

Ruth cannot confide her fears to Jim, who is too ill. She herself is held a prisoner. She has almost given up all hope when suddenly Clara points out to her a houseman she has hired, calling him Rogers. Rogers is Ruth's brother, Jerry.

Chapter Nineteen.

RUTH'S KNEES trembled so that she could scarcely stand.

Her impulse was to run to Jerry and, safe in his arms, face her jailers. She restrained that impulse with difficulty. There was something about the set of Jerry's shoulders, a sterness of his face that warned her not to do anything rash.

Jerry scarcely glanced at her. Certainly gave no sign of recognition. Ruth almost jumped when she heard Mrs. Bradley refer to Jerry as Rogers.

Mrs. Bradley was very cordial. "Rogers, wait a minute, did you or did you not tell me that you were accustomed to doing all types of house work?"

"I told you that I had served as a houseman. I am accustomed to all types of housework except cooking."

"Good. Then please just go ahead in your own way. I suppose the linens need changing. I suppose nearly everything over the house needs doing. We've been so shorthanded here. Servants are so ungrateful. Most of them quit when we had serious illness in the house. That's the way with hirelings."

"Yes, madame."

"Please just go ahead doing the best you can for a day or two."

"Yes, madame."

Jerry went on down the corridor and Clara Bradley turned to her husband. "You see, my dear, he's a perfect servant. You're wrong."

"As usual," Joseph grumbled. "Just the same, I think we could have managed the short time we had to manage."

Clara put a jeweled hand on Ruth's arm. "How would you like to take a long ride with me this morning, my dear? I'm so nervous staying around this place that I could scream."

When Ruth would have gone to her room, Joseph Bradley stopped her.

"Please don't try any of your absurd attempts at getting away" he advised quite sociably. "There isn't a possible chance at your succeeding, you know. I'll be just down the corridor. By the way, you're on your second week's work. I'll pay you."

But Ruth did not wait to take the money. She turned, entered her own room and triumphantly pushed the bolt, very loudly.

She could have cried with pure, unadulterated joy.

Today the coming of Jerry had put hope and joy into her life.

She wondered how he could have gotten into the house. Put two and two together slowly. Of course, she could not piece together the whole story, but she was certain enough of fragments of it.

She couldn't know that Jerry had called Des Moines long distance the morning of her departure. "She's gone," the proprietor of the rooming house had said. "No, I just don't exactly remember the name of the people she went to visit. Someone in Chicago."

Jerry made an immediate frantic trip to Des Moines. Strange as it would seem that telephoned information was just about the extent of all he learned first hand in the next 60 hours. Ruth had left Des Moines with a very handsome, well-dressed man and woman. Their destination was Chicago.

Frantic hours went by. Jerry kept in constant touch with his own rooming place in Iowa City. Surely Ruth would write.

She just couldn't have gone away like this, never writing, never giving him a sign as to what had become of her.

It was on the morning of the fourth day, after Ruth's departure and when he was almost worried enough to call in the police that Jerry got the idea of examining the airliners' passenger lists for the day Ruth had gone away.

When he found the names, "Mr. and Mrs. J. Bradley and Miss J. Bradley, Chicago," that was enough to make Jerry sure he had hit the right clew at last.

Jerry hitchhiked to Chicago.

He found, after he had reached Chicago, that there are many Badley families in that big city. Even a number of J. Bradleys.

One by one he eliminated the J. Bradleys. Came at last to a place that sudden hunch told him was the right place.

Clara Bradley herself had answered the doorbell.

She was in one of her frequent flighty and hysterical moods. Jerry said politely, "Are you Mrs. J. Bradley?"

Clara leaped to an immediate conclusion, "Are you the man from the North Shore Employment Bureau?"

"Why yes," Jerry was thinking fast. This woman looked like the woman Ruth had described over the telephone. Some day, with the life of a patient in his hands, young Dr. Jerry will probably make as quick and as sure a decision as he made then. "Yes, I'm from the North Shore Bureau."

From then on his entree was easy.

Peculiar.

Less than an hour later he was sure he had come to the right place. Also he was sure that something very peculiar was going on. His first move when he got into the service quarters was to call the North Shore Employment Bureau for help. Then he joined Bette in the kitchen.

They struck up quite an acquaintance and Jerry, as one servant to another, started asking a discreet question now and then. "You've been with the Bradleys' long?"

"Too long," Bette grumbled "Never thought I'd be with them long enough to turn into a common dishwasher."

Jerry grinned, rubbed a plate until it fairly shone. "I don't like it so much myself," he admitted, "but it could be worse."

"You don't know about that. Things have been pretty awful around here lately."

"How's that?" Jerry took a long chance. "Someone sick." He'd nail that sick brother story right now.

"Yes. Mr. Jim. He was hurt bad in an automobile accident."

Well, that part of the story clicked. Jerry took a deep breath. Plunged further. "How's he coming on? Going to get well?"

"I don't know."

Then they seemed at a standstill for a time. Bette washed dishes and Jerry wiped dishes. She said the water was getting cold, and got warmer water. He said he needed dry tea towels, and got dry tea towels.

Finally Jerry ventured another question. It seemed absurd. "Is this a big family? Any people in its besides the sick man and the dame that hired me "

Bette laughed in great glee. "Don't you know how many in the family when the employment bureau sent you out? That's about the first thing most of us ask."

"I didn't pay much attention," Jerry lied. "I needed a job so badly I'd have taken this one if there'd been 40 in the family. How many in the family, by the way? Any pretty girls?"

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"OUR sunroom has always been the most uninteresting room," remarked a lady of the suburbs, "and now I'm determined to make it individual if it means anything from gunny sacks to gold lame for window curtains. But I'd appreciate some suggestions not quite so drastic. However, I do want something dynamic, so don't soft peddle me with neutrals!"

Don't worry—we believe in running wild once in a while ourself, particularly in rooms like sun parlors, where it isn't so serious if the decorations are a bit daring. So here are some plans . . . cobalt or navy blue walls, white-painted wicker furniture, black and white marble square linoleum, bright yellow dyed pongee curtains made to draw back and forth, bright yellow chintz or linen cushions for the chairs, for the daybed a bright yellow spread of the same chintz or linen made with a box-pleated flounce (do the pleating by pressing them in rather than basting them in—it's much easier). Have yellow cushions here, along with some bright-flowered ones and an odd one or two in blue.

Another idea would be to have the walls and woodwork painted all Add henna or rust colored linoleum and use gray for the chair in white, then use leaf green, too, cushions and day bed spread. For the day bed cushions have gray covers, green covers, white covers and rust covers.

Romance and Etiquette

JUST BY THE LIFTING of a coffee cup Vera is shattering her romance with Tom! Foolish of him to attach so much importance to a small matter? But is it a small matter?

When Vera clutches that cup in a two-handed strangle hold she tells a great deal about herself and her ignorance of the niceties of life. Then she goes on shocking Tom by packing green peas into a wad of mashed potato on her fork: whacking a whole chop into bits instead of cutting a piece at a time as she eats; buttering a whole slice of bread at once instead of breaking off a bit at a time and buttering it; and cheerfully parking olive pits on the tablecloth beside her plate.

Quite a revelation to a young man who, like most men, hates to be embarrassed by the social slips of the girl he's with. How does he know that she won't acknowledge an introduction with "pleased to meet you," or manicure her nails in public, talk too loudly, fail to send a bread-and-butter note to the hostess of a week-end party, behave awkwardly at the theater, or in some other way draw the limelight of unpleasant attention on herself—and on him.

No one can afford to have bad manners, to run the risk of social failure through blindness to etiquette, charm and tact. Our 40-page illustrated booklet is the simplest, handiest of guides to good form. It's such a comfort to be sure of yourself. Why not check up on the rules.

Flandin Seeks Key to Hitler's Austrian Move

French Foreign Minister Also Checks on Strength of Frontier Defenses.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 22.—Foreign Minister Pierre Etienne-Flandin sought today to learn Adolf Hitler's intentions, now that the Rhineland is reoccupied, and also checked up on the strength of France's frontier defenses.

He conferred with Andre Francois-Poncet, ambassador to Germany, who recently returned from Berlin, as well as Louis Felix Maurin, minister of war, who has completed an inspection of frontier fortifications and forces.

In diplomatic circles it was said that Flandin and Francois-Poncet discussed how Hitler is likely to receive forthcoming questions, including his intentions toward Austria, which Great Britain is reported about ready to pose.

French fears were expressed that Germany may inspire a Nazi putsch in Austria soon.

The nationalistic newspaper Liberte said travelers arriving in Kufstein, Austria, from Germany reported a concentration of Nazi Storm Troops, members of the Austrian Legion and the regular German army in the Bavarian Alps.

Officials here appear convinced that Great Britain will dispatch a questionnaire on the subject of the Locarno Treaty shortly to the German government.

The international situation is figuring in the campaign for the Chamber of Deputies now nearing a close. The first election will be held Sunday and the run-off election on the next Sunday.

Officials said tonight France would reply favorably to a Turkish request for permission to fortify the Dardanelles.

Unemployed Group First Wants Runaway Legislators to Vote Funds; Burlesque Assembly Spends Day Playing Cards and Listening to Orations.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., April 22.—New Jersey's "army of unoccupation," using the New Jersey Assembly chamber to burlesque the Legislature's failure to provide relief funds, expressed willingness today to evacuate—providing the elected legislators will come back and vote relief funds.

After a day of oratory and card-playing, broken twice by a rush for sandwiches and coffee, the 50 men and women who since 3:30 p. m. yesterday have been camping in the Statehouse appealed to Gov. Harold G. Hoffman to end the lawmakers' six-day recess.

The Council of Churches of Trenton, although refusing to approve the unemployed group's action in moving into the Statehouse, met in special session today, "viewed with consternation and alarm" the Legislature's failure to provide relief and demanded immediate action.

Hearkened by Move.

The resolution heartened the heavy-eyed but talkative occupants of the Assembly chamber, who voted to confer with the Governor.

Gov. Hoffman, who scolded the Legislature on Monday for "temporizing" with the relief problem, refused to recommend a substitute for his 2 per cent retail sales tax, which the 1935 Legislature repealed after four months' operation.

When he signed the repealer in red ink last October, the Governor predicted chaos ahead and has since maintained the problem is one for the Legislature to solve.

The relief treasury was drained Thursday, and because the Legislature voted down "luxury" tax bills designed to meet the crisis temporarily, the State relief council turned the $3,000,000 monthly bill back to the municipalities. They insist they cannot carry the load.

Take Over Assembly.

The unemployed, who have threatened a march of tens of thousands on the capitol, took over the Assembly chamber yesterday when the Legislature adjourned suddenly until Monday night.

At 3:30 p. m. today the "army" had camped there 24 hours, beating by five hours the marathon endurance record set by the Legislature last month when it decided to sit until it solved the crisis—but quit from weariness after diverting $3,000,000 of highway funds, enough for a month's needs.

Throughout the day, the relief forces, styling themselves the "gentlemen of the House," mocked the Legislature.

"We've been here only a day," said one, "but we've done just as much as the Legislature did in three months—that's nothing."

Ethiopia Dynamites Roads were digging great trenches 12 feet deep along the Plateau Escarpment, to halt mechanized transport and Italian tanks.

They have erected machine-gun strong points at vantage points along Tamar Burrh's edges. Except for airplanes there has been no sight of the enemy from Tarmar Burrh. But Ethiopians were concentrating on the Shula Meda Plain, where the final battle for possession of Addis Ababa was expected to be fought.

In Addis Ababa confusion reigned because of rumors regarding the whereabouts of the Italians. Empress Menen traveled out to the radio station at Akaki to broadcast an appeal to the world, and especially to France and Great Britain. She asked for immediate action "while yet there is time to assist Ethiopia."

Increasing indications that Addis Ababa is not to be surrendered without a struggle to the death spread further panic through the city.

Foreigners continued to evacuate. John C. Robinson, Negro aviator of Chicago, who served with Ethiopia's pathetic air force until Italian bombers destroyed Emperor Haile Selassie's few planes, left by train for Djibouti with Capt. John Meade, military attache of the American Legation.

Recruiting boomed following reports that the crown prince returned from the northern front to command a new army now in the process of organization.

Insurrection Reported.

Addis Ababa, April 22 (AP).—A serious insurrection among the northern Ethiopian armies was reported unofficially in Addis Ababa today as the youthful Crown Prince Asfa Wosan returned to the ramshackle old palace to resume his place as his father's deputy in the capital.

Refugees from the north brought varied reports of disaffection, but it was uncertain whether this is handicapping Emperor Haile Selassie, who is organizing a last stand in defense of Addis Ababa in the towering Shoan Mountains south of Dessye.

Some Northern Galla and Tigrean tribes in the territory which the emperor was forced to evacuate are believed involved.

Rome reports said Italy's northern army, driving on Addis Ababa, was only 70 miles from the capital.

Battle Under Way.

Rome (Wednesday), April 22.—A terrific battle raged early today between Italian troops advancing on Addis Ababa and a strong Ethiopian concentration only 75 miles north of Emperor Haile Selassie's capital, press dispatches from the northern front reported.

Italy to Oppose Refortification Of Dardanelles

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 22.—Turkey's move to rearm the Dardanelles has aroused the opposition of Italy, perhaps the most interested of all countries in keeping the straits free and open, informed sources disclosed tonight.

Italy, however, may eventually give her consent in principle, being forced to by similar consents granted by other big powers, but her fundamental opposition, nevertheless, will continue.

So far as Italy is concerned, the rearming of the narrow link between the Aegean and Black Seas is a vital element in the complex situation involving not only the two countries, but also the major states in Europe.

Nations Suspicious.

Italy's opposition is based on the diplomatic basis that the Treaty of Lausanne providing for the disarmament of the straits was freely negotiated and signed by Turkey in 1923, and therefore cannot be unilaterally abrogated. However, there are these more concrete reasons:

1. Between Italy and Turkey there has been much suspicion for many years. Twenty-five years ago began the Italo-Turkish War which ended in Italian victory and the taking of Libya and the Dodecanese Islands.

The Dodecanese Islands gave Italy a strategic position commanding the southern end of the Aegean Sea, only a few miles from the Turkish coast of Asia Minor. From the air base on the Island of Lepos, Italian bombing planes could easily reach Constantinople and Ankara.

2. Turkey was a leading spirit in the formation of the Balkan Entente, including all the Balkan States but Bulgaria and Albania. The Entente was opposed by Italy, who saw in it an effort to wrest away her friends, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria and Albania.

Agrees With Britain.

3. Turkey has agreed with Great Britain to help her in the Mediterranean if Italy attacks Britain in consequence of sanctions. Should such an event come about, a rearmed straits would prevent Italy from reaching the Black Sea. Turkey's assistance to London, otherwise negative owing to her obsolete fleet, would then become effective.

4. Under sanctions Italy must buy and sell wherever it is possible to do so. And the Black Sea is an important market center for her. Economically, therefore, Italy has every reason for objecting to the straits' rearmament.

And It Was No Joke.

HAGERSTOWN, MD. — When Manuel Knode's automobile disappeared from in front of a filling station, he thought one of his friends had played a joke and would return his car later. When the car was not returned the next day, he notified the police, who are still looking for it.

First Divorce

Decree Granted on Moral Turpitude Grounds.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat yesterday in the District Supreme Court awarded the District's first divorce on the grounds that Ambrose E. Collier had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude and had been sentenced to 30 months in prison.

Under the new divorce law, decrees may be granted under such circumstances, but the Collier case is believed to be the first one thus awarded.

Mrs. Frances C. Collier, 2520 Tenth street northeast, filed the suit. She charged that her husband had been a member of a counterfeiting ring that was arrested in Alexandria, Va., and that he is now serving a sentence in Lewisburg, Pa., penitentiary. The couple was married in 1930 and have one child. They separated several months before Collier was arrested.

Wheatley Funeral Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for William Francis Wheatley, 73, retired postal clerk, will be held at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow from the residence, 711 Otis street northwest. This will be followed by a requiem mass at 9 a. m. at St. Gabriel's Church. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

After more than 40 years' service in the Postoffice Department here, Mr. Wheatley retired five years ago.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Mattie B. Wheatley; two sons, William J. and G. Raymond Wheatley, and two sisters, Mrs. F. Edward Mitchell and Mrs. Kathrine M. O'Connor, all of this city.

Death Called Suicide.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa.—Harry C. Linn, 72, of McConnellsburg, died yesterday afternoon at the Chambersburg Hospital of a bullet wound in the head which, authorities said, was self-inflicted. Dr. A. W. Thrush, coroner, issued a verdict of suicide.

Italy War Chest Il Duce Opens As Troops Gain

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 22.—Premier Mussolini opened his nation's war coffers again tonight as Fascist columns in Ethiopia were reliably reported to have penetrated to Debra Birhan, Holy City of Shoa Province.

Less than 70 miles from Addis Ababa, the Holy City is the first settlement in the path of the Blackshirt troops on the high plateau leading to the Ethiopian capital.

The new war appropriations announced by Il Duce sent a flow of 1,440,500,000 lire (approximately $115,000,000) to the credit of his fighting machine.

The new addition to the war chest brought the total appropriations to 10,065,000,000 lire—approximately $800,000,000.

The Fascist premier, despite an estimate by League of Nations experts that Italy's foreign assets fell 105,000,000 gold dollars between October 20, 1935, and March 31, 1936, apparently based his action on the annual report of Vincenzo Azzolini, governor of the Bank of Italy.

Azzolini declared that on December 31, 1935, the gold reserve in the bank was 3,027,200,000 lire with foreign credits of 367,400,000, a total of 3,394,600,000.

Banking sources reported later the reserves were still around 3,000,000,000 lire despite foreign purchases during the first three months of the current year.

Governor Azzolini pointed out the reserves figure he cited did not include the gold received by the government, estimated at 1,500,000,000 lire, during an intensive campaign for funds among Italians at home and abroad.

Jews Transferred To Prevent Riots

Jerusalem, April 22 (AP).—Fearful of new rioting, police decided tonight to transfer 120 Jews living in Hebron to Jerusalem.

Reports received by telegraph agencies said eight Arabs were killed during the day and 58 others wounded in scattered outbreaks.

An official communique on the Arab general strike in the vicinity reported that in most of the towns the majority of shops, except for cafes, was shut.

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency asserted the situation of 6,000 Jewish refugees at Tel Aviv caused concern as money and food became scarce. Tel Aviv police have been instructed, the agency added, to deal vigorously with crowds in the streets, use force in dispersing them and fire, if necessary.

The principal Arab attack was staged at the Hatikvah settlement, where police raided the Moslems with gunfire. The Arabs also attacked Shechunath Aryeh.

Sibley Tells Of Big Gains In Business

Chamber Head Warns That Good Easily Can Be Erased.

Curbs on Press Assailed at Election Session of Trade Board.

An "amazing improvement" in American business was heralded last night by Harper Sibley, United States Chamber of Commerce president, before the Washington Board of Trade.

He coupled with his optimistic report, however, a warning against invasion of the freedom of the press and other constitutional guarantees "lest the liberty we cherish will be drawn from us."

Earlier, the Mayflower Hotel meeting was marked by election of the following board directors:

Francis G. Addison, George Plitt, Harry C. Grove, Claude W. Owen, Judge Gus A. Schuldt, Wallace B. Robinson, C. Melvin Sharpe, Edward F. Colladay, Lawrence E. Williams and Herman F. Carl.

Richmond B. Keech, Public Utilities Commission member and nominating committee chairman, explained the directors would elect the organization's new officers Friday.

Sibley said he observed "very definite" signs of active business recovery on a series of trips through the country in behalf of the chamber.

"A year ago," he said, "the iron ore mines of Michigan and Minnesota were struggling along on a part-time basis. Now they are working day and night crews.

Results Encouraging.

"That sort of thing is happening all over the country. Why, one firm this year has manufactured the largest number of shoes on record.

"Particularly encouraging is the fact that there has been a very definite comeback in the industries which were operating on the lowest basis, such as steel.

"America's machine tool plants are operating at capacity today. When you see all plants putting in new machinery you know they are planning for permanency."

He cited recent developments in the field of chemistry, which, he declared, resulted in vast orders of soy beans and other farm products by industry for extraction of their oils and fibers.

"At the same time," he cautioned, "there is a lot of governmental fog and uncertainty in the air and it isn't clear just what sort of a future highway business is going to have.

"First of all there is the problem of great expenditures in the name of relief. Federal and State governments are spending far above their income.

Taxes Held Problem.

"Every farmer and business man knows sooner or later our governmental budgets are going to have to be balanced.

"Increasing taxes also constitute one of our most pressing problems. Our members have been appearing before the House Ways and Means Committee to present our views on the tax bill and we expect to submit our ideas to the Senate Finance Committee shortly.

"In certain features at least, we feel we will be able to modify the tax bill."

Any "new burdens" added to business, he said, would be reflected in increased prices, decreased purchases, a lewer volume of production and retarded prosperity.

Sibley assailed what he characterized as a "trend toward very arbitrary taxes" by pointing to the fact that gasoline now costs around 6 cents a gallon to produce while in many States the tax is 6 cents and in Florida 8 cents.

"In other words," he complained, "the tax is 100 per cent of the manufacturing cost, and every time the tax is increased 1 cent the volume of sales falls off."

He denounced the "menace" of increasing Government competition with private business.

Lauds Supreme Court.

"The Government's entry into power and housing fields," he said, "creates a condition which business can't meet.

"Then this business of an uncertain foreign exchange is dangerous. The longer the day of stabilizing foreign exchange is postponed the longer our international trade will be hampered."

Various "Government controls" in the field of business under the Democratic Administration, he charged, constitute a "movement toward what college professors call a totalitarian state."

He lauded the Supreme Court as "a bulwark in defense of liberty" and as a curb on what he interpreted as a "tendency for the Government to attempt to control free speech, free press, freedom to teach in our schools and colleges and these other important freedoms we have possessed through the years."

Funds for the board's Greater National Capital committee were solicited by several speakers, including Lloyd B. Wilson, committee chairman.

Retired Judge Uses Rope Fire Escape

E. A. Stowater, retired probate judge of Lincoln, Nebr., took a dividend yesterday on a 50-foot clothes-lines he purchased when he moved into a rooming house at 1111 Eleventh street northwest.

The judge bought the rope because the house had no fire escape. He and a young business college teacher, E. E. Mangus, slid down the rope yesterday to safety when a fire in the house rounted them.

The fire started shortly after 5 a. m. in a second-floor room. L. C. Smith, another roomer, ran through the house and roused occupants. He was rescued by firemen.

Zioncheck Due In Court Today; 'For Exercise'

Representative Promises Police He'll Appear on Speed Charge.

Representative Marion A. Zioncheck (Democrat), of Washington, yesterday promised police that he would appear today in Traffic Court to answer charges that he drove his car 70 miles an hour on Connecticut avenue.

Although a definite promise was received by the police from the legislator, his statement to newspapermen was: "If I feel in need of the exercise, I might show up."

A court attachment, ordered by Judge Walter J. Casey, was served on Zioncheck at his apartment Tuesday night, but instead of arresting him as would have been done in the case of the average citizen, Tenth Precinct police took Zioncheck's word that he would appear in court today.

If the Representative fails to come to court police of the Tenth Precinct may be in difficulty as an attachment is a court order to produce "the body" of the defendant in court.

Acting on the cases of only eight motorists convicted of speeding, the Revocations Board yesterday revoked one driving permit and suspended seven others for temporary periods.

Harry D. Young, 1719 Thirty-fifth street northwest, lost his license for speeding 60 miles an hour. Horace Keeler, 121 Seventh street northeast, had his permit suspended for 45 days when found guilty of second offense speed of 44 miles an hour.

Thirty and 15-day suspensions went to Francis T. Lee, 4847 Wisconsin avenue northwest, 42 miles; Ben K. Lynch, 228 N street northwest, 38 miles second offense; John F. Schneider, 1838 Connecticut avenue northwest, 38 miles second offense; Llewellyn W. Smead, 1307 Rittenhouse street northwest, 38 miles; George D. Sterner, 750 Twelfth street southeast, 38 miles, and Thomas C. Tilson, 1917 Lincoln road northeast, 38 miles.

Speaker Denies Plea For Sisson Anti-Red Bill

Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, and Representative Sisson (Democrat), of New York, yesterday made an unsuccessful plea to Speaker Byrns for earlier House consideration of the Sisson bill than May 11.

Fearful that the bill to repeal the anti-red rider may be lost in the legislative jam that precedes adjournment, they called on Byrns to ask that a legislative day be allowed in place of the regular District day, next Monday, which the Speaker canceled this week.

Board Adopts Picture - House Zoning Change

Approval of the Zoning Commission was given yesterday to a change in zoning of a part of the premises at 2324 Wisconsin avenue, which will permit construction of a $100,000 motion-picture theater by Warner Brothers. The change extends the first commercial 60-foot C area designation of the lot.

Extension of the A restricted area in the vicinity of American University also was approved by the commission. Both changes were considered at public hearings Tuesday.

The American University section decision, however, affected only a part of the area outlined in the public proposal considered at the hearing. The proposal was to make residential A restricted the area bounded by Massachusetts avenue, the District line, Dalecarlia Reservoir, the A restricted line lying north of Rockwood Parkway between the reservoir and University avenue and along University avenue.

The change had been opposed by W. C. & A. N. Miller, real estate concern, who had sponsored the restriction on another section close by. The commission decreed that part of the area lying east of Rockwood road shall be A restricted.

Another proposal to change from residential 40-foot A restricted to residential 40 A two squares between Thirty-ninth, V, Forty-second and the District line was dismissed by the commission without prejudice for consideration at a later hearing, after the Commissioners and parks officials have made contemplated changes in the District highway plan.

Fund Drive Joined By Jewish Women

Representatives of the Council of Jewish Women, the Hadassah, and other Jewish women's organizations, met yesterday at the home of Mrs. Aaron Shalowitz, 1520 Kalmia road, to organize a women's division in the $50,000 United Jewish Appeal.

The following were named captains to organize teams of 10 each to canvass for funds to relieve stricken European Jewry:

Mesdames Henry Oxenburg, Henry Olshner, Moe Offenberg, Paul Perlman, Phillip Lustine, Sidney Wiseman, Phillip Diatz, Albert Jacobson, Joseph Atkin, J. Krupsaw, Falk Harmel, Samuel Bugatch, B. V. Lobred, Morris Koenigsberger, William Ilich, Nathan Tabor, Sidney Hechinger, Barney Liebman, Arthur Stebenas, Henry Jaffe, Arthur Newman and Miss Bertha Israel. Mrs. Shalowitz, Mrs. Leonard B. Schloss and Mrs. Pedora Lewis are co-chairmen of the division.

Dr. Warner Heads Rotarians; Club's Only Clerical Member

R. B. Swope Is Elected Vice President; Three Chosen Directors.

The Rev. Dr. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, was elected president of the Washington Rotary Club at its dinner meeting at the Willard Hotel last night. Robert B. Swope was elected vice president, while M. K. Wilberding, E. Carlyn Guy and Roy W. Crampton were chosen as new members of the board of directors.

Dr. Warner, the only clergyman the organization since 1914. He has in the club, has been a member of served on the board of directors and during the past year has been vice president. Born in Virginia, Dr. Warner studied law in the office of his father and practiced here for some time. He served for nine years as secretary to Bishop Satterlee here and then, after graduating from Virginia Theological Seminary, entered the ministry. Appointed immediately to St. Alban's Parish, he has been rector there since 1907.

The speaker of the evening, Dr. Elmer Keyser, of George Washington University, painted a gloomy picture of the future in analyzing the European situation.

"The only example of disarmament today," he said, "is in the United States, where Kentucky officials have recently retired several thousand Kentucky colonels."

Motion pictures illustrating work done at the eye clinic of the Episcopal Hospital in correcting defective vision in children were shown by Dr. William Davis.

Board Calls Red Leanings Charge Fake

Education Group Adopts Resolution Sponsored by Maurer.

Editor of 'Scholastic' to Be Given Hearing; Books Accepted.

Striking out aggressively against red-baiting critics, the Board of Education yesterday branded as "plainly false representation" any and all accusations that it supports the advocacy of indoctrination of communism in public schools.

Action was in the form of a resolution, adopted unanimously, which Robert A. Maurer introduced with the remark a certain member of Congress has charged the board with being communistic.

Maurer, a professor of law at Georgetown University, declined to name the member of Congress to whom he referred. He said, however, that it was neither Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, nor Representative Virginia E. Jenckes, of Indiana. Both of them have made similar charges, both on and off the House floor, in discussing attempts to repeal the celebrated "red rider."

The communism issue was liberally sprinkled over the board's agenda yesterday It agreed to allow Maurice R. Robinson, editor of Scholastic, to appear before the board and show cause why use of the magazine should not be discontinued in the schools. Also, it approved the acceptance of 12 volumes of "Author's Digest," presented as a gift, after Superintendent Frank W. Ballou had stated emphatically that from now on books offered as gifts must undergo strict censorship before acceptance.

Mr. Fish to Give Books.

Terrell Junior High School will receive the latest gift of books which, incidentally, comes from Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., whose husband is foremost among the arch-enemies of communism in the House.

Robinson, whose periodical Scholastic has national circulation in high schools, wrote the board last week requesting to be heard before the board acts upon the recommendation of its magazine committee that Scholastic be taken out of the schools. The board yesterday instructed Secretary Charles B. Degges to inform Robinson he will be notified of the hearing date.

Following is the statement, in full, which was offered by Maurer and adopted:

"1. That this board is and always has been definitely and unequivocally opposed to the advocacy of communism in the public schools of the District of Columbia, of the indoctrination of pupils with communistic or any form of subversive doctrine.

Oath Violation.

"2. That such teaching would violate the oath of office taken by every teacher and officer in the District of Columbia public school system, 'to bear true faith and allegiance to the Constitution of the United States; and,

"3. Any attempt to express the views of this board not in harmony with this statement is plainly false representation."

Discussing the resolution, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, board president, characterized as a "ridiculous lie" the rumor she is the leader of the Communist Party in Washington. Then, with a grin, she quoted the lines from Kipling's poem, "If":

> When you have heard the truth you have spoken,
> Twisted by knaves into a trap for fools.

Henry I. Quinn successfully introduced a resolution expressing gratitude and appreciation to the House sub-committee on District education for the fairness of its recent hearings on the Sisson bill, which would repeal the "Red rider." Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, of Maryland, is chairman.

"5-Year Phrase Dropped.

Supt. Ballou fold the board the phrase "five-year plan," with respect to the proposed school-building program, has been dropped because of the Soviet connotation. It will be known henceforward as the school-building program, 1937-42.

A slight increase in the number of public-school pupils was reported by Dr. Ballou. As of April 9 the total was 92,247, he said, compared to 91,169 for the corresponding date last year.

The 1936-37 school year will begin September 21, he said. Christmas holidays will occupy the week of December 24-31, and Easter vacation will last from March 26 to April 2, inclusive. School will close next year June 23.

May 8, at 8 p. m., tentatively was decided upon as the date of a conference with representatives of citizens' associations on budget estimates for 1938.

The board referred to its legislation committee a proposed bill, drafted by Dr. Ballou, embracing the 1937-42 school-expansion program. If enacted, the measure will result in the elimination of portable schools and undesirable rooms, relieve schoolroom congestion, abolish the double-shift system in high schools and otherwise improve housing and teaching conditions.

High School Class Of '86 Plans Reunion

The fiftieth annual reunion and banquet of the Class of 1886, Washington High School, will be held at the Raleigh Hotel Saturday at 6:30 p. m.

All who attended Washington High School with the Class of 1886, whether graduates or not, are invited to be at the reunion. Any who have not received an announcement should notify the class secretary, G. F. Williams. His address is 901 Evans Building, 1420 New York avenue.

Emotions Hold Crime Solution, Scientist Says

Good Traits Will Win Out if Given a Chance, Dr. White Asserts.

Emotions inherent in man since the beginning of time in many cases hold the key to solution of crime, Dr. William A. White, noted psychiartist, told the Institute of the Jewish Community Center last night.

"Science is now at the doorstep of obtaining secrets that we do not wish to expose," he said.

"It is onl yourselves," he added, "who are afraid to disclose our dreams and harmful thoughts that will not accept this progressive work."

"There are good and bad traits in all," Dr. White, who has been superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital for 30 years, told his audience. "To help bring out the good is the solution to crime—not beatings and hanging."

"The good will win out if given a chance.

"In Moscow, urderers, caught virtually red handed, are examined immediately by psychiatrists to obtain a confession. No third degree methods are permitted."

Dr. White told with regret of children who have not reached legal manhood who are executed every year in the United States.

"These boys are fighting an emotional revolution within themselves," he said, "and should be given another chance."

Dr. White asked the audience to forget a criminal's past. He said nothing could be done so long as one has anger in his own heart when a man is brought up for a crime.

"In the future psychiatrists will be demanded at all trials and a better solution to crime will be obtainable," he said.

Carr and Sheen Are Honored At Georgetown Founders' Day

Diplomats of 30 Nations Attend Colorful Ceremony; Bells of Ancient Church Toll for University's Fathers.

As the ancient bell of the first English Catholic church in America tolled last night in solemn memory of the Jesuit founders of Georgetown University, the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., new president and rector, marked another milestone in Georgetown history by bestowing its highest founders' day honors upon two distinguished representatives of state and church.

A colorful ceremony honoring Assistant Secretary of State Wilbur J. Carr, law alumnus of 1898, and the Right Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, Catholic University theologian and philosopher, took place in the presence of one of the most notable audiences ever to attend a function at the institution.

An academic procession, in which the diplomatic representatives of 30 foreign nations and numerous Catholic dignitaries took a conspicuous part, preceded the formal exercises in Gaston Hall where 1,200 guests waited. Several hundred additional guests arrived later for Dr. O'Leary's first founders' day reception that followed in the historic Carroll parlors.

Curtin Delivers Address.

Led by R. O. T. C. cadets, with Lieut. Col. Raymond O. Barton, U. S. A., as chief marshal, the long procession of honored guests and faculty members marched through the college corridors onto the stage of the academic hall.

When the guests were seated, James D. Curtin, student president of the Philodemic Debating Society, delivered the address of welcome on behalf of the university and student body. Then followed the reading of the Georgetown charter, issued in 1815, by Martin H. Conboy, former United States district attorney of New York. With the reading of the founders' day proclamation by Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., chancellor of the university, the stage was set for the principal event of the evening.

The Most Rev. Edwin V. O'Hara, Bishop of Great Falls, Mont., arose to read the names of the Georgetown founders. At each name, Dr. John G. Bowen, secretary to the president, tolled the chimes of the 300-year-old bell of St. Mary's Church, established in 1634 by the Jesuit pilgrims who accompanied the Lord Baltimore expedition to found the colony of Marylad.

Latin Is Chanted.

Before Dr. O'Leary conferred the academic honors the praises of the founders were chanted in Latin by the Georgetown choir under the direction of Dr. Edward P. Donovan.

In original Latin, also, Dr. O'Leary read the citations of the John Carroll Academy of Diplomacy and Foreign Service honoring Carr and the Camillus Cardinal Mazella Academy of Philosophy honoring Mgr. Sheen. Each was presented with a gold medal and scroll.

"The history of our Foreign Service," read Assistant Secretary Carr's citation, "is so intimately associated with the name of this distinguished officer of the State that he is rightfully called the Master Architect and Builder whose foresight and cheerful vigor has advanced that public career to the honorable eminence it has attained.

"As far back as the Government of Grover Cleveland, through two score years and four, amid our peiples' happiness and woes, he has occupied numerous responsible posts in the Department of State. By his conspicious toil, his intelligent persistence, vision, and his unremitting confidence, has been increased the high dignity and repute of our consular representation, while its efficiency has been steadily promoted and the comity of nations advanced."

Referring to Mgr. Sheen as the "eloquent vindicator of Christian truth broadcast by scientific ingenuity through the encircling ether," the Latin document commended his widely known preaching during the broadcasts of the Catholic Radio Hour. In Latin phraseology, Mgr. Sheen was commended as "defender of the science of religion" and as philosopher of splendid attainments," whose fame as a priest has been recognized "not alone among the clergy and laity of his own faith but with the public in general of all beliefs."

Prominent among the guests was the newly appointed rector of the Catholic University, the Right Rev. Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, and most of the faculty of the university. This was the second consecutive Founders Day honor bestowed upon a member of that university's staff, the philosophical medal having been presented last year to the Right Rev. Mgr. Edward A. Pace, vice rector of Catholic University. The Minister of Austria, Dr. Edgar L. G. Prochnik, received the honors in diplomacy.

Heading the long list of diplomatic representatives were the Italian Ambassador, Signor Augusto Rosso; the Chilean Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, and the Spanish Ambassador, Don Luis Calderon. Also present were the Minister of Austria, Czechoslovakia, the Irish Free State, Portugal, Hungary, El Salvador, Siam, Egypt, Yugoslavia Latvia, the Dominican Republic, Honduras and Nicaragua. In addition there were the counselors, secretaries nad attaches of 27 embassies and legations. Most of them were accompanied by their wives. Secretary nad Mrs. Daniel C. Roper were the only representatives of the Cabinet.

Representatives of various Catholic missions and educational institutions included the Very Rev. Edward J. Walsh, C. M., president of St. John's University, Brooklyn, N. Y.; the Very Rev. Francis B. Keenan, S. J., rector of Woodstock College, Maryland; the Very Rev. James Barron, superior of the Redemptorist House of Studies; the Very Rev. C. J. Barry, Superior of the Oblate Scholasticate; the Very Rev. Leonard Walsh, commissary of the Franciscan Monastery; the Very Rev. Francis McBride, superior of Holy Cross College; the very Rev. Valentine Schaaf, superior of Holy Name College; the Rev. Francis A. Walsh, regent of the Seminary of the Catholic University; the Rev. John J. Robleckl of the Catholic University; the Rev. George Pellegrin, assistant superior of the Foreign Mission Seminary; the Rev. William J. Deacy, sub-prior of the Augustinian College; the Rev. Turibius Gabriel Mulcahy, of the Holy Trinity Missionary Cenacle; the Rev. J. A. Baimes, of the Sulpician Seminary, and the Rev. A. J. Burgraff, of St. Paul's College.

Shakespeareans Take Arms— In Parody—Against Troubles

"To have it out or not? That is the question—
Whether 'tis better for the jaws to suffer
The pangs and torments of an achtooh,
Or to take steel against a host of troubles.
And, by extracting, end them? To pull—to tug!
No more: and by a tug to say we end
The tooth-ache and a thousand natural ills
The jaw is heir to * * * To pull—to tug!
To tug—perchance to break! Ay, there's teh rub,
For in that wrench what agnoies may come
When we have half-dislodged the stubborn foe,
Must give us pause * * * "

The scholarly Shakespeare Society of Washington at its annual banquet last night turned from reverence to fund.

Dean George D. Woods, of American University, delivered an address on parodies, including the one, anonymous, quoted above. The address was liberally sprinkled with illunstrations.

The gray-haired professor of English read several parodies by Carolyn Wells of famous poets, patterened on the famous little rhyme which runs:

"I never saw a purple cow
I never hope to see one:
But I can tell you, anyhow,
I'd rather see than be one."

The first verse of the one on Kipling ran as follows:

"In the old 10-acre pasture
Lookin' eastward toward a tree,
There's a purple cow a-settin'
And I know she thinks of me.
For the wind is in the gum tree
And the hay is in the mow
And the cow bells are a-calling
Come and see a purple cow!"

After the dinner, which was in honor of the birthday of the Bard of Avon, the 60 members were regaled with a parody, in modern song, of "Macbeth."

Each of the famous scenes in the play was done to the tune of such songs as "Three lind Mice"—for the three witches.

In the sleep-walking scene, Lady Macbeth came out on the stage in the Willard carryin ga candle and singing: "I'm Roamin' in the Gloamin'."

E. V. Wilcox, president of the society, officiated.

Food Needed By Children Not on Relief

Funds Appropriation by Congress Essential, Says Street.

Hundreds of children whose parents are not eligible for public aid and never were on relief are suffering from lack of clothing and food, according to reports made by workers and executives in private welfare agencies to Elwood Street, director of public welfare.

These are in addition to the dependents of the 4,180 relief cases cut off public relief at the end of March because of lack of sufficient funds to carry them, Street said yesterday.

The only hope for public relief for those cut off because they are employables is to find jobs for them or for Congress to appropriate additional money, Street said. There is pending before he Budget Bureau a request by the Board of Public Welfare and the Commissioners for $258,000 for relief for the balance of the current fiscal year.

Neither are the private agencies able to care for these persons, Community Chest officials said. A woman who sought aid yesterday was cited as a typical case.

With her husband, a son of 16 and a daughter of 7, just back from the hospital, she calls one room "home." The husband has a WPA job on which he started April 15. His first check for $22.50 will not be available until May 7. The family is behind with the rent and the landlady refuses to wait longer for her money. The Chest agencies are carrying capacity loads of families in similar or worse positions and because of limited budgets cannot take on these additional calls for help.

The American Legion Welfare Department yesterday received four applications; Bureau of Rehabilitation, three; Catholic Charities, two; Family Service Association, one; Jewish Social Service, three; Salvation Army, one; Community Chest, five.

Aid Depot Offered To Future Veterans By 'Gimme Bita Pi'

Members of the Victory Post, No. 4 of the American Legion, in meeting last night to organize the "first fraternity of World War Veterans," Gimme Bita Pi," laid plans for the gala opening on Friday of a "first aid station and supply depot" which the fraternity officers say they are presenting the Veterans of Future Ware.

"Gimme Bita Pi" officers said last night that they were presenting the "first aid station and supply depot" to the Future Veterans to make sure that "the boys received adequate care." The station is to be located in the 1100 block of Fourteenth street northwest. The opening will take place at 8 p. m. Friday.

"We pledge ourselves to see that the Future Veterans get what's coming to them," the "fraternity" officials said. "As former college students, we donate the station in all good faith to our fellow college men."

Nats Waste 12 Safeties, Newsom's 6-Hit Effort as Sox Win, 4-3

Griffs Score Only 1 Run On 9 Blows

Estalella Gets Triple as Pinch Hitter to Start Uprising.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Boston, April 22.—The Nats today performed the feat of outhitting the Red Sox, 12 to 6, and losing the ball game, 4 to 3.

It required extreme ill judgment in the distribution of those dozen to avoid winning the ball game, but the Nats were equal to it and succeeded in wasting the clever pitching of Buck Newsom, who was holding Boston to six hits.

Going into the ninth inning the Nats had only one run to show for nine hits and a base on balls against Fritz Ostermueller, but with two out, they suddenly reformed and threatened to win the ball game.

Senor Roberto Estalella, inserted into the game as a pinch hitter, jarred the 5,000 shivering customers out of their smugness induced by Boston's 4-1 lead by walloping a line drive triple over Rightfielder Almada's head.

Myer Ends Rally.

The uprising took on a serious aspect when Jesse Hill bashed a single to centerfield to score Estalella and its possibilities became downright ominous when Buddy Lewis rapped a triple down the first-base line to score Hill and put the tying run on third base.

But at this point Buddy Myer fouled weakly to Third Baseman Bill Werber and the Nats clinched their defeat.

While the wastrel Nats were leaving men on base in virtually every inning, the Red Sox were making their few blows count against Newsom.

They took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Cramer tripled to right with one out and scored on Manush's fly, and in the fifth inning they converted their third and fourth hits off Newsom into two more runs.

Sox Hurler Scores Two.

The important blow of this inning was struck by Ostermueller himself after Bill Werber had singled to left and Rick Ferrell had walked. The Boston pitcher banged a double into left field and both scored.

Hit No. 5 off Newsom was a single that Manush rapped into right field in the sixth inning. He advanced to second when Newsom walked Foxx and scored on the sixth and last hit yielded by bashful Buck, an exceedingly fluke affair off Werber's bat which dropped lazily behind second base for a single.

The Nats succeeding in wasting Myer's single in the first, Travis' scratchy double and Reynolds' infield single in the second, and Hill's single in the third before they came up with a run in the sixth to cut the Boston lead to 3-1.

In that inning Myer beat out a slow roller to Foxx and, after he had been forced by Powell, Travis and Reynolds drove in a run with a pair of singles.

The Red Sox fortified their lead with another run in their half of the inning, and those two tallies the Nats scored in the ninth served only to keep the folks out in the cold.

Maryland's Team Out of Penn Relays

University of Maryland's sprint medley relay championship team will be unable to defend its title in the Penn relays tomorrow in Philadelphia because Frank Cronin, quarter miler is out with an infected leg.

Cronin entered the infirmary yesterday, leaving the Old Liners without a man capable of filling his fleet shoes.

Only a mile foursome will be entered in a class race by the Terrapins. Selby Frank, Alton Sanford, Conrad Gebelein or Bob Beall and Colleman Headley will make up the Maryland quartet.

Maryland's lacrosse team will meet St. John's, of Annapolis, Saturday at College Park, and the baseball team will meet Georgetown at the Hilltop.

Today Virginia will meet Maryland's baseball team at College Park. Either Vic Willis or George Wood will hurl for the Terrapins. Game time is 4 p. m.

2 Davis Cup Netmen Beaten in Tourney

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 22.—Two Davis cuppers went down today in quarter-final matches of the Mason-Dixon tennis tournament.

Wilmer Allison, Davis Cup captain, couldn't get started and lost to Hal Surface, of Kansas City, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3.

In an intra-team match, Johnny Van Ryn, Davis Cup doubles star, lost to a fellow team member, Don Budge, of Oakland, Calif., 7—5, 4—6, 6—2.

Results of other quarter-final matches were:

Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, defeated Wilmer Hines, of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—2.

Allison's volley, usually his strong point, failed him today. His attacking weapons, deep full-hand drives, were very erratic, while Surface played a game of mixed pace.

Surface kept the Davis Cup captain on the run to the corners, winning the match on excellent returns of Allison's service. Many times he caught Allison with the ball at his feet.

In the third set, Allison rushed to the net, but his volleying was uncertain. He made three errors in the final game.

Budge made a series of magnificent shots in defeating Van Ryn, but his play was unusually uneven at times. Van Ryn led, 4—2, in the first set before Budge opened up to win five of the next six. In the second set, Van Ryn also got an early lead of 4—0 and pushed it to 5—2 before Budge speeded up and broke through the Philadelphian's service.

Gilbert Hall played lackadaisical tennis and made a number of errors to pave the way for Gene Mako's victory. Hall lost the first set, 4—3, and then lost the next three. His opposition was weakened in the second set and Mako went through easily with a back-hand and overhead style.

Tokyo Backed For Olympics In 1940

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, April 22.—Strong support for holding the Olympic games in Tokyo, in 1940 was voiced today by Count Baillet LaTour, president of the International Olympic committee, upon his return from Japan.

The noted Belgian sportsman personally surveyed the field for three weeks and described it as "comparable to any location in Europe or the United States."

He intends to make a favorable report on the application from Japan to hold the games in the Orient for the first time in history.

Whitehill Will Face Lefty Gomez Today

Boston, April 22.—The Nats tonight brought to a close their sad excursion to Boston, where they lost three of four games and entrained for New York, where they open a two-game series with the Yankees tomorrow.

Earl Whitehill, who ran into a storm of Yankee basehits earlier in the week in his first outing of the season, will return to the mound at Yankee Stadium tomorrow. He will be opposed, probably, by Lefty Gomez, who lost a 1-0 game to the Nats at the start of the season.

The Nats will be without the services of Outfielder Johnny Stone and Pitcher Jimmy DeShong during the Yankee series. Stone, affected with a severe cold, was ordered direct to Washington from Boston, and DeShong, who was hospitalized at Philadelphia, after an attack of laryngitis, also entrained for Washington, tonight.

Terry, Leiber Hit Hard As Giants Beat Phils.

New York, April 22 (AP).—Bill Terry cracked out three hits, including a triple, and Hank Leiber hit a home run with two on as the New York Giants defeated the Phillies, 7-2, today behind the eight-hit pitching of Carl Hubbell.

Night Sprite Is Easy Winner At Graw

Jockey Smith Unhurt as Tell It Takes Tumble in Second Race.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 22.—Night Sprite, a 5-year-old gelding, which comes by its name naturally, being by Nocturnal out of Dark Phanton, just galloped along today to win the Hampton Roads, a sprint of 6 furlongs, occupying the featured position on the program. Running the 6 furlongs in 1:12, Night Sprite was being taken in hand by Jockey Cliff Stafford through the stretch and still had an advantage of a length and a half over Billy Bee when the judges were reached. The latter saved second money by a head from Brown Twig.

Eddie Smith, the Washington jockey, had a narrow escape from serious injuries in the second race of the day. Riding Tell It, Smith was sent rolling to the track soon after the break when his mount stumbled and fell. Luckily, Smith bounced clear of the flying hooves. He was rushed to the track hospital, but, aside from a shaking up and a scratched leg, he was in excellent shape. The race was won by Sock Dologer.

One of the best midweek crowds of the meeting, some 10,000, was out to see the sport, under cloudy skies. The daily double stock fell off con-

Pinch Hitter's Homer Defeats Cards, 7 to 6

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, April 22.—Calvin Chapman, utility outfielder, came to bat as a pinch hitter in the eighth inning today and smacked out what was practically an infield home run that provided the Cincinnati Reds with margin for a 7-to-6 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. It was Chapman's fourth hit in five times as a pinch hitter this season.

Outfielder Louis Scoffic, of the Cards, lost Chapman's hit in the sun, and before he recovered the ball, Kiki Cuyler, who had singled, and Chapman had raced across the plate. Lew Riggs, Reds' third baseman, then hit another home run into the bleachers.

The Cardinals twice tied the score and had the tying run on base in the ninth when James Collins popped to Tommy Thevenow for the final out. They knotted the count at 2-all in the third without making a hit and tied it at 4-all in the eighth on singles by Pepper Martin, Medwick and Scoffic.

Earnshaw Blanks Bees For Brooklyn, 5 to 0

Brooklyn, April 22 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers scored their first shutout of the season today, defeating the Boston Bees, 5-0, behind the five-hit pitching of George Earnshaw. The victory also was Earnshaw's first triumph of the season.

U. S. Golfers British Play Favorites

Patty Berg, Mrs. Vare Are Rated Even for Women's Event.

By the United Press.

London, April 2.—American golfers will be favorites to win the British Open championship and the women's title, London bookmakers indicated tonight, on the eve of the arrival of the United States Curtis Cup team.

Gene Sarazen, winner of the British Open in 1932, is expected to be favored at about 7 to 1 when the field for the Open tees off at Hoylake, June 22. Freckle-faced, red-haired Patty Berg probably will share shortest odds of 10 to 1 with Mrs. Glenna Collette Vare, her teammate, for the women's championship in mid-May. This will be played over the Southport and Ainsdale courses.

The women's title is the only one which never has been taken by an American from Britain. But so much has been written in British newspapers about Patty Berg, youngest member of the Curtis Cup team, that the Minneapolis school girl probably will rank right up in the betting with Mrs. Vare, six times American champion.

Curtis Cup Play Important.

Of course their respective performances during the Curtis cup matches against Britain's stellar women players, a week before the women's championship, will have an important bearing upon their quotations. If both do well in Curtis play, they may enter the tourney favored at quotations lower than 10-1.

Many British golfers favor Mrs. L. D. Cheney of Los Angeles, who impressed observers when she last visited England. This member of the Curtis team is expected to be quoted at about 20-1 for the championship.

Although Sarazen is expected to be favored to wrest the British Open title from England's Alf Perry, Horton Smith probably will press Gene for shortest odds. Smith's consistently fine play during the winter tourneys in Florida and California gained plenty of backing.

Tommy Armour, 1931 winner, and MacDonald Smith are expected to be quoted at about 12-1, and Jimmy Thompson around 25-1. Armour's return will be followed closely because the galleryites remember the time as an amateur in Scotland when he described himself as "the world's worst putter." Crossing the Forth bridge one night after playing the Scottish championship, he threw his putters—12 in all—through the coach window into the water below.

Bartell

Flatbush Fans May Arrange a Vegetable Shower.

By Jack Miley.

New York, April 22.—There will be some very tall and giddy doings over in Brooklyn these next few days, and your chronicler intends to take up a strategic position atop the Ebbets Field grandstand with his binoculars and report faithfully on the proceedings.

For the Giants open a three-game series with the Dodgers there tomorrow afternoon, and almost anything is likely to happen—I hope. Because there is absolutely no love lost between these rival baseballers, and if anybody gets lippy the lads are practically certain to start swinging those hickory wagon tongues and bash each other over the skulls.

The Flatbush fans and I are trying to arrange a Dick Bartell day during the series. If Rowdy Richard, who has been ailing with the sniffles, is able to appear we are going to set him up in the vegetable business—one vegetable at a time. We are very fond of the Giant shortstop over in Brooklyn—yoicks! yoicks—and we wish to do something to show Dick the depth of our esteem. A few soggy tomatoes and a head of cabbage or two should be just about right. And if Bartell is truly grateful for all this, he'll do a hook slide right into a field box and spike Old Judge McKeever.

I disagree with all this loose talk about Dick injuring various Brooklyn players in a spirit of malice. Certain character traducers would have you believe that Bartell willfully and viciously slashed Joe Judge, Linus Frey and a couple of other Gowanus guys with those meat cleavers he wears on his kangaroo oxfords. Nothing could be further from the truth. Dick did razor Joe and Linus and a few other fellows, but he didn't do this purposely. It was merely a reflex action.

It seems that when those Brooks try to tag Richard on the base lines they thump him brutally with the ball. They might just as well stand off a few paces and heave it at him, so resoundingly do they clip our misunderstood shortstop. When this happens, the reflex action follows. Dick just can't make his feet behave, he twitches and twists like an impaled frog and somebody usually has a leg in the way. That is the whole story, and it must be true, for Richard told it to me himself.

I don't know why the Dodgers dislike the Giants. Perhaps it is because they are ball players and ball players are not appreciated at Ebbets Field—there've been so few of them there. Whenever a visiting ball player has to appear in Brooklyn he is so ashamed that he writes to his folk's he's been given a short jail sentence for disorderly conduct. The Dodgers themselves explain their internment by wiring their kinsfolk they've

Golf Teams From Six Colleges to Compete in Matches Here

Hoyas Hosts To Tourney May 1-2

Congressional Will Be Scene; Match Play to Prevail.

Golf teams from six colleges representing the Southern division of the Eastern Intercollegiate Association will compete at Congressional Country Club, May 1-2, with Georgetown University as the host.

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Penn State, Princeton and Cornell will send their best golf players to oppose the Hoya stars.

Match play in round-robin fashion will prevail, with three matches to be played Friday, three Saturday morning and three Saturday afternoon.

A number of the golfers who competed in last year's National Intercollegiate Championship at Congressional will be down, including Jack Malloy, Princeton captain, who tied with Chuck Kocsis, of Michigan, and Louis Johnson, of the College of Charleston, S. C., for medal honors.

Georgetown's team will consist of Capt. Kenny Corcoran, Jim Lee, Harvey Johnson, Dick Kruezberg, Lou Ferrari and Newt Free.

Mrs. L. B. Schloss, women's golf chairman at Woodmont Country Club, yesterday announced that Gene Larkin, professional, will hold a "golf class" and give an exhibition of special shots May 7, and every Thursday thereafter. The classes are open only to Woodmont members.

May 18—Qualifying for handicap tournament; 20—Match play begins; June 17—Special tournament for women with handicaps more than 16; June 28—Suburban vs. Woodmont; October 5—Club championship.

Monday has been designated as guest day, and the fourth Friday of each month as "ladies' day."

Abrams Victor In Amateur Ring Bout

George Abrams, Washington Boys Club welterweight, punched his way to a unanimous decision over Bob Mathias, fighting under the colors of the Marine Reserves, in the best of a card of amateur bouts presented by the District National Guard at Turner's Arena last night. A crowd of 500—disappointingly small because the local favorite, Lou Gevinson, did not fight—witnessed the proceedings.

Abrams carried the fight to the angular Mathias from bell to bell, ducking, weaving and punching beautifully with both fists at all times. Bob was a constant threat as he kept his knockout right cocked and shot it numerous times, but failed to land with it decisively.

Steve Mamakos, the Golden Greek from the Washington Boys Club, scored a second-round technical knockout over Jimmy Ortiz, of the National Guard, in a 155-pound bout billed as the feature. Mamakos was Ortiz's superior at every phase of the game and ultimately battered the Mexican so severely that Referee Denny Hughes was forced to call a halt.

126-pound class—George Pickerel (D. C. N. G.) won on technical knockout from Preston Drew (Ter. Y. M. C. A.), 1:50 of third round.

148-pound class—Wes Beahm (G. A. C.) knocked out Cliff Fones (M. B. C.), 30 seconds of first round. Glenn Drake (Ter. Y. M. C. A.) won unanimous decision from Eddie Nolan (M. B. C.). George Abrams (W. B. C.) won unanimous decision from Bob Mathias (Marine Reserves).

Lewis Administers Beating to Singer

By the United Press.

Chicago, April 22.—Light-heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis stepped up into the heavyweight division tonight and thumped out a bruising ten-round decision over Izzy Singer, of New York.

Johns Hopkins Netmen Beat American U., 6-3

Baltimore, Md., April 22.—Johns Hopkins won its third successive tennis victory of the campaign by defeating American University, 6 to 3, at Homewood today.

The Jays clinched the match by capturing five of the six singles. The Washingtonians took two of the three doubles.

Gilman High Squeezes 10-8 Win Over Albans

In a nip and tuck ball game Gilman High, of Baltimore, squeezed out a 10-to-8 triumph over St. Alban's yesterday on the latter's diamond. Miller pitched the entire game for the winners.

To start the lucky seventh scoring, Adams came in on a single by Schoenfeld, and then Marsh doubled to bring in Schoefeld with the tying run.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Boston, April 22.

With a fine disregard for facts, they are still booking Danno O'Mahoney as the wrestling champeen of the world up here in Boston Town. And with an equally fine disregard for the truth of the situation, Mr. O'Mahoney is still being accepted here as the wrestling champeen of de woild.

Incredible to Boston folks was the result of Danno's match with Dick Shikat in New York's Madison Square Garden last February when Shikat put Mr. O'Mahoney down for the required three seconds. It just couldn't happen to their Danno and the fact that it did happen seemingly makes no difference because Danno is still the champion up here. And if he did get licked, why, the guy who did it pulled the dirty double-cross—the double-crosser.

POVICH.

And that, apparently, is what did happen. They say the script called for Shikat to do slightly less than his level best and wrestle O'Mahoney according to the blueprints drawn up by the Bowser-Curley-Dusek crowd which controls O'Mahoney and wrestling generally in the East. But Shikat on that February evening either forgot his lines or chose to ignore 'em and Danno found himself looking at the ceiling and down for keeps.

It was all very much of a shock to the Bowser-Curley-Dusek crowd even in the face of their great distrust of Shikat and his manager, Billy Sandow, whom they felt could not be trusted. They had shown this distrust when they had given Shikat the O'Mahoney match only on the consideration that he first sign away his managerial rights to Joe Alvarez, a Bowser hireling.

Thus they were seeking to protect themselves against the double-cross, an item that is not unknown in wrestling circles. With good reason, they attached great suspicion to any wrestler who worked under the banner of Sandow, who had double-crossed 'em once before. That was about five years ago on the Pacific Coast when they sent their champion of that era, Ed Don George, against Sandow's Strangler Lewis with a very distinct understanding.

On that occasion Sandow's man, Lewis, defied the trust with a swell display of rugged individualism and licked their champion who did not suspect that Lewis was wrestling for keeps until it was too late. And when Lewis wrestled for keeps in those days, Don George or no other of the trust's champeens had any legitimate business in the ring with him.

Anyway, the Bowser-Curley crowd who had not yet taken Dusek into the firm, got even with Lewis and Sandow a short time later when Lewis innocently accepted a match with Henri Deglane, a Canadian in Montreal. It was then that Lewis got the works. Deglane succeeded in biting himself on the wrist, blamed it on Lewis, and a sympathetic Canadian wrestling commission forthwith disqualified Lewis and gave his title to Deglane who had been promised a job with the trust.

So, when the Shikat-O'Mahoney match in New York was being arranged, every precaution was taken that nothing untoward would occur. Shikat was obliged to disavow Sandow as his manager and sign up with the trust and that is what he did. But evidently he had his fingers crossed at the time, because promptly after tossing O'Mahoney into the discards and acquiring his title, he turned a broad back on the trust and reached fond reconciliation with Sandow.

The fact that only 6,000 attended the Shikat-O'Mahoney affair is rather significant, too. Danno always packed the Garden in Boston, even against bum opposition, and if the title were to change hands the great event was to be scheduled in Boston where Danno's share of the gate would compensate him for the loss of his crown. To lose the title and a big gate was too much for the Bowser-Curley-Dusek crowd.

So they took steps. Into the court they marched, flourishing the contract that their man, Alvarez, holds on Shikat's services, and obtained an injunction forbidding Shikat to wrestle for anybody but Alvarez and, indirectly, the trust.

That is the present state of affairs and as a result, the champion and his championship are virtually in cold storage.

Central Wins 40-Run Tilt

That no obstacle is too great to overcome was definitely proven at Central Stadium yesterday when the Central High baseball team rallied from a 13-run deficit to trim Marblehead (Mass.) High by a score of 24 to 16.

So many men made the trip around the bases that it looked like a group of track teams staging a joint practice session. Moran and Askins, of Central, knocked a home run each, as did Messinger, Marblehead rightfielder.

Two-base hits were as plentiful as spectators at a major league opening game. Fones, Fuez, McDonough, Stonaties and Askins knocked doubles for the home team, while Shube and Larkie registered for Marblehead.

Coach Jack Ray sent four pitchers to the mound during the eight-inning travesty, Roselle getting credit for the victory. Chapman and Bennins hurled for the losers.

After a scoreless first inning, the visitors went on a run-scoring rampage in the second. Every man on the team tallied at least one run. Central struck back in its half of the second with 4 runs.

The Massachusetts aggregation added 2 more runs in the third, making the score 15 to 4. But the locals were far from beaten as they gradually whittled down the tremendous lead.

Old Line Teams Sweep Three Contests

University of Maryland teams made a clean sweep of their competition in three sports yesterday afternoon at College Park, the varsity tennis team drubbing Georgetown, 8 to 1; the freshman baseball nine defeating Georgetown Freshmen, 14 to 6, and the yearling track combination squeezing through to a 64-to-53 win over Baltimore Poly.

The baseballers came through with a six-run spree in the sixth inning to open their season with a 14-to-6 win over the Georgetown yearlings. It also was the first engagement for the Hoya cubs.

Effective pinch-pitching by southpaw Linwood James also was a big help to the victors. James relieved "Jack" Armstrong in the second after the latter had yielded four runs, and held the foe to four hits while fanning seven the remainder of the way.

Exhibiting marked superiority in the field events, after being outscored by a heavy margin in the track tests, the freshman track team conquered the Baltimore Poly representatives, 64 to 53. It was the Old Line yearlings' first meet.

The Terp youngsters rolled up 53 points against a lone marker for the visitors in the field events. In the track tests, however, Poly piled up 52 points against 11 for the Old Liners.

Gordon Kluge of Maryland, with 14 points, took individual honors. He won the broad jump and javelin throw and tied for first in the high jump.

Rosslyn Girls Win D. C. Pin Crown

Nose Out Lucky Strike to Take Second Title by Narrow Margin.

In a stirring two-team battle down the home stretch, the Rosslyn girls nosed out Lucky Strike to win their second successive pennant in the Ladies' District League last night. Rosslyn beat out their rivals by one game, having 58 victories against 26 defeats, while Lucky Strike finished with 57 wins and 27 reverses.

Going into their final match with a one-game advantage, Lucky Strike needed but two wins over Bill Woods' team to clinch the pennant, but they were doomed to disappointment. The team standing between them and the championship won the first game by two pins and humbled the leaders in the second by 3 sticks, after being 20 pins behind going into the ninth box when Etty Matthew and Margaret Lynn spared and Billie Butler counted 10 on a spare.

Merhl Groff established a league record in the Commercial League, which finished its season last night at the Convention Hall alleys, chipping the maples for a sensational 193 game, collecting six spares and a double-header strike. He missed a break in his ninth box and got ten in the last. Evening Star clinched the pennant by one game with a one-pin victory in their last effort.

Three new leades resulted in the third night of activity in the Washington City Duckpin Association tournament last night at the Arcadia. R. J. Harvey's 384 set succeeding F. Kral's 371 mark in the class D singles; the Arcadia team taking the lead among class A teams with 1,843, and Convention Hall going to the front in the B team class with 1,720. Harvey's big set was the result of a 166 game in his last effort.

Only 3 Have Ever Cracked 70 On Tough Beaver Dam Course

By Dave Herman.

Roger Peacock, of Congressional, who has a habit of busting par wide open, is owner of the competitive course record for medal play, having scored a 69 in the qualifying round of the 1934 Beaver Dam invitation.

The match-play mark is held by Cliff Spencer, tall club professional, who shot a 68 in an exhibition match last season against Wiffy Cox. But Spencer once scored a 67 in an unofficial round, which happens to be five under par.

Martin F. McCarthy, former club champion, for the last five years one of its outstanding players, is the other fellow who has cracked 70. He shot a 69.

Length and deception are against you when you play Beaver Dam. That's why the golfers have a hard time grinding out their pars and birdies. A golfer who scores an 80 at Beaver Dam considers it a top-pin' good round. Who wouldn't?

John R. Miller, club champion, is looked upon as the number one player. He is playing better than he ever has, if one is to take the word of Professional Spencer. Just the other day Miller shot a 77 at Kenwood to win the District Golf Bowling League medal prize.

It is doubtful if McCarthy, thrice a National Amateur qualifier, will continue to play at Beaver Dam. He hasn't been around, and the dope is that he's going to confine all his golf to Columbia.

Shorn of his club champicnship honors, Eddie Bean is a tough man to beat. They look for him to shoot plenty of sub-par golf this season.

As for the women golfers, 17-year-old Ellen Kincaid, twice club champion, is the oustanding prospect. Miss Kincaid repulsed Mrs. Ora Emge in the finals for the last two years, and Mrs. Emge is a good golfer. Mrs. Florence Godfrey is due for some scoring this season. Yet to reach their peak are Mrs. C. E. Purdy, who is improving fast; Mrs. R. C. Mitchell, Mrs. A. W. Tucker and Mrs. N. J. Waldron.

Woman's golf is very popular at Beaver Dam. There are more than 70 active women golfers.

Baltimore - District Swim Meet Tonight

The third annual Washington-Baltimore intercity swimming meet will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the Ambassador Hotel pool. It is the final indoor competition of the local season.

The meet will be sponsored by the D. C. A. A. U. and is conducted under the personal supervision of A. Earle Weeks, chairman of the D. C. A. A. U. swimming committee, and Henry S. Reich, manager of the Ambassador pool.

Outstanding competitors include Reginald Hodgson, District low-board diving champion; Joe Lyman, former eastern intercollegiate diving titleholder; Ernie Boggs, local backstroke titlist and Bob Jordan, for Washington, and Michael Paskaukas, Bill Meginnis and Holman Kinsley, for Baltimore.

G.W., Terrors Meet In Griffith Stadium

Griffith Stadium will go collegiate for the first time this season today when George Washington's diamonders play a return engagement with Western Maryland at 3 p. m. The Colonials won the first encounter, 3 to 2.

That game was the second in a string which reached five before the Quantico Marines effectually dampened the G-streeters this week.

Bob Woytych, who was very impressive in that first victory over the Terrors, will again be on the mound. The lanky right-hander struck out 14 men in the first encounter.

Wilson Coach on WOL.

Dr. G. Harris White, athletic director of Woodrow Wilson High and once a pitcher for the famous Chicago Hitless Wonders, will be Joe Holman's guest tonight at 8 o'clock over Station WOL.

Miley Urges 'Day' For Dick Bartell

The Giants with the exception of Bartell—who has a strong strain of hoodlum in him, is a Cardinal at heart and really should be in St. Louis—are gentlemen and scholars. From Bill Terry down to the bat boy, they're all gents—and Burgess Whitehead is the scholar. Whitey, who is chockful of book learning he acquired down at the University of North Carolina, wears a Phi Beta Kappa key on his chest as proof of his erudition. He has everybody fooled except Gus Mancuso. Glowering Gus knows that he found the key in a crackerjack box—so what the hell!

Champs Again Defeated by Browns

Tiger Pitchers Helpless as St. Louis Batters Out 12-4 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 22.—The St. Louis Browns fattened their batting averages and won their second game of the season today by drubbing the world champion Detroit Tigers, 12 to 4.

Fewer than 1,000 fans shivered in Sportsmans Park as Mickey Cochrane used four pitchers in a futile effort to stop Rogers Hornsby's men, who on Monday broke into the victory column with a 9-to-6 win over Detroit.

3 District Golfers In Maryland Play

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., April 22.—Three Washingtonians—all from the Beaver Dam Club—participted in the opening tournament of the Maryland State Golf Association at Rodgers Forge today.

In class A, R. M. Brown, Beaver Dam, showed a card of 93—8—85, while a mate, Jack Palmer, had 83—6—77.

H. R. Devilbiss, Beaver Dam, had 91—14—77 for his round among class B players.

Ernie Caldwell, of Hillsndale, State amateur champion, carded a 75 for low gross in class A, while E. G. Barnes, also of Hillendale, had 79—7—72 for low net.

J. D. Hospelhorn, Rodgers Forge, was low gross with 85 in class B, while C. C. Downie, with 88—14, and E. B. Ryder with 88—12, were tied with 74 for low net honors. Both are from Rodgers Forge.

Brevity Picked to Win Kentucky Derby by Poll of 12 Trainers

Vote Is 7 to 5 In Decisive Selection

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—By a 7-to-5 majority, a jury of 12 thoroughbred trainers today picked Joseph E. Widener's Brevity, future book choice, to capture the Kentucky Derby and its purse of more than $40,000, on May 2.

"Derby Dick" Thompson, who has saddled all four of Col. E. R. Bradley's winners, helped make the majority report the most decisive of any in the three years the Associated Press has polled the country's foremost horse trainers.

Each of the five trainers filing a minority report picked a different 3-year-old to finish first. The list comprises Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' The Fighter, the Bomar Stable's Grand Slam, William Woodward's Granville, Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Delphinium and Morton L. Schwartz's Bold Venture.

Earl Sande Names Brevity.

While stringing along with the crowd and selecting Brevity, Thompson left a loophole just in case one of his three candidates should come through unexpectedly, as did Burgoo King and Broker's Tip in 1932 and 1933, respectively. Bradley has named Banister, Bien Joli and Bow To Me, with the first two considered likely to start.

"My horses are good right now," said Thompson. "We have a good chance to win. If we don't, we'll make the rest of them run."

Earl Sande, one of the two jockeys who has won three derbies and now is a trainer, voted unhesitatingly for Brevity. He rates the Widener colt one of the best 3-year-olds he has seen in recent years.

C. H. (Pat) Knebelkamp, owner and trainer of King Saxon; Fred Hopkins, the man who conditioned Equipoise; J. H. (Bud) Stotler, head of Alfred G. Vanderbilt's stable; Capt. P. M. Walker, of the Howe stable, and Pete Coyne, veteran trainer of Brevity, named the favorite as the horse to beat.

"You can't get away from Brevity," declared Stotler, who, himself, has hopes of sending Postage Due to the barrier.

"The only time he has ever been beaten he had an excuse. He appears sound and in good hands."

James Fitzsimmons, who saddled two winners, Gallant Fox and Omaha, prefers Granville, a son of The Fox. Granville soundly whipped W. S. Kilmer's Ned Reigh in his debut at Jamaica yesterday.

Night Sprite Takes Feature at Graw

siderably with a return of only $12.60, being made on the combination of Gay Balko and Deliberate.

The feature race was only a romp. Night Sprite bounded out of the starting gate with a daylight lead. Billy Bee and Brown Twig did the chief chasing and could not better their positions. The disappointment of the race was the showing of Trumpery from the C. V. Whitney barn. He failed to break and Sonny Workman could not make him extend himself at any stage.

Gay Balko, teamed with Bergere, won the first race at the shortest odds of the meeting. The Vanderbilt pair paid a $2.70 mutuel. Gay Balko led Indiana to the wire by four lengths. Mattapony was third. The field of juveniles was at the post for 10 minutes due to the fact that Amhurst insisted on lunging through. When the break came, Amhurst was unprepared and was practically left.

Outclassing his opposition, Deliberate led Vitascope and Son of Troy to the wire in the third race to bring his backers a $10.80 mutuel. Carl Hanford rushed Deliberate to the front in the opening furlong and the remainder of the race was a mere formality.

Conquer, at a $22.80 mutuel, won the fifth race in the excellent time of 1:44 2-5 for the mile and 70-yard route. Stafford, riding his second winner of the day, turned in a masterful job. He rated his charge along while saving ground to the stretch turn, swung him to the outside, took command and drove to the wire. Bird Flower was second and Braving Danger third.

Stafford rode his third winner of the day, bringing Buck Langhorne to the wire a length in advance of the third and a sixteenth route. Miss Purray, the pace-setter for 7 furlongs, was third in the field of seven. Under restraint for 6 furlongs, Buck Langhorne began his winning move on the turn for the stretch. The winner paid $23.20.

W. & L. High Tracksters Swamp Western, 107-17

Washington and Lee High School all but snowed under Western High's trackmen at Clarendon yesterday, winning the meet 107 to 17. W.-L. took all 13 first places, with Dewey accounting for the 880 and the mile; Martin Ball taking the 100 and the 220, and Fred Lehmann winning the shot put and 440. Jimmy Down also took the high and broad jumps.

Garage Nine to Play.

The Washington Garage baseball team will play Oxon Hill Sunday at 3 p. m. on the latter's diamond. All Garage men are requested to report at Twelfth and E streets northwest at 1 p. m.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAY BALKO (entry) $2.70, $2.20, $2.10; INDIANA (entry), $4.30, $2.60; MATTAPONY, $2.40.

GAY BALKO sprinted into a long lead in the opening furlong, saved ground all the way and held sway until the end. INDIANA, holding a forward position from the beginning, rallied nicely in the final drive, but could not threaten the winner. MATTAPONY was steadily ridden for the entire trip and showed a good effort. BERGERE raced in the first flight throughout while losing ground. She was not persevered with during the stretch drive. HAPPY HOST was racing gamely approaching the finish. AMHURST lunged repeatedly while at the post and delayed the start. He was never a factor. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:12. Winner Mrs. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOCK DOLOGER, $9.70, $5.70, $4.20; PETER PUMPKIN, $5.90, $4.20; CURLING, $6.70.

SOCK DOLOGER, away nicely and rated within striking distance of the leaders, went around his company when making his run, closed gamely through the stretch drive and was up in the last 50 yards. PETER PUMPKIN, going in his best form, moved up stoutly leaving the backstretch and finished with good courage. CURLING went forwardly from the beginning and held on willingly in the final drive. CANTERSINE, away slowly, bettered her position readily in the last half mile. CHERRY STONE was rushed hard to take the lead, had good speed for five furlongs, then stopped. BALLY BAY raced stoutly for the first half mile, then tired. OAKHURST was held safe. STOOL PIGEON was done after three furlongs. TELL IT stumbled midway of the backstretch and fell.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 2:46½. Winner, Miss E. Hill's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DELIBERATE, $10.80, $5.00, $4.20; VITASCOPE, $4.90, $4.80; SON OF TROY, $6.70.

DELIBERATE sprinted into a long lead in the first quarter mile, was rated along while saving ground and held VITASCOPE safe when reaching the finish. VITASCOPE bettered the position steadily after being slow to take stride and closed with good courage. SON OF TROY, hustled along all the way, weakened during the closing furlong. NOUVEAU RICHE could not gain a contending position at any stage. AROUSED was under strong handling from the beginning, but failed to rally when the real test came. EXALTATION was never dangerous. UNDULATE went well for the first half mile, then stopped. BOOTS PAL was all the way.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; the Hampton Roads. For 3-year-olds and upward. Allowances. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:23. Off at 4:26½. Winner, H. Neustetter's ch. g. (5), by Nocturnal—Dark Phantom. Trained by H. Neustetter. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:46 3-5, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT SPRITE, $5.70, $4.00, $3.20; BILLY BEE, $6.60, $3.90; BROWN TWIG, $3.70.

NIGHT SPRITE, fastest away, had good speed to draw into a clear lead early, was rated in front throughout and was never seriously threatened to win with something in reserve. BILLY BEE, closest to the leader at all times, made repeated efforts to reach NIGHT SPRITE, but was not good enough. He tired from his efforts and just lasted to hold BROWN TWIG safe. The latter, always well up, raced on the inside all the way and closed well. LEGUME raced evenly and had no excuses. BROKER'S TIP was overmatched. TRUMPERY broke very slowly and could not enter contention at any time.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:57. Off at 4:58. Winner, Mrs. L. Viau's b. c. (3), by Victorian—Note o'Love. Trained by J. P. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:13 3-5, 1:39 2-5, 1:44 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONQUER, $22.80, $9.90, $6.10; BIRD FLOWER, $5.00, $3.40; BRAVING DANGER, $5.30.

CONQUER, rated off the pace for the first six furlongs, took command when reaching the homestretch, opened up a clear lead, but had to be shaken up nearing the finish. BIRD FLOWER, a strong factor early, displaced MICROBE midway of the final turn, moved around and continued strongly until the end. BRAVING DANGER improved his position steadily after getting into full stride and came stoutly in the late stages. DON GUZMAN, full of run while following close to the leaders, flattened out when put to a hard drive in the last five-sixteenths. EUDES was unable to threaten the leaders. SYNOD was never a factor. MICROBE had good speed for seven furlongs, then tired badly. IRKSOME broke very slow.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:27. Off at 5:28½. Winner, K. N. Gilpin's dk. b. or br. g. (4), by Dunlin —Lady Emmeline. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 4-5, 1:14, 1:40 3-5, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUCK LANGHORNE, $23.20, $10.20, $4.60; XANDRA, $5.00, $3.20; MISS PURRAY, $3.70.

BUCK LANGHORNE, showing much improvement and going strongly to hold a contending position, rallied willingly when shaken up, swung to the outside in the last five-sixteenths and, responding to the stimulus, disposed of Xandra, prominent from the beginning, for the closing drive and outfinished MISS PURRAY. Latter had good speed to shake off SANCTITY, saved ground, but weakened in the last three-sixteenths. CACHALOT closed full of run in the last half after coming very wide. THE MAULER, rated within striking distance of the leaders, faltered after making a bold effort entering the homestretch. SANCTITY stopped. HUT had no mishaps.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:01. Off at 6:04. Winner, Mrs. H. S. Herkheimer's ch. s. (5), by Stimulus—Regina. Trained by C. C. Clarke. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49, 1:14 3-5, 1:41 3-5, 1:53 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AHMED, $23.20, $11.90, $5.80; PALASA, $3.80, $2.90; FOGARTY, $4.70.

AHMED had good speed from the start, was rated in front throughout, shook off a challenge from JAMES BOY on the final turn and held PALASA safe in the drive. The latter, within reach of the leaders from the start, moved up on the outside, closed with good speed and was wearing the winner down. FOGARTY, slower than usual in the early running, gradually improved his position and finished stoutly. HOMEWORK raced evenly and had no mishaps. PENCADER, turned in a good effort. JAMES BOY, well up in the early racing, stopped badly. JUST REMEMBER closed a good gap. DEARZIN stopped, as did OKAY WINCHELL.

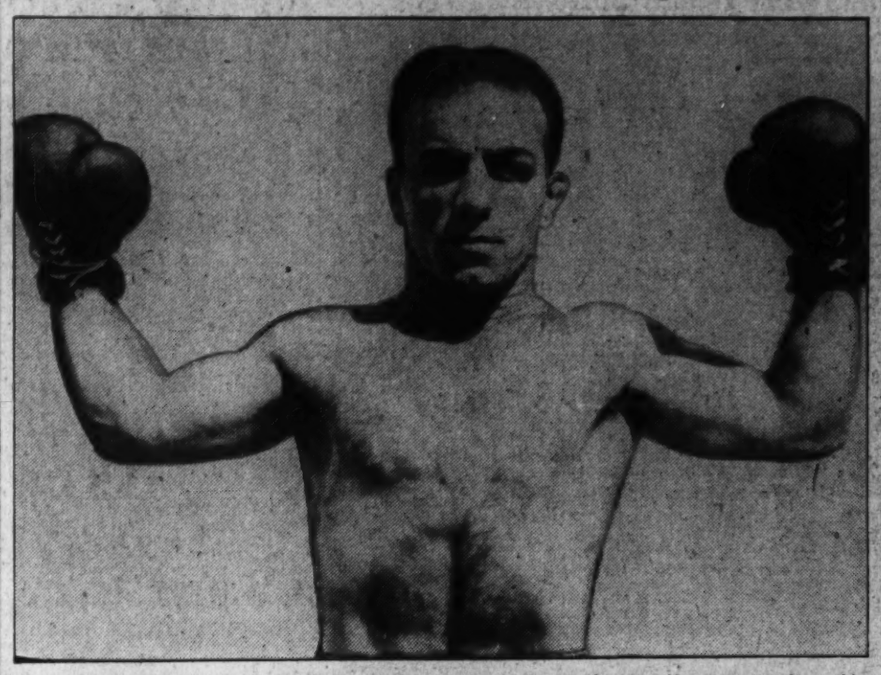
Sarron Bristles With Confidence as Fight Nears



Petey Sarron, better known as the Syrian Sizzler, poses a la Jim Londos—and if you don't believe this boxer's all brawn, look him over well. Sarron will meet Freddy Miller, featherweight champion, in a title bout at Griffith Stadium May 11.

Havre De Grace, April 22.

Dear Al:

Judge J. H. Anderson is the oldest turf enthusiast who comes to the track regularly. The judge, a former newspaper man and racing official, sits in the various press boxes each day and bets every race, generally to show. He is 85 years old. One day last week, the judge called the messenger boy and told him to buy a show ticket on Taunton. When the judge saw the number on the ticket he said, "hey, boy, go down and get me a win ticket on that horse. The number is 1851, the year I was born." And Taunton promptly won for the veteran. Judge Anderson has a famous cane. In the press box here, there is a space between the windows and the writing bench. The scribes frequently drop their paper down the slot. The judge's rubber-tipped walking stick is the persuader used to retrieve the sheets. He admits having played the horses for 60 years—and he will not die broke. The judge says he hasn't played a tip in 25 years. He loves the "chalk" and is satisfied with interest, as he calls it, on his money.

BILL.

First race—Staraway seems to have the edge over these maiden fillies. She has worked well. Swift Fly and White Sweets to take care of the others. There was a tip around on Harry's Dream.

Second race—Silent Don gets in with only 105 pounds and will do a lot of running in this company. Close Call's races in Maryland have been encouraging. Chiliad for the minor award. Sunned comes off a long race and I'm going to pass him up.

Third race—Headin Home may find the shortest way home in this field. Showed me enough to warrant a selection here. Beveau has been rested, but is reported fit. Red Wagon is always dangerous.

Fourth race—Two Bob was a smashing second last out, and with only 105 pounds to carry. I expect him to bring the first Whitney victory of the meeting. Galmica and My Colin for the place and show.

Fifth race—Fez gets a nice shift in the weights from Corum, and I believe the chief money lies between this pair. Fairest Flag is fit and ready and will not be far out of it.

Sixth race—Lone Hand is dropping down, and despite the 115-pound assignment should take care of this brand of horseflesh. Light Brook and Tuleyries Wand for the other cash positions.

Seventh race—Overstimulate was running over horses in the stretch last out. Needs only a good ride. Mount Hood will have Mad Frump to beat for the place. Coventry Queen might awake in the mud.

Best bet—Fez.

Havre de Grace, April 22.—Eddie Smith, the Washington jockey, is a "rubber man" . . . he has a faculty for relaxing himself when falling . . . Today when he went tumbling out of the saddle, he landed like a ball, rolling several times before he stopped . . . Fortunately, there were not any horses near him . . . Smith has been thrown many times, but he retains his courage . . . Today's spill was a particularly bad break for him . . . He has just about convinced the world that he is a good rider . . . and it is hoped that his hurts will not affect his job with Trainer Jones . . . While Smith has been gaining favor, Sonny Workman, also a hometown boy, has been having his troubles . . . The Whitney horses have been failing, and many are trying to blame the ace rider . . . Today he was lightly booed by backers of Trumpery . . . although he had nothing to do with the fact that the horse would not break and then sulked along far back . . . although both Bill and I have criticized his judgment at times, I will say that Workman is one of the "tryingest" riders we have . . . and his honesty cannot be questioned . . . there is nothing in his record down through the years to show him anything but a hard-riding fellow' . . . but hard riders need horses under them . . . Mt. Rainier Meets Wilson Nine Today

Mount Rainier High School, after an opening game setback at the hands of strong George Washington High, will meet Woodrow Wilson High today on the Mount's field at 3:15.

The Mounts will use the same team that opened the season, including George Taylor, catcher; Harold Brown, first base; Kenneth Easton, second; Tillie Scott, shortstop; Steve Miller, third; Leo Baldwin, leftfield; Frank Landlot, centerfield; James Miller, rightfield.

These lads made a very favorable showing in their only encounter that leads their coach to believe it the best team the District Line School has had for the past five years. A capable pitching staff in the persons of Larry Finn, Steve Ager, Tillie Scott, Steve Miller, Edgar Shinn and Earl Miller is causing quite a bit of worry for other teams of Prince Georges County.

Sarron to Train Here for Bout With Miller

Peter Sarron, leading contender for the featherweight crown, will move his training quarters from Alexandria to Washington today to begin intensive preparation for his bout with Champion Freddie Miller, at Griffith Stadium, May 11.

Sarron will work daily at the Humidor Gymnasium, 1121 Fourteenth street, northwest. The gymnasium has been donated by Eddie Gibson, a local sportsman, who agreed to open the training site, which has not been in use for a number of months, when he heard that sponsors of the Sarron Miller bout, held for the benefit of the Police Boys' Club, were having difficulty finding suitable quarters. The gymnasium will be managed by Jimmy Erwin, Sarron's manager.

Sarron will work at 1:30 this afternoon. All training bouts will be open to the general public. Pete will box with Bobby Dean, a Philadelphia southpaw, and Ray Ingram, local lightweight. Later in the week, his training staff will be bolstered by Baby Manuel, a

Detton-Koverly Go Promises Fireworks

Rivalry Between Them Should Produce Good Match Tonight.

By George Considine.

Plenty of fireworks are expected tonight at the weekly Turner Arena wrestling show, when Dangerous Dean Detton, picked my many mat followers to win the world heavyweight championship within three months, squares off with the outstanding rough-houser in the game, Wild George Koverly.

Te Detton-Koverly rivalry is unusual in that it exists both on and off the mat. The boys even indulged in a whirlwind unofficial and unpaid battle last winter in a Baltimore hotel. Adding to the "grudge" angle, Koverly is the only man outside of Yvon Robert to outmaneuver Detton in over a year.

With Detton ambitious to annex the title and an old score to be settled with this particular opponent who has proven very sturdy indeed in his three local appearances, all indications point to quite an enthusiastic tete-a-tete.

It is reported that Toots Mondt, Detton's manager, besides being a mogul in the rassle circuit, frowned upon his charge risking his well-being in a Koverly match. And it is further reported that Detton accepted the match on his own responsibility, whatever that means.

Last time Detton and Koverly worked together locally, the latter gent vented most of his wrath upon Referee Bennah Bortnick. So Bennah backed down this time when offered the assignment. So Cyclone Burns will officiate. So what?

Immediately preceding the alleged feature, Leering Len Hall, the phenagling pharmacist, will strut for 45 minutes or less with Rusty Westcott, former University of Honolulu swimming luminary.

In the preliminaries, limited to 30 minutes, Jack Hader encounters Sailor Billings and Abe Kashey irritates Ditto Goldberg. It is feared that hostilities will start promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

Cost Yields 3 Hits; W.-L. High Wins, 8-0

Ten Hyattsville Batsmen Are Struck Out.

Holding Hyattsville to three scattered hits, Don Cost pitched his Washington and Lee High mates to an impressive 8-to-0 victory yesterday on the Little Generals' diamond. He struck out ten men and allowed only two walks.

After seven and one-half innings of airtight basebeall, Washington and Lee started scoring when Milstead doubled after Wheeler's triple. Advanced to third by Moore's single, Milstead stole home before the side was retired.

It remained for the home team in its half of the eighth to turn the game into a rout. The feature of the six-run orgy was consecutive home runs by Milstead and Moore.

Hoyas to Hold 'G' Banquet Tonight

Affair at Mayflower at 8:30 Expected to Eclipse Preceding Ones.

Georgetown University's ninth annual Varsity G banquet, which, because of its outstanding program is expected to eclipse all preceding ones in attendance, will be held tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the Mayflower Hotel.

John F. Crosby, Assistant Attorney General under Woodrow Wilson and a graduate of Georgetown in 1912, will act as toastmaster and John Saul, president of the Washington Board of Trade, is to present "G" awards to the school's successful athletes.

Among those expected to attend are:

Commissioner Dan I. Sullan, Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen, Representative Charles C. Fisk, Justice Peyton Gordon, Justice Jodah A. Van Orsdel, Representative James P. B. Duffy, Dean George E. Hamilton, Fred Mesmer, Gabriel Murphy, Clark Griffith, Dutch Bergman, the Rev. Edward B. Berry.

The Rev. John E. Grattan, the Rev. John J. Kehoe, the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, Justice Grace C. Adkins, Lieut. Col. Raymond O. Barton, Jack Haverty, Justice Edward Curran, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Charles Doyle, James E. Colflnower, the Rev. David V. McCauley, Dr. William N. Cogan, Thomas A. Cantwell, Dr. Thomas M. Healy, Frank M. Dobson and James Mulligan.

Eastern Blanks Episcopal Nine, 4-0

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., April 22.—Episcopal High School's baseball team dropped a 4-to-0 decision to Eastern High School this afternoon on Hoxton Field although they outhit the visitors, 10 to 6.

Pollard, Episcopal pitcher, shut out the visitors in the first seven innings, allowing only two scratch hits. In the two final innings he weakened and, aided by infield errors, Eastern scored four runs to win the ball game.

Billy Bell, Episcopal shortstop, led both teams at bat, collecting four hits in four times at bat for a perfect day. However, his ragged play in the field nullified his efforts at the plate.

Runs—Lamb (2), Clinton, O'Brien. Errors—W. Bell (4), Gordon, Carter. Two-base hits—Carter, O'Brien. Three-base hit—Clinton. Sacrifices—Hooff, O'Brien. First base on balls—Off Pollard (1), off Pembroke 2; off Carver, 1. Hits—Off Carver, 3 in 1 inning; off Pollard, 6 in 6 1-3 innings; off Pembroke, 5 in 6 innings; off Dechard, 2 in 2 innings. Struck out—By Pollard, 6; by Pembroke, 3, Winning pitcher—Carver. Losing pitcher—Pollard. Umpire—Cobean.

Lee Jackson High School defeated The Washington Post Juniors this afternoon on the former's field by a 9-to-4 score in a seven-inning practice game. Three pitchers were used by the losers in an attempt to stem the tide, but wildness and loose fielding contributed to their downfall.

The St. Mary Celtics will hold an important practice tomorrow afternoon for their game Sunday with the Frederick Pros. All players are requested to report promptly at 5 o'clock.

Sunday's game has been set aside as "Art Lacey Day" by the local team. Lacey has won all three games he has pitched for the Celtics. He is due to report to the Harrisburg, Pa., team next week to play in the New York-Pennsylvania League.

REMARKS .....

NAME OF WINNER .....

NAME OF ENTRANT .....

ADDRESS OF ENTRANT .....

The Object.

To predict as closely as possible the official outcome of the Freddie Miller-Pete Sarron featherweight championship boxing bout to be held at Griffith Stadium May 11.

The Prizes.

First prize—One ticket, railroad transportation from Washington and hotel bill in New York for the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling bout to be held in June.

Second prize—One ticket to the Louis-Schmeling fight.

Third prize—One ticket to the same contest.

The Rules.

File your entry on the above coupon, or similar blank, showing just how you think the bout will end. If you think it will end in a knockout, mark the coupon thus, showing the round in which you believe it will end, the winner and the time of knockout. In case of a knockout, the entrant calling the winner and round will win. If two or more call the winner and round, the one coming nearest to the time of knockout will win. If two or more are tied on time, the contestant scoring the fight nearest to correctly in the rounds preceding the knockout will win.

If the bout goes the distance, the contestant whose total score most nearly approximates the average score struck by the referee and two judges at the Sarron-Miller bout will be declared the winner. In case of a tie, the contestant who has the greatest number of rounds scored correctly will be declared the winner.

All ties that cannot otherwise be broken will be decided on the time of receipt of your entry. All scoring must be done according to the rules and regulations of the District Boxing Commission. The commission rule on scoring reads as follows:

"Scoring shall be by the '3-point' system. The winner of any round is marked 5. The loser of any round is marked from '0.1' to '4.9.' When a round is even, each contestant is scored '5.'"

Employes of The Post and their relatives are not eligible to enter this contest.

Repayments Up 21% On Policy Loans

Minneapolis, April 22.—A jump of 21 per cent in policy loan repayments over last year reflects the increasing rate at which borrowers are paying off the loans on their insurance policies, according to the first-quarter report of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. of Minneapolis.

Complete cleanups by many borrowers of the indebtedness on their policies is shown in the reduction of the company's individual loans to 28,997, the smallest number on the books in five years.

Mrs. Johnson Resigns As Colgate Director

Jersey City, N. J., April 22 (AP).—Mrs. Elinore I. Johnson today resigned as a director of the Colgate-Palmolive Peet Co., $63,000,000 soap-perfumery concern, but feminine representation on the board remained with the election of her daughter, Mrs. Natalie J. Van Vleck.

Mrs. Johnson, whose home is at Orange Park, Fla., withdrew from the company because of illness. She is a daughter of the founder of the old Palmolive Peet Co. The Johnson family voted about 100,000 shares of Colgate-Palmolive Peet stock at the annual shareholders' meeting today.

Steel Activity Checked After Steady Climb

Tin Plate Production Rises to 90 Per Cent, Year's Highest.

New York, April 22.—The recent sharp rise in steel output, which followed the period of flood curtailment a month ago, has been checked, says Iron Age today. Production this week is only fractionally higher and the average for the country is unchanged at 68 per cent of capacity. While a few open-hearth furnaces went into production at the beginning of the week, several were scheduled to go off and the Monday level may scarcely be maintained throughout the six-day period. The weekly summary says:

"Steel production is slightly lower at Chicago, is holding its own at Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit and Birmingham, and has gained slightly in the valleys, at Buffalo and in the South Ohio River and Wheeling districts.

"Finishing mill operations continue to rise, but stocks of raw steel have been built up sufficiently since the floods to accommodate current mills schedules. Tin plate production has risen to 90 per cent of capacity, the highest rate of the year, sheet mills are engaged at 75 per cent and rolling of strip is at a 74 per cent rate. Output of heavier products is well sustained, but mills are reluctant to step up operations beyond a rate which they are certain can be maintained over several weeks.

Structural Orders.

"The week's structural steel lettings of 20,000 tons are almost twice the 10,575 tons reported in the preceding period, and new projects of 28,045 tons compare with 19,735 tons a week ago. Included in the new work is the Marine parkway in Brooklyn, which will take 12,000 tons of shapes, 3,000 tons of piling and 1,000 tons of bars. New bids will soon be asked for on the outer drive development at Chicago, requiring 15,000 tons of structural steel.

"The placing of 2,700 freight cars by the Pacific Fruit Express is the feature of the week's railroad buying. The Seaboard Air Line has ordered 100 phosphate cars. Actual and tentative freight car inquiries now before the trade include at least 10,000 units, with orders likely to be placed soon by the Chesapeake & Ohio, the Nickel Plate, the Missouri Pacific and the Northern Pacific.

"The Ford Motor Co. has distributed orders for 490,000 tons of iron ore, and furnace requirements for the shipping season are invariably being estimated above last year's levels. Lake navigation will be late in opening because of ice, and much coal has been loaded at Lake Erie ports to await shipment."

Gen. Motors Expects New High Record

Saginaw, Mich., April 22 (AP).—Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corporation, said at a luncheon here today it seems likely that the corporation's sales to consumers during the current month will establish a new high record.

"We see now that there is a good likelihood of 2,000,000 cars being produced by General Motors in this country, Canada and overseas in 1936. That is a lot of automobiles," Mr. Sloan said.

Railroad Credit Corp. Payments Total 43%

The Railroad Credit Corporation on April 30 will make its twenty-sixth liquidating distribution to participating carriers, amounting to $735,881, or 1 per cent of the contributed fund. Of this amount $387,158 will be paid in cash and $348,723 will be credited on carriers' indebtedness to the corporation.

This will bring the total amount distributed to 43 per cent of the fund or $31,642,870. Of this total $14,754,895 will have been returned in cash and $16,887,975 in credits.

Chicago to Change Hours for Trading

Chicago, April 22 (AP).—Hours of trading in securities and cotton on the board of trade will be changed Monday, April 27, to conform with the adjustment or similar markets in New York when that city goes on daylight savings time.

Trading in securities and cotton will be from 9 a. m., until 2 p. m. (Eastern standard time), except on Saturdays when the securities market will close at 11 a. m., and the cotton market at noon.

Stocks Move Forward in Moderate Trading as Optimism Rises; Bonds Firm.

New York, April 22.—Stocks, bonds and commodities took a turn for the better and without any increase in business the price level was lifted moderately. Stocks had a turnover of around 1,250,000 shares and leaders rose 1 to 3 points. The recovery appeared to be merely the result of a more optimistic feeling among the trading crowd and was not based on any special bullish development in the news, which remained rather colorless. May wheat climbed 1⅝ cents to 101⅜ cents a bushel.

In stocks the best group was the railroad. Fractions to more than 2 points were common in the leading issues. Santa Fe rose 2 points, Delaware & Hudson, Central, Union Pacific, Great Northern and Northern Pacific were strong. Chrysler and General Motors set a good example for their division, but the response was only moderate.

Silver rose 1 to 2 points in spite of a halt in the price rise for the metal. American Smelting led the movement. Coppers were encouraged by buoyancy in Anaconda and Kennecott. Gold shares were firm. Chemical shares recovered 1 to 2 points but Du Pont again failed to show strength.

Sugar shares were strong, with gains of 1 to 3 points on heavy sales volume. The best of the group—Holly—was the subject of oil discovery tips and reached a new high price. Steel stocks averaged a point or so higher. Improvement of fractions was the rule for utilities, oils, amusements, merchants and mail orders. U. S. Rubber resumed its activity. Food stocks were led by General and Corn Products. Tobaccos, with the exception of Philip Morris, failed to get anywhere.

Markets continued thin for most stocks. A dozen gains of 2 to 3 points or more were made on only a few sales. In the list were Allied Chemical, Amerada, American Can, American Safety Razor, Case, Columbian Carbon, Manville, Midland Steel, Monsanto, Gypsum and Thatcher.

New Taxes.

With the recommendation by the House Ways and Means Committee of the new tax bill on undistributed corporation income, the essential badness of the new system of taxation which it sets up becomes clearer. At the rather brief hearings before the committee not much that was new was brought out in opposition to the bill, but its supporters have talked enough to show beyond any doubt what they really intend to do, namely, soak rich people merely for the sake of soaking them, quite regardless of the effect such tactics will have on the general welfare.

Balancing the budget is a mere subterfuge, for not only is the amount estimated to be raised under the bill based on weak reasoning and heavy guesswork, but no indication is given by the administration that, while it is pouring a few grams into the plate on one side of the balance, it is taking weight from the other side. Heavy and wasteful expenditures, in other words, are to continue, and so long as that takes place, the budget by no conceivable means of taxation can be brought into balance.

New Deal Holiday.

The Democratic majority in the committee gives away the purpose of the bill with the statement that the new tax is aimed to end the practice whereby "surtaxes on individuals are avoided by impounding income in corporate surpluses." If that goes on in private corporations, a means to end it could be found other than by a general undistributed profits tax. So far as the hundreds of large corporations (from which the bulk of the new revenues are to be derived) are concerned, such a practice exists, in the main, only in the imagination. Those corporations are run on the principle of paying out as much in dividends as can prudently be paid, making allowance for expansion, rainy days, and other contingencies. If anything, they have paid out far too much in dividends in past periods of prosperity, and that is why some of them are now in difficulty.

Presumably, to avoid confiscatory taxation earnings that otherwise would be placed in reserves, now will be paid out. The bulk of the money will go to small stockholders, for they are in the majority, and will largely escape all taxation. The rest of it will add to the surtaxes of individuals—provided those individuals do not decide to change their investments. In any event, the new tax will tend to promote a speculative boom in stocks, increase corporate debt and greatly intensify the next depression, which in turn will be hastened by the spending splurge. The Government stands little chance of collecting anywhere near its estimated return at the start, and once another depression gets under way it will not only collect nothing, but its requirements will be enormously increased, for it then will have industry on its hands. Business, in short, is about to be forced to pay for the spectacle of soaking the rich.

God Import Outlook.

Both sterling and francs sagged and the franc went so close to its gold point at 6.58¾ as to suggest some early shipments. The market was not characterized as weak for the reason that there was not enough business on the decline to cause any alarm. At its low level there was no sign of any support from Paris or from the American stabilization fund, but there was a little purchasing for the account of the British fund, either here or in foreign markets. With sterling at 4.93⅝ this afternoon there would have been a small profit in bringing London open market gold here for resale to the Treasury, but since sterling was $4.94 at the time the London gold price was fixed, there was no profit to be had today through such a transaction. Gold shipments from England to this market made recently are for Indian account. Under shipping arrangements now in effect gold moving from India may be sold either in the United States or in England, wherever the price is better.

French Franc Drops To Near Export Point

New York, April 22 (AP).—A drop of .00⅛ of a cent in the French franc to 6.58½ cents or within striking distance of the level at which gold would again flow from Paris to New York today brought sharp debate in foreign exchange circles over the outlook for the French currency.

The decline was attributed in banking quarters to the approach of the French elections on Sunday and the possibility that devaluation of the franc might follow the vote. International banking circles said the weakness in the price of spot francs was probably also in some measure the result of a reported breakdown in the negotiations for a Dutch banking credit to the French treasury.

Western Power Merger.

Bismarck, N. Dak., April 22 (AP).—Merger of the Montana-Dakota Utilities Co. of Minneapolis and the Montana-Dakota Power Co. was completed today, members of the State board of railroad commissioners said, with granting of permission to the former company to issue shares of preferred stock.

Newspaper Advertising Gains 10.1% in March

New York, April 22 (AP).—Newspaper advertising in March was 10.1 per cent above February, according to the index of Printers' Ink.

For March the index stood at 83.1, compared with 75.5 for the preceding month and 77.0 in March a year ago. The indicated gain over March, 1935, in terms of the index was 7.9 per cent.

Kelvinator Payrolls 74.3% Above Year Ago

New York, April 22 (AP).—G. W. Mason, president of Kelvinator Corporation, stated today factory payrolls for the six months ended March 31 rose 22.3 per cent over the six months ended March 31, 1935.

The refrigerator company's factory payrolls in March showed a gain of 74.3 per cent over the like month last year.

Power Output Lower.

New York, April 22 (AP).—The Associated Press index of electric power production declined for the week ended April 18 to 104.9 from 106.7 the previous week, which was equal to the highest point ever recorded by the index.

Business Pace Gathers Speed, Watson Finds

Items of Improvement Are Cited by I. B. M. President.

Nw York, April 22.—In a national survey of business conditions prepared by International Business Machine Corporation, an accelerated rate of business improvement since the beginning of March is noted, it was declared today by Thomas J. Watson, president of the company. Forces now at work should result in further substantial increases in business activity during the summer and autumn of 1936, he said.

"Business throughout the United States recorded further improvement in the first three months of this year as compared with a year ago, despite adverse weather conditions," he added. "In late March and early April business began to go forward more rapidly and it is now further ahead of last year than the average for the first quarter indicates.

Circulation Faster.

"Analysis of the volume of checks drawn against bank accounts shows an increase of 18.1 per cent over the first three months of 1935. Farm cash income from marketing, excluding benefit payments, showed a gain of 20.5 per cent in the first two months of the current year. Factory employment in February was 2.3 per cent greater than a year ago and pay rolls were up 4.6 per cent. In the first three months of this year, automobile production increased 2.4 per cent, steel ingot production 9.9 per cent and pig iron production 21.6 per cent over the 1935 period.

"In the transportation field, freight carloadings in the first quarter were up 5.4 per cent over a year ago. Hotels were operating at 66 per cent of capacity in February as compared with 62 per cent of capacity last year. Construction contracts for the first two months of 1936 showed a gain of 98.3 per cent over the same period of last year.

"Our progress out of the depression is marked by the improvement in corporate earnings. A group of 1,003 industrial corporations reported net earnings of $1,596,100,000 for 1935, as compared with $1,084,013,000 in 1934 and $791,433,000 in 1932. The 1935 earnings were 38.9 per cent greater than 1934 and almost ten times as great as those of 1932, the survey declares."

Wheat Advances 2 Cents a Bushel

Chicago, April 22 (AP).—In the face of brisk profit-taking sales, wheat soared 2 cents a bushel today and wound up with substantial net gains. Big takings of Canadian wheat for overseas, 2,000,000 bushels today, together with authoritative trade suggestions that Canadian shipments for the remainder of the season would reach record magnitude, went far to lift values.

Wheat closed firm, ⅜ to 1½ cents above yesterday's finish, May $1.01¼@1¾, July 92⅝@92½, corn, ½ to 1⅝ up, May 64½@64⅝, oats ½ to ⅝ up, and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to 12 cents gain.

Franklin Dividend To Be Paid Soon

In announcing yesterday that the Franklin Liquidating Trust soon would pay a dividend on Franklin National Bank assets, S. M. Thrift, executive secretary of the trust, warned creditors and depositors that to receive payment it will be necessary to present a certificate of participation. Those not holding such a certificate may obtain one at the trust office, 945 Pennsylvania avenue, Room 22.

Further announcement will be made as to where and at what time the dividend payment will be made. The trustees are W. F. Kelly, Lindsay P. Rawley and Henry J. Sierzer.

District Bank Resources Are $336,243,000

Nearly a Third of Assets Reported Is Held in Cash.

Aggregate resources of the insured commercial banks in the District of Columbia stood at $336,243,000 on December 31, 1935, according to an abstract of their condition released yesterday by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Assets in this amount represented an increase of 11.9 per cent over the figure shown on December 31, 1934.

Of the assets reported at the end of 1935, $104,734,000 were being held in cash, as cash items in process of collection or as balances with other banks. Twenty-six million seven hundred and twelve thousand dollars was shown to be invested in securities fully guaranteed by the United States Government and 067,496,000 in United States obligations.

Holding of other bonds, stocks, and securities by the commercial institutions of the District of Columbia advanced from $27,391,000 to $27,820,000 in the interim between December 31, 1934, and the same date in 1935. In the same period loans and discounts rose from $84,365,000 to $86,825,000.

Total deposits were $293,695,000, an increase of 14.3 per cent during the year.

On December 31, 1935, demand deposits were $168,162,000 and time deposits $104,518,000.

Nationwide, total assets of insured commercial banks increased by 10 per cent in the 12 months and were $51,000,000,000 on December 31, 1935. The 14,121 insured banks in the country for which figures were tabulated hold 98 per cent of the total commercial bank assets.

Tennis Group Elects.

The Smithsonian Tennis Association met yesterday and elected the following officers for the coming season:

President, Dr. C. G. Abbot; vice president, N. W. Dorsey; treasurer, Thomas F. Clark.

Fire-Fighting Exhibit.

The whole colorful story of fire fighting in America from Colonial days to the present is presented in an exhibit that will be on display for the next three months at the Arts and Industries Building of the National Museum. It starts with the days of "bucket brigades" and carries on through the time of hand-pumped fire engines, or "tubs," and the steam fire engines, which are shown both in models and full-sized engines. The exhibit also contains old prints illustrating the life of the fireman. It was arranged with the aid of the Insurance Company of North America, chartered in 1792, and is under the direction of Carl W. Mitman, head curator of arts and industries, and Frank A. Taylor, curator of the division of engineering.

On the Air Today

After many years of broadcasting Rudy Vallee and the Cities Service hour stand at the top of the radio program list, at least insofar as the thousands of women are concerned who voted in the yearly poll of the Women's National Radio Committee.

The results of the voting were announced yesterday with the broadcast industry's leaders at the luncheon at which the awards were made.

Winners were announced in only four of the five classifications of programs set up by the committee. The fifth—tagged "Serious Music"—was nicely rebuffed by the committee with the cold observation that no program now on the air measured up to the standard of excellence set by the group. It should be noted in this regard that concerts such as the New York Philharmonic Symphony, Boston Symphony and others principally given for auditorium audiences were eliminated in the voting.

The "Vallee Varieties," oddly enough, won the award for the best "Non-Musical Program." I don't know what that makes of Vallee's band! The Cities Service hour, with orchestra, Jessica Dragonette and the Revellers, won the "Light Music" award. The "American Town Meeting of the Air" was acclaimed the best "Educational Program" and Columbia's "Wilderness Road" the best "Children's Program."

Runners-up: "Light Music."—Fred Waring and Pennsylvanians; "Educational"—"American School of the Air;" "Children's"—"American School of the Air" and "Singing Lady;" "Non-musical"—Jack Benny, Fred Allen and Burns and Allen.

The drama received secondary approval from the voters, an honorable mention award going to the winter series by Leslie Howard. Under the heading of "Serials," four programs received honorable mention: "One Man's Family," "Today's Children," "Vic and Sade" and "Forever Young."

Commentators Rate Badly.

Commenting on the awards, the committee reported that news commentators (as distinguished from news reports) made a surprisingly poor showing. In this division, in proportion to the votes cast, Gabriel Heatter led with Edwin C. Hill, second, and Boake Carter, third.

"Swing" music received general condemnation. It was described as "a passing fancy, since it seems to satisfy neither the dancers nor those who like to sing to radio music."

In the field of serious music, General Motors Concerts received the greatest number of votes with the Ford Sunday Evening Hour, second. However, the report says "it was brought out by the awards committee that the standard of the General Motors program this year was considerably below that of last year, and it would not be consistent with the objectives of the committee to single out for high honors a program which had slipped backward."

So—if you were one who cast a vote for the "Serious Music" award, you can just pretend you had good intentions but your standards were not geared high enough.

Tonight is "Spelling Match" night at WMAL (8:35) with The Post's teams this week made up of experts again. Two matched teams, selected by E. C. Helm, president of the city's spelling club, will tangle over multi-syllable words most of us could not even pronounce. Believe me, these "professional" matches are worth listening to. On the teams tonight: For the District—Ora E. Haines, Mrs. Dorothy Tanty, Mrs. Eva Linville, Miss Amy Tutman, Miss Edna Heffner, R. C. Althouse, Miss Sarah Waterman and Mrs. Sybil Helmuth.

Culbertson on Bridge

Whenever my opponents arrive at a difficult-to-bid slam contract, fulfill it, and then pseudo-politely turn to me and say: "Thank you, professor! We never could have reached that one without your excellent convention!" I don't know whether to feel a certain pride or burst with rage. It is a little too much to have one's own brain child used against one!

Naturally enough I have had to grin and bear it for a number of years. There is no way that I know of to bar my opponents from using the 4-5 no trump convention or the asking bids—for that matter, the whole system. I wish there were! Here is a hand played against me last week; the asking bids, used against me, were too darned accurate!

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 club	Pass	2 hearts	Pass
2 no trp	Pass	3 clubs	Pass
3 no trp	Pass	4 diam*	Pass
4 spades†	Pass	6 clubs‡

*North's four diamond bid was well considered to obtain vital information about the hand's only weakness.

‡North now has all the information he needs to contract for six and avoid seven. He knows that South does not hold the diamond ace, but that he does hold the king. (South could not have the other form of second round control, a singleton, because in that case he would not have bid no trump previously.) The slam is bid in clubs for two different reasons: first, the heart suit may require ruffing out, and second (even more important), North wants the opening lead to be made up to, not through, South's king of diamonds.

Obviously there was nothing my partner and I could do but take our ace of diamonds (otherwise we would have lost it) and concede the rest of the tricks.

I murmured something about a royalty due me as the inventor of their bids, but they didn't seem to hear me.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

The Queerialto.

New York, April 22.

Wonder how the blind mendicants first find their way to Broadway? . . . A friend probably takes them the first time, or perhaps a hired companion . . . But how does a blind man form friendships, and how does he go about hiring a helper? . . . It must take a lot of courage on the part of the sightless to brave Broadway and its jostling, swirling crowds . . . The dogs that they use to create a path for them are brave looking little codgers, mostly bulldogs . . . Ears pricked forward, these dogs march slowly and with great dignity ahead of their blind masters . . . These dogs are a study in concentration . . . Nothing seems to distract their attention from the business at hand . . . I saw one wade right through a street brawl, and the two slugging taxi drivers halted while the dog and the blind man entered the battle zone . . . The minute they had passed, the cabbies started slugging again . . . I've seen cats scoot by these pilot dogs, but outside of a ruffing of the neck muscles, the dogs ignore even their traditional enemies . . . They are on post and and they stick to it . . . The only time I've ever seen one of them run was late at night, when he was pulling the legless blind man home on his flat, wheeled seat down Eighth avenue.

HOOVER.

* * * *

The tap-tap-tap of the canes of the blind are a tiny, whispered plea in the whirlpool of Broadway thunder . . . Every one else screeches for attention . . . The newspaper hawkers, the barkers who stand in front of the theaters, the sightseeing busmen . . . It is a canyon of clamor, for the Queerialto does not subscribe to the belief that the world will beat a path to your door, even though it is hidden away in the forest, if you make the best mousetraps in the world . . . No indeedy . . . If the Stemmers made the best mousetraps in the world, they'd surround them with barkers and shills and electric lights—and they'd engage Mickey Mouse to make personal appearances . . . And anyway, a mousetrap would be of little practical use on Broadway . . . A rat trap would have greater value.

* * * *

Repetition, endless and staccato repetition, is the slogan of the street . . . The electric signs go on and off, spelling out the same names, but spelling them over and over again . . . Florenz Ziegfeld would have enjoyed the huge cluster of lights devoted to his name . . . Ironically enough, Ziegfeld, four years after his death, is bigger now on Broadway than ever before, with a spectacular picture, a show and a coast-to-coast radio program named after him . . . The mediums that helped ruin him, motion pictures and radio, by forcing him into salary competition, now are making a nice income from his fame . . . But it hasn't been a one-sided deal . . . The movies and radio have resurrected Ziegfeld and made him the biggest name on the biggest Main street in the world . . . He would have appreciated that . . . Most men try to outwit Death by phrasing clever codicils in wills . . . Ziegfeld had no need of a will, because he died broke . . . Col. H. H. Rogers needed a will because he left $17,000,000 . . . Ziegfeld gets the better of it, for I read in the papers that State and Federal taxes will eat up Rogers' millions completely.

* * * *

The What-Ever-Became-Of Department should investigate the whereabouts of the S. S. Normandie . . . Herbert Hoover . . . Andy Cohen . . . Each of these was launched with vast publicity, but when the fanfare of bugles died down, they collapsed, too . . . "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round," rage of the country, died out suddenly, too, but now is in the throes of a comeback . . . The pianist at Leone's played it Sunday night, and everybody in the restaurant started singing it lustily . . . Significantly, it is one of the most popular songs in Benny Fields' revertoire.

* * * *

Astrologers have pestered this desk with solutions of the Nancy Titterton case, all during Inspector Kear's investigation . . . One Indian mystic wrote at great length to prove that when the criminal was caught, his initials would be L. S. or S. L. . . . As a matter of record, they are J. F. . . . As it turned out, all of us, including Richard Barthelmess were wrong . . . He suspected the same one you and you and I suspected.

Never realized how expert John Dunleavy, Broadway Sam, and those other theater ticket brokers were, although I've seen them handling tickets for years . . . They count a huge stack of them by simply ruffling their thumbs over the edges . . . Last night, some of us on the committee for the Dan Healy anniversary party, went to work allocating the 1,707 tickets . . . At 2:30 a. m., after hours of work, we couldn't account for 41 tickets in the mezzanine section . . . We ransacked the envelopes, we added and re-added, multiplied and subtracted . . . If you see them walking down the street, please let us know.

Mrs. Roosevelt Frees Pigeons In Peace Drive

Homing Birds Will Scatter Messages Over U. S.; Students Parade.

Launching a two-year "emergency" campaign for peace, Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday released several thousand homing pigeons from the Monument Grounds to all sections of the Nation, and at the same time college undergraduates and high school students throughout the United States left their classrooms and swarmed their campuses in the third annual demonstration against war, sponsored by the American Students' Union.

Although no accurate count of demonstrators was available last night, Joseph Lash, national secretary of the union, estimated at least 500,000 students participated. The demonstrations were, for the most part, orderly, the Associated Press reported, and college authorities gave their sanctions in many cases.

The only display of anti-war spirit in Washington took place at Howard University, where six uniformed R. O. T. C. students led a peace day strike parade. Not more than 200 undergraduates took part.

Sing Old Spiritual.

Singing to the tune of an old Negro spiritual, "I Ain't Gonna Study War No More," and bearing blaring red and blue banners, the marchers tramped to the campus bowl in front of the Chemistry Building, where they were addressed by Representative Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, Spanish War veteran and one of the 58 Senators and House members to vote against war in 1917.

"When American millionaires or corporations invest money in foreign lands," declared Representative Lundeen, "let them go and defend their own dirty money over there."

The marchers carried placards bearing such slogans as "Down With Hitler!" and "Down With Mussolini" Sometimes they cheered loudly as they sang.

Georgetown and Catholic universities and the University of Maryland professed they did not know the day had been designated for protest against war. At George Washington University it was said the institution's gesture toward peace was made April 6, when Representative Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, and others spoke.

One student was reported injured at Appleton, Wis., when police, swinging nightsticks, tried to prevent Lawrence College undergraduates from parading through the city.

Free-for-All at Kansas.

At Temple University a flying wedge of young men, charging under a barrage of ripe tomatoes, overturned the speaker's stand. At the University of Kansas a free-for-all fight broke out after a tear gas bomb was set off in the midst of 300 students who were listening to a student speaker. When the dean of men arrived the fighting stopped.

Prominent speakers of the day included Mrs. Roosevelt and John W. Studebaker, commissioner of education, both of whom talked at the pigeon ceremony. And, in a radio address, Francis B. Saye, Assistant Secretary of State, expressed the hope that "countless desires and aspirations for peace may find a homing place in the hearts of millions of Americans."

Largest demonstration was in New York City, where 10,000 college men and women and 300 pupils from three large high schools attended mass meetings.

Satirizing war on the campus of Union College, in Schenectady, N. Y., the "Veterans of Future Wars," marched into the chapel building bearing rifles. Half the student enrollment attended the meeting.

Flood Inspection Bids.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 22.—The bid of William J. Morley and George F. Sansbury to make an inspection of buildings in the flood area of Cumberland has been accepted by the city council. The bid was $2,000. John I. Vandegrift offered to supply the services of an architect, construction engineer and contractor for $3,000. An inspection will be made of the 1,076 buildings in the district.

Senate May Get Budget Today

supply bill absorbs an anticipated surplus of more than $2,500,000.

It also abolishes an anticipated deficit of $2,095,000, created by the House slash of $3,000,000 from the Federal contribution. The Senate bill balances the local budget for the next fiscal year without resort to new or increased taxes.

Institution Condemned.

The National Training School for Girls, which was visited by Senators King and Copeland, members of the sub-committee, was given an extra $100,000 for new construction and repairs and additional personnel. The two Senators strongly condemned the condition of the penal institution following their inspection.

The sub-committee discarded most of the amendments suggested by the District Commissioners in the interest of better traffic control, but the Senate District Committee will consider some of the proposals and may report them as legislative measures before adjournment. Among the discarded amendments was a limitation of taxicabs to 2,000. Senator Thomas said he was opposed to such a move.

Besides the parking meter proposal, the sub-committee adopted an amendment giving the Commissioners full authority to force property owners to remove snow, sleet and ice from sidewalks.

The other sub-committee riders to be offered from the floor provide:

That the District may charge those able to pay for services at the Children's Tuberculosis Hospital at Glenn Dale.

That the Board of Education may spend money for educational consultants, as Dr. W. W. Charters for character education, and for travel. (This has been added to past District acts, but must be repeated.)

Senator Carey (Republican), of Wyoming, announced he would offer a sixth rider to exempt religious, charitable, scientific, literary and educational institutions, where no profit accrues to stockholders, from the provisions of the District unemployment insurance act. The exemption also would apply to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Two new school construction items were added to the bill by the Senate sub-committee. They are: $165,000 for an addition to the Alice Deal Junior High School and $83,000 for a stadium and athletic field at the Woodrow Wilson Senior High School.

Other new items include:

Construction of a pier at fish wharf and market, $20,000.

Three passenger cars for executive officers, $6,300; ambulance for Board of Public Welfare, $1,660; two other passenger cars, $1,160; two station wagons, $1,500.

For aid of National Library for the Blind, $5,000.

Erection of 500,000-gallon-capacity water tank to replace 130,000-gallon tank at Stanton School, $35,000.

The Senate sub-committee retained the three new construction items inserted by the House. They are $1,000,000 to start building a new Police Court building, $353,000 for addition to Eastern High School, and $250,000 for starting replacement of Chain Bridge. The authorized cost of the latter was raised by the Senate group from $350,000 to $450,000.

Rider Stricken Out.

The House restrictive rider which would prevent any District employe earning $2,400 a year or more was stricken from the bill by the Thomas sub-committee, because of complaints from doctors, lawyers, and teachers employed by the municipal government.

As was expected from the beginning of hearings, the Senators restored the Federal contribution to $5,700,000, the amount recommended by the Budget Bureau and approved by President Roosevelt, from the $2,700,000 voted by the House.

The appropriation for unemployment relief was restored to the Budget Bureau figure of $1,656,200, and the clause reducing salaries throughout the administrative agency was deleted.

Funds for continuation of the character education experiment in the public schools were restored after the Senate sub-committee had satisfied itself there were no grounds for the charges of certain House members that the innovation is pro-communistic.

Dr. David E. Buckingham, District veterinarian, whose post was to expire June 30, persuaded the committee to provide funds for its continuance. The part-time salary is $2,160.

Health department restorations amount to $23,800, while additions to the public welfare appropriations voted by the House amount to $361,400. This latter figure includes the following restorations:

Fifty thousand dollars for medical charities at Chidren's, Emergency and Casualty hospitals; $20,500 for the adult Tuberculosis Hospital, $10,200 for Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium and $5,040 for Gallinger Hospital, including restoration of $1,000 cut from the salary of Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent.

No Extra Funds.

No extra funds were provided for the continuation of the Upshur Street Adult Tuberculosis Hospital after the new hospital is opened at Glenn Dale, Md., in January, 1937.

Other restorations made by the Senate sub-committee were:

Building inspection, $9,500; plumbing inspection, $6,300; smoke regulation, $7,000; tax collector's office, $2,000; corporation counsel, $4,600; Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, $500 for purchase of samples.

Coroner's office, $420; Public Utilities Commission, $6,000; surveyor's office, $6,740 (also deleted rider restricting expenditures to estimated receipts); Department of Vehicles and Traffic, $5,040; Recorder of Deeds, $7,200; contingent and miscellaneous, $17,747; public library, $22,000.

Streets, to pave Runnymeade place northwest, Broad Branch road to Nevada avenue, and Nevada avenue from Runnymeade place to Western avenue, $8,400.

Sewers, $36,542; refuse collection, $25,000; playgrounds, $10,000; electrical department, $7,200; public schools, including new construction added, $526,848; police department, including provision for 50 new privates, $116,660.

Juvenile Court, $5,440; Police Court, $3,720; Court of Appeals, $6,300; Public Welfare, $361,400; Militia, $5,480.

Virginia U. Elects 16 to Sigma Xi

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., April 22.—The election of 13 graduate research students, 2 alumni and 1 faculty member to membership in the University of Virginia Chapter of Sigma Xi, national scientific society, is announced by Dr. Joseph K. Roberts, chapter secretary.

Alumni initiates are William S. Calcott, director of the DuPont Co.'s Jackson laboratory at Wilmington, Del., and Dr. James S. McLester, professor of medicine at the University of Alabama. Dr. William W. Waddell, jr., of the University of Virginia medical department, was elected from the faculty.

Parking Meter Plan for D. C. Will Be Urged

Thomas to Offer Rider to Supply Bill Today for Their Purchase.

Oklahoma City and Dallas, Tex., are two of the foremost experimenters with the park-o-meter system which Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, today will propose for Washington in a rider to be offered to the District supply bill.

Letters from officials in these two cities and from other cities in Texas and Florida were inserted in the record of a special session of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations devoted to local traffic problems.

"Dallas purchased 1,000 park-o-meters at $30 each, which paid for themselves in three months with 80 per cent of the revenue therefrom," wrote C. W. Windham.

$500 Daily Revenue.

"Additional 500 at $35 recently installed upon insistence of merchants and motorists. Total revenue, $500 daily."

O. M. Mosier, city manager of Oklahoma City, reported that the meters have been accepted favorably by police, merchants and the motoring public.

"It is my opinion that it has been much easier to control the downtown traffic problem since park-o-meters were installed," said F. G. Burke, city auditor of Oklahoma City, "as I have observed very little double parking since the installation, and I am sure that much of the cruising in trying to find parking space has been eliminated."

The Mayor of El Paso, where 500 meters were installed, said there was public opposition at first, but it has now subsided.

Urges Few at Start.

Installation of only a few meters at the beginning, until the public gets accustomed to them, was advised by the city manager of Miami, Fla. The reaction from motorists and business men there was favorable, he said.

The meters help indirectly in reducing accidents, according to the mayor of St. Petersburg, Fla., by minimizing the amount of cruising in search of parking places.

Senator Thomas, in proposing the meters for Washington, said that numerous devices similar to the park-o-meter are ready to come on the market.

The meter, he explained, may be set for 15, 30 or 45 minutes by the motorist after inserting a nickle. A disk appears and remains up until the period expires, after which it disappears, and the car, if not removed, is easily discernible to police as parking overtime.

Judge to Hear Claims For Reward in Capture

Fredericksburg, Va., April 22 (AP). Judge Frederick W. Coleman announced today that he would sit in Spotsylvania Circuit Court on June 1 to hear claims to the $700 reward pending in the "well slaying" of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Coleman last year. John Shell and Joe Jackson, Negroes, were executed for the crime in February.

Senate Group Ridicules D. C. 'Red' Bugaboo

Members of the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations poked much fun at the bugaboo of communism in Washington public schools during hearings on the supply bill, transcripts released yesterday reveal.

Dr. W. W. Charters, special consultant in the character education experiment and chief target of the House members who labelled him a Communist, was questioned by the Senators in this fashion:

Dr. Charters, in outlining his experience, spoke of work at the University of Pittsburgh.

"Did you have any protest from that notorious 'red,' Mr. Mellon, about what you were doing in Pittsburgh?" asked Senator Copeland.

After Dr. Charters had not only denied being a Communist, but insisted that he never had been to Moscow as charged in the House, Senator Glass interposed:

"What does that make the Congressional Record?"

"You know, doctor," said Copeland, "I am really surprised to hear that you have not been to Moscow. I have been reading some of these things. I thought you had spent considerable time there, and had become thoroughly indoctrinated with the Sovietistic thought; but you have not been to Russia?"

As a contrast with the more than 275 pages of House hearings on communism, the Senate sub-committee spent but little time on the subject.

As a consequence, Senator Thomas suggested that Sullivan merely insert his statement in the record. He did and retired. In the House hearings, Sullivan occupied more of the sub-committee's time than all the other civic spokesmen combined.

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, who also was a star witness at the House investigation, did not appear before the Senate sub-committee as he was acting as marshal of the Army Day parade at the time. Mrs. Pauline Auerhamer, of the Public School Association, appeared in his stead. She also placed a statement in the record without reading it.

U. S. Investigating Diplomat's Auction

By the Associated Press.

While an auctioneer's flag still fluttered at the Iranian Legation yesterday, the Treasury Department began an investigation of the importation by T. H. Ghods, until recently charge d'affaires, of the rugs and art treasures being sold.

Ghods, who arrived only four months ago, placed his effects, including 153 art objects and 144,000 square feet of hand-loomed Persian rugs and carpets, in the auctioneer's hands when he was recalled by the Shah.

While Ghods was understood to have utilized his diplomatic privileges in bringing the articles in duty free, only a portion of them were reported to have been used in furnishing the legation.

The Treasury investigation is understood to be aimed at determining whether duty should beassessed against any or all of the articles.

Bank to Pay $100,000

Frederick, Md., April 22.—In an order signed by the Frederick County Circuit Court, E. F. Sterling, State bank commissioner and receiver of the defunct Central Trust Co. of Maryland, is authorized to transfer an additional sum of $100,000 to the Peoples Liquidating Co. to be distributed to stockholders of the closed bank. The sum raises to $285,000 the amount turned over to the liquidating company by the receiver since the bank closed in September, 1931.

Bishop Hughes Predicts Early MethodistUnity

Believes Three Churches May Accept Plan to Merge by 1939.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 22.—Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of Washington, senior effective Methodist Episcopal bishop, declared today three Methodist Churches may combine by 1939.

"It looks very hopeful, indeed, that our present plan for unity between the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Methodist Protestant Church, will go through," he said.

The bishop is one of 37 Methodist Episcopal prelates from all over the world attending their semiannual meeting.

In discussing automobile accidents Bishop Hughes said he believes an increase is due to repeal of prohibition, but added he does not believe there is a "very powerful sentiment" for re-enactment of the antiliquor law.

Mrs. J. R. Chitembar, wife of the native Indian Bishop of Jubbulpore area and president of the W. C. T. U. in India, said India "would like a prohibition law and we are working toward that goal."

Her husband said Christianity is gaining ground among the depressed classes of Indians, claiming 70,000,000 are "very friendly."

First formal sessions of the week's conference began tonight. The bishops will prepare the episcopal address of recommendations on problems affecting Methodists for submission to the general conference next month in Columbus.
